Now is the season of the May party, dear to the heart of every American child-boy and girl. Since the first of the month the toot of the bugle and the martial beating of the drum have been heard all over the land, . They herald the procession of happy laughing youngsters, gaily bedecked in bright colors, who act as escorts to the proud little girl selected to fill the glorious role of Queen of the May. The above photograph, taken in New York, represents a typical May party as seen in the larger cities.

And now all is not harmony in the National Art Theater organization, Joseph Jefferson appears in the role of an objector to the proposed scheme; he has reasons and good ones too, that he ably sustained at last Sunday night's gathering at the Garrick. That popular theater was crowded with members of the profession and its numerous friends who came to hear both sides discussed, and right well was that large gather-ing repaid, for wit and eloquence were the order of the evening, and very hap-pily was each speaker greeted. That the project will yet be a great institu-tion in this city, and that the public will recognize it, is a foregone conclu-sion, for its object is based on noble plans and ideas, that should appeal to artists and public alike.
