

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

VOL. VI.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH TERRITORY, THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 7, 1872.

ESTABLISHED 1861.

NO. 217.

BY TELEGRAPH.
SPECIAL TO THE "EVENING NEWS," FOR
DESENTER AND SALT LAKE CITY, FIRE TELEGRAPH LINE.

Last Night's Dispatches.

EASTERN.

WASHINGTON, 6.—Col. Hughes, the Republican candidate for Governor of Virginia, Representative State, had an interview with President Grant, and afterward called on the Post Master General and other heads of departments; their business was of a political nature, involving appointments to office.

NEW YORK, 6.—An effort is making to procure a public reception of English Arch, the head of the English delegation, who is expected in this country this month, to see for himself if services are wanted, and if so to provide for their transportation home.

Senator Morton has addressed notes to his associates on the committee on privileges and elections, appointing a full meeting on that committee in this city on the first of October for the consideration of the proposed amendments to the federal constitution, which shall effect a change in the mode of election of the President and Vice President, it is intended to give the session a committee in New York, a public character, and several constitutional lawyers and writers on the subject will be invited to address the committee.

WASHINGTON, D.C., 6.—The Navy department, to-day, received a dispatch from the commanding officer of the "Shenandoah," Cadiz, Spain. He says that Cadiz is in the possession of the Government forces. The insurgents surrendered without fighting, and the about his condition in that port. The department does not credit the telegraphic statement of the 4th, that he had ordered the Spanish insurgents to "surrender de Madrid" abstain from hostilities, and that the vessel remained at anchor under the guns of the "Shenandoah."

LOWELL, Mass., 6.—There was a meeting of anti-slavery men at the Anti-Slavery Convention, Cambridge, presented the report of the committee on resolutions, which had been adopted, and recommended a strong ten-point platform. It condemns Governor Washburn, the decision of Judge Howe, while Attorney-General, of the eight-hour law. The right hand of fellowship is extended to the parties to which were the North and South of long years ago.

The most popular sport in England at present is horse racing. Latterly the taste for the running horse has been undergoing a revival in this country. In the east, for the past two or three years, the most popular has been the trotter, especially on the track. Within a few years trotters have been introduced into England to some extent; but the running race so entirely fill the public eye that the importance of the trotter has been overlooked.

NEW YORK, 6.—There was a meeting of anti-slavery men at the Anti-Slavery Convention, Cambridge, presented the report of the committee on resolutions, which had been adopted, and recommended a strong ten-point platform. It condemns Governor Washburn, the decision of Judge Howe, while Attorney-General, of the eight-hour law. The right hand of fellowship is extended to the parties to which were the North and South of long years ago.

Pamphlet copies of Gen. Butler's increase of salary grab, are in circulation.

NEW YORK, 6.—The reunion of army and navy opens with a prospect of being a great success. Sixty thousand of heroes of the Gulf are present.

Large number of capitalists of this city have purchased a tunnel site located at the base of the Emma hill, Utah, and have organized a mining company, with a capital of $500,000, for the purpose of opening up silver mines in the base of the hill.

NEW ORLEANS.—The reports from Grant parishes are of the most conflicting character. Those who represent the Kellogg movement have perfect control of Colfax, and have torn up all the commissions of the opposition. But the military leaders ordered there, should be held in suspense. Affairs are now quiet; however, great excitement exists. Six companies of cavalry left to-day for Colfax, and it is believed that presence will cause a cessation of all troubles. Gen. McDowell is still here.

NEW YORK, 6.—John G. Dale, agent of the New York Mining Co., has dispatched a dispatch from Liverpool, stating that Captain Phillips and the other officers of the City of Washington have been dismissed from the company's service for failing to render account of the remaining lead on the last voyage of that ill-fated vessel.

MURKIN, the murderer, was so overcome by fear during his hearing before the court that he had committed to imprisonment for life, that he fairly danced with joy and expressed his willingness to spend the rest of his life in expiation of his crime.

A watch, for a week before his execution, will be placed over Parker, commencing on Friday p.m., unless a stay of proceedings is obtained to be executed on the 15th inst. He has managed, by some means, to have liquor conveyed to him, and while under its influence he made an attack upon a warden.

WESTERN.

SAN FRANCISCO, 6.—The Julia Mining company has levied a 75 cents assessment.

The tax-payers have not succeeded in finding a candidate for mayor. A. C. Hall, a man of no personal wealth, was elected, de-clined.

Coi Jack Hayes is seriously ill in Oakland.

Action involving the liability of a telegraph company in transmitting messages, came up in the county court this morning, on an appeal from the justice's court. On Saturday, the 4th day of August, 1872, S. D. Jones delivered an important message to the office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., in the city, addressed to S. L. Lane, Corcoran, Alaska. Jones says that the message was not sent. The company admits that the message was not sent, but claim that the line had been cut off at Norwich and the other in Willimantic. The defendant's attorney argued that the party did not contemplate punishment for wilful neglect of duty. Judge Stanley rendered a decision in favor of the plaintiff. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich and the other in Willimantic. After learning of her brother's death, the Norwich party went to Meridian, procured a coffin, &c., at an expense of $100, and had the body shipped to Meridian. The sister who resides in Willimantic, and who had been to no expense in the matter, desired to have the body buried in Willimantic, and on its arrival made arrangements with the Meridian by the sending of a telegram to the Corcoran office. The latter city thus describes the painful scene: "It appears that one of the sisters died in Norwich