BUDGET OF NEWS FROM BOISE CITY

Body of Infant Found in the River By Two Boys Who Were Fishing.

MINER BLOWN INTO THE AIR.

S. N. Wells Terribly Hurt—Boy Desperado Adds Burglary to His Other Crimes—Carpenters' Strike.

Special Correspondence.
BOISE, Ida., June 28.—Monday afternoon the body of what appeared to be a fully matured infant was found lodged near the bank of the Boise river, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. The body had evidently been cast into the waters some distance above the place of discovery, and as it drifted down the stream, found lodging in the willows at the place above mentioned. It was wrapped in an old piece of calico and deposited in a small fruit basket. The body was badly decomposed when found and there is nothing in evidence to lead to its identity. The discovery was made by the two small sons of Mrs. Stewart as they were fishing on the river.

MINER BADLY HURT.

S. N. Wells of Emmett has just been brought to this city in quite a mangled condition. He was blown into the air by 72 giant caps and three sticks of black powder while engaged in mining at the little town of Placerville, about 25 miles out from Boise. There is not to be found a square inch upon his chest, arms and face that is not cut and lacerated and mangled by the force of the explosion.

He is now receiving treatment at the St. Alphonsus hospital, and his attendants think he stands a good show to recover, though he will doubtless lose the sight of one if not both eyes.

BOY DESPERADO.

Twelve-year-old Leon Saunders, the young horse desperado who some few months ago stole money from his father's safe and then a horse from a neighbor, and with another boy of like age attempted to leave the country, and who has been often found turning in false fire alarms, has now distinguished himself as a daring burglar. In the absence from home of Dr. McBurney and wife, young Saunders forced his way into their home through the bathroom window, and by means of an axe secured from a neighbor upstairs, gained entrance to the doctor's desk, to the dresser drawers and other places where he supposed valuables to be deposited, and secured therefrom a breast pin with amethyst setting and two gold rings, one with setting of considerable value. His search for money proved futile.

The lad surrendered to the police all the articles taken. He confessed that he was holding the articles until he could find money to enable him to leave town. Just that will be done with the boy has not yet been decided.

FIRED FROM UNION.

The union carpenters of this city, who have been on strike for over two weeks for an eight-hour day and an increase of wages, have been disaffected by the Master Builders' association at a meeting held Monday evening.

Non-union men are arriving in sufficient numbers to guarantee the contractors full forces on all their works before long. The old scale of $3.50 for a nine-hour day will be maintained; however, it was indicated at the meeting of the Master Builders that later on an eight-hour day would be given the non-union men, as the Master Builders' association is constituting a day for all the other trades.

TIMBER EXHIBIT.

The board of control of the Irrigation Congress has arranged with C. R. Shaw of the C. R. Shaw Lumber company, this city, to collect the exhibit of timber resources of the state of Idaho for the Irrigation Congress to be held in Boise, Sept. 1 to 10.

It is proposed to have every mill in the Gem State represented in the exhibit, which will include samples of every kind of timber grown within the confines of the state.

EXPERT REPORTS ON NAMPA SUGAR BEETS.

NAMPA, June 27.—Geo. A. Smith of the Sugar company's office in Fall Lake, who has been in the beet sugar business for many years, visited the Nampa and Payette beet fields this week and makes this report: "I personally observed and walked through 15 different patches of beets, containing from 15 to 100 acres each, aggregating in all something over 300 acres, and it is a very conservative estimate that these beets will average 10 tons per acre; from what data I can get from the agricultural men both at this point and Payette, we place the average very low when we say they will harvest 10 tons per acre. What the next few months may bring, we cannot say; but the beets are so large and so healthy, covering the ground entirely to a great many instances, that it is not probable the tonnage will be decreased very materially.

There is one very noticeable feature in the beet crop in the Boise valley, that is that the beets have been planted in good, well selected soil that is adapted to the beet culture, and this statement, I understand, will apply to practically the entire acreage planted in the Western Idaho Sugar company. The beets are a very beautiful dark green color, with curly leaves, which is indicative of strong, healthy plants. A person first viewing the fields of beets from a distance would almost think they were large alfalfa fields, the leaves being so large that you cannot distinguish which direction the rows run. I am safe in saying that there are a number of patches containing from 20 to 25 tons per acre.

"Another feature of this locality, which is going to be of great advantage to the beet industry, is the long season for harvesting. Statistics show that there has been no frost in this locality since the 15th of August, and while during July and August there may be some quite hot weather, the nights are cool; therefore, the crop would not be retarded or injured in any way.

"From present conditions, and after making a thorough view of the various fields, I expect that the Western Idaho Sugar company is going to make the greatest showing for the first season, that has been made in any beet locality either in Utah or Idaho, the crop is along so far that it would seem almost impossible to be misled on this question. "In the Boise valley there are 104,000 acres of land under cultivation, that will be irrigated under the great canal that is now being constructed by the government, and in this territory are some of the most beautiful soils that lay out of doors.

