PREPARED FOR

A LONG HOLIDAY

Workingmen Gather Up Their Tools and Go Home.

When the whistles sounded last evening at 5 o'clock workingmen throughout the city on building jobs gathered up their tools and went home as if prepared for a prolonged cessation from daily toil. The bricklayers finished walls on which they had been at work as though the same were to be left for an indefinite time, and the general expectation seemed to be that war was on.

CONTRACTORS ARE FIRM.

Insist That They Will Make Their Organization Permanent and Stand Shoulder to Shoulder.

The contractors still hold that they are in the right, and are acting only in self-defense against the unreasonable demands and actions of the unions. They also claim that if the unions persist in holding out, enough non-union labor can be brought in to offset the lack of union labor. The contractors insist they can no longer stand the uncertain and annoying policies of organized labor, and that when it comes to a strike, they must quit on one job because a holdout on some other job is not up with his union dues. It is high time to call a halt. The local contractors will make the organization permanent and work henceforth in union. They don't propose to submit any longer to dictation from the unions as to whom they shall hire, what they shall pay, the hours of work or when they shall buy material, and many other things that galled an employer.

UNION MEN RETICENT.

The union men are severely reticent, and when questioned by reporters refuse to talk, and are not polite about it either. The walking delegates play the phony and surround themselves with a halo of mystery that is amusing. Occasionally a man will be found who will say a few words, after exacting a promise that he shall not be quoted individually, and the tenor of the remarks of such is that the contractors have really nothing to complain of and that the workingman is only struggling for his rights. This basis of the fight is the employment of non-union labor, and the unionists claim they will put a stop to it, and that the contractors can find all the union labor they need if they will only ask for it.

FEDERAL WORK CONTINUES.

Work on the federal jobs will continue unless the men strike and refuse to work in sympathy with the other strikers, and it is possible that work may continue on the Catholic cathedral and the First Presbyterian church. But nothing is certain and there may not be a wheel turning in the local building industries when Monday comes. This will tie up operations in numerous other industries all because of the stand taken by 25 hoodlums. It is prophesied that this strike will hasten the time when the local skilled workers, the unskilled unions, and thus end one great source of complaint and dissatisfaction.

WILL GO BACK TO WORK.

Labor headquarters were a barren waste today as everybody was off celebrating. There are indications that the cessation from work will not be as unanimous as the walking delegates had expected. Architect Kletting was told this morning that several union men, that they proposed to return to work Monday, whether the walking delegates approved of it or not. They said they had families, and their families would not be able to support them. Kletting had left an eastern city with his family and located here because of having been mixed up in a strike, and he was hoping by coming here to live in the town where there would be no labor troubles. He, too, and behold, no sooner had he got nicely settled in Salt Lake, than on comes this disturbance. He said he couldn't stand it, and would work anyhow. Mr. Kletting is rather optimistic, and does not believe there will be trouble of any real moment.
