THE AUSTRIAN ARCHDUKE.

He is Now Boated Homeward Passing Through This Way.

Reason Why the Royal Visitor is Traveling Incognito in the United States.

It was reported that Archduke Franz Ferdinand d'Este, heir presumptive to the Austrian throne, had given Salt Lake the nobby and that he treated San Francisco similarly. He came to see the United States, and all he beheld of the great West, as we were told, was a small section of the Yellowstone National park. But this proved to be a mistake.

The archduke was due in Salt Lake on the 11th of the present month, as announced in the NEWS some days previous to that date, but the attractiveness of British Columbia and the Columbian Fair delayed him. Then he was to come here early this week, but he has reappeared to make up for his time for visiting that he could not make the trip earlier.

The archduke is traveling incognito in this country. He has not come as an official personage, though he is the present heir, but does his actual to privately examine for his predecessor's mind in the great Republic. As it may be it is quite apparent from his imperial chief, Emperor Francis Joseph. The royal visitor is forbidden from traveling in the United States as the Austrian ambassador, but manoeuvres to his personality as Count Ferdinand. This is done so that no previous note should not be deemed an official visit. It is suspected that the American emperor reported him in some that way in order to be even with the United States for its non-intercourse with President Juarez, of Mexico, in favor of the execution of the emperor's unfortunate brother, the Emperor Maximilian, in 1867.

The archduke and his suite are making a tour of the world, the object of which is stated to be for purposes of culture his and enlightenment as well as for royal pleasure. Count Leo Wurmbrand-Stuppach, a member of one of Austria's most distinguished families, has charge of the party, which left Trieste last December, in the Austrian man-of-war Kaiserin Elizabeth. Passing through the Suez canal they visited the several countries of the orient, the archduke representing the royal representative of his imperial and royal uncle, the Emperor Francis Joseph.

From Yokohama the voyage across the Pacific was made on the fast steamship Empress of China, and the landing at Victoria, B.C., was effected on September 5th inst. The father of Count Ferdinand, as he is styled by the present, is the Archduke Carl Ludwig, the patron saint of the Austrian division at the World's Fair.

The party arrived in this city at 8 a.m. over the Union Pacific. It is composed of sixteen persons. Prior to 9 o'clock until they were driven about the city in carriages, visiting the various points of interest. After the ride they were transferred from the Union Pacific to the Rio Grande Western depot to their private car Nanconte, where a NEWS representative found them comfortably seated at 2 o'clock at tables laden with fruits, wines, flowers and the choicest edibles of the season. He was not permitted, however, to speak to his royal highness, as the interpreter who answered the call at the entrance prevented him going further than just inside the door. He prominently paced the narrow aisle and said nominally in response to questions that he didn't know when the party left Europe or when they would return. Finally he admitted that they had been aboard from home about a year.

When asked as to whether the party had not been on a hunting expedition in the Yellowstone Park, he stated: "We do some shooting but not much matter is it to us public it is killing game or large game or don't kill any game at all. We journey and we pass and that is all we care for.

"Have you visited the World's Fair yet?" inquired the newspaper man.

"No people say so, I don't."

"Where do you expect to leave Salt Lake and how do you like it?"

"I guess we get away tonight. It is all I have to say."

The reporter without waiting to be assisted further turned on his heel, remarking late that he was not a reporter.

Alluy Official.

District Attorney Judd is one of the busiest men around the Daily building in the present time. What with the demands upon him in criminal and non-criminal in the courts and an unusually heavy run of private work as an attorney he finds himself, now and again, greatly hampered. He gets through it all, and that very successfully, nevertheless.

LIST OF LETTERS

Remaining uncalled in the Post office at Salt Lake City, Utah, for Sept. 29th, 1893. In addressing any of these letters the requirements must not be overlooked. Letters will be sent to the Dead Letter office at Washington, D. C., unless they are called for within one month.

LADIES' LIST.

Angel Mrs E
Adcock Malissa
Barker Mrs Ida
Bilger Mrs H C
Bilger Mrs H H
Bird Mrs J
Bird Lizzie E
Bonnell Stella
Brown Mrs Chas
Brown Mrs J E
Brown Mrs L
Brown Sarah
Bunnell Mrs
Carr Mrs Ann
Chase Pauline
Clegg Sarah
Cook Mrs
Cook E A
Cooper Mrs M H
Cowell Mrs H
Cowley Mrs
Cowley Mrs A
Cutler Ada B
Dalton Mrs
Davenport Mrs E
Davis Mrs
Dixon Mrs
Dixon Mrs
Dixon