"The factory is going up very rapidly, all the large machinery already having been placed, and it will be ready in ample time to commence operations as soon as the earliest beets are ready for harvest."

Tuesday morning E. P. Portlock, who has been working for Mr. Hasbrouck, was found dead in bed, at the O. W. Randall place, the body being found by Mrs. Randall. An autopsy was held, and the jury came to the conclusion that the man came to his death from natural causes.

There is indication that work on three more large brick structures will be started very shortly. Attorney Frank Estabrook is planning to build on his property now occupied by Prescott & Brandt real estate firm, which rumor states will be occupied by a wholesale liquor firm. A. Hinkley, the proprietor of the Nampa Hotel, is also making preparations to build a three-story brick hotel on his present front street property. Also Snell & Everett have under advisement the building of a fine structure on their 11 street corner, known as the Hotel of Orleans, spent several days in town the past week and completed arrangements with Contractor A. Philpot for the erection of a 50x100 foot business house on his lot next to Calkin's hotel.

HORSE THIEVES CAUGHT IN TOWN OF SPENCER.

YESTERDAY a number of people who have just returned from southern Montana spent the day in Butte, and they bring with them an interesting story in connection with the capture of a bunch of alleged horse-thieves at Spencer, Ida., which is the first station of importance on the Oregon Short Line route after leaving the Idaho-Montana line. The names of the men arrested were not stated, says the Anaconda Standard.

For some time past it has been known that certain residents of Idaho have been capturing horses of the excellent range afforded by the lava bed section of Idaho—sometimes referred to as "the desert"—and running them across the country into the Yellowstone National Park, where the thieves would hide from the soldiers for a few weeks in the region about the Jackson Hole country, and when the opportunity arose, after the hue and cry caused by the disappearance of the animals had died away, they would alter their brand and drive the stolen property across the country and enter Canada along practically the same route which Chief Joseph attempted during the strenuous days of the Indian troubles in 1878.

PAINTING THE TOWN.

For the past few years the Idaho authorities have been on the alert in the hope of catching the thieves in the act of making a raid on the ranges, and it appears that on either Saturday or Sunday they were successful. On that day a bunch of fellows appeared at Spencer, which, by the way, is somewhat of a sheep town, and the home of the Woods Livestock company. They had with them about 60 head of horses which they turned loose in the foothills south of town, and while two of the men held the animals so they would not stray, the other two made their presence felt in town and had a good time. Toward evening a number of men appeared in town, driving on the train. They did not have much to say, but they were very observant and asked a great many questions apparently of little interest to the town.

EASY CAPTURE.

When no one was looking or expecting developments they got the drop on the other two strangers and made them throw up their hands. The boys had some booze on board and they were too surprised to realize just what was happening. The capture of the two men on herd was accomplished equally as easy, and more than 60 head of horses were recovered without the least resistance from the men who had the animals in charge. On the late train the alleged thieves were taken south, but the officers kept their business so well to themselves that it is impossible for the residents of the people now in Butte to learn just where the horses were stolen, which county the capturing posse represented or who were the men arrested.

TOO MUCH OF IT.

For the past few years, it is stated, the horse stealing industry has been a prosperous one in the Idaho desert, and many a good animal has been taken from the ranches, run through the Yellowstone park and afterwards taken to the Northwest territory, where a good figure has been received for it. The capture of this apparently organized gang will probably result in sensational developments within the next few weeks.

A disgraceful free-for-all street fight developed on north Cleveland avenue near the Office saloon Sunday evening, that originated primarily in two old cronies, whose names are withheld for the present, falling out after having "set them up" to each other condignly the whole day. The two chief principals fought and tussled for over two hours, friends taking sides and others idly looking on. Attempts were made to find the police, but they could not be located by phone, and as yet the principals had no teeth knocked in and another had his scalp cut. That no one was killed is accounted for only by their drunken condition. Later six of the participants were arrested and pleaded guilty. They were sentenced to serve 30 days in jail.

WEATHER CONDITIONS THROUGHOUT IDAHO.

THE report for the climatological service of the U. S. weather bureau for the state of Idaho gives a summary for the week ending June 25 as follows:

The week opened with unusually low temperature prevailing throughout the state. A wave of somewhat warmer weather passed over the western counties on the 24th, reaching the eastern counties on the 25th, but even on these dates the temperature did not rise to normal. This warmer period was followed by cooler weather, which continued till about the 27th, after which it again became warmer. Through the daily mean did not yet reach normal. The average daily deficiency in temperature was between 5 degrees and 6 degrees. Conditions were generally favorable for a rapid fall of temperature at night, and on several mornings frost was observed, even in some of the most sheltered valleys. Over most of the state the sky remained clear throughout practically the entire week, several days having been almost cloudless, and the southwestern counties received no rain. Precipitation in northern and eastern counties was confined to a few light local showers, the total for the week having been considerably below normal. Fresh to brisk winds from the southwest, west northwest combined with a low relative humidity to render evaporation rapid. This, together with the deficiency in temperature and precipitation mentioned, resulted in a considerable falling off in the flow of streams.

