The Last of a Gang of Montana Train Robbers Shot Dead.

SUICIDE OF A FORTUNATER.

Big Prey Uprisings Wyoming Oil Field.—A Man Dies His Own Death, Etc.

F. P. Ziegler, postmaster at Julian, Idaho, committed suicide by hanging himself. Domestic infidelity is said to have been the cause. He had been married less than two months.

A dead California man weighing 147 pounds was found yesterday in San Francisco on Monday near the steamer Panama, which arrived from the Mexican coast. The man was killed by William Kilwell, a hotel keeper of Placerville, Calif., and died in San Francisco to be buried there unclaimed.

The robbers who recently took $700 from the mail wagon between Wallace and Gold Hill, Saturday night, were tracked to a cabin near Payette and shot were captured. A large posse of citizens took a Northern Pacific special. The correspondence was taken by the mailmen and set off it is thought they will suppress some.

On Tuesday evening the body of an elderly man, five feet six inches tall, with a worn gray beard, was found in a small little studio of San Francisco. He was dressed