SENATOR HEYBURN FAVORS GOODING

In a Statement in Washington He Comes Out for His Re-Nomination.

GOOD POLITICAL INTERVIEW.

Gives His Views on Current Topics That are Agitating Some of Voters in Idaho.

Special Correspondence.
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.—Senator Heyburn appears to have recovered his health and is resuming the consideration in the senate of matters of interest to the state and nation with his usual energy. The national pure food bill, which he introduced and succeeded in passing through the senate after confronting the most stubborn resistance on the part of various influences, passed this house today with numerous amendments, some of which would have a tendency to weaken the law. The senator will move to non-concur when the bill is returned to the senate, and have the bill sent to conference with a view of having the material provisions which have been eliminated by the house restored.

WANTS GOODING.

In speaking of the political situation in Idaho, the senator said: "I am in favor of re-nominating Gov. Gooding. I contended in the constitutional convention for a four-year term for governor, and believe that any man occupying that position should be given at least four years in which to carry out and prove the policy and method of his administration, and unless he has during his first term committed errors which cannot be disregarded he should be re-nominated. I have a very high regard for the other gentlemen who have been mentioned as possible candidates, both personally and politically and they have the qualifications necessary to fill the position of governor, but the same might be said of a number of Republicans in Idaho, and as time rolls on we will have occasion to consider the claims of these men, but as we can select but one at a time their claims should be deferred."

NOMINATION OF CANDIDATES.

"It appears, senator, that a determined effort will be made on the part of the elements of the party in the state to inject into the convention the name of the question of a nomination of a candidate for United States senate at the state convention," was a question asked him.

"Yes, but this question has been raised and met heretofore in Idaho, notably in the convention of 1898, when it was voted down. I took a firm stand against such a procedure by the convention at that time, and on all other occasions when it has been discussed. It must be obvious to those who will give the matter any serious consideration that unless the primaries are held under conditions which would enable only Republicans to vote, and at which a full vote would be cast, and until the county conventions are held under legal provisions, the state convention, on their proceedings, the state convention would represent nothing more than political laxity in the primaries or county conventions. It is also obvious that the ordinary county electing delegates to the county convention are incompetent, and the delegates selected do not represent in a full degree the sentiment of the party as to the political action to be taken by the convention. While the legislature may take some time to determine its date, and the matter of electing a senator, conventions generally do their entire work in a day or two days at the most, and with the trading and confabulating for nominees for the state and district offices, and the determining of party matters, it would have but little time for considering the important duty of selecting a candidate for the United States senate.

"Then again, legislatures are convened by laws in the performance of their duty for the election of which adequate punishment is provided, but what law could be made for the punishment of a member of a political convention for the sale or trade of his vote on a question of this kind? Conventions are not responsible bodies under the law and have no recognized responsibility as part of the machinery of the government."

ELECTION OF SENATORS.

"The responsible vote of the people at a legal election with the full knowledge that the members of the legislature to be elected will elect a senator comes much nearer an election of a senator by a vote of the people than the selection of a senator by a political convention not composed of members elected at all in pursuance of any law, but selected in an entirely informal manner, responsible to no one under any law."

WOULD MEAN DEADLOCK.

"If the people of the United States really want to change the method of electing a senator as it is provided in the Constitution, let it be done in a legal way and not by a political convention, if the party is to express a preference for the guidance or assistance of the legislature then let a primary law be passed that shall result in the deliberate casting of the vote at the primary under a strict guarantee as to the integrity of the election, and also a law governing the convention which shall insure deliberation and individual legal responsibility on the part of the members of the convention. It would result in a more advanced stage of civilization, possibly equalizing the duration the sessions of the legislature, and resulting as frequently in deadlocks.

"I am strongly opposed to the convention attempting to carry out the important functions of the legislature as proposed in by the Constitution of our country and do not believe that the Republicans of Idaho can be induced to authorize it to do so."

COMING TO IDAHO.

"Do you expect to return to Idaho after the adjournment of Congress?"
"After a few days further rest to regain my strength, which is still somewhat below par, I shall return directly to Idaho, and remain there during the summer and fall, visiting different parts of the state and participating in the campaign this fall. My energies should be devoted to the success of the Republican party in Idaho, and I hope to be able to give a full measure of my time to that purpose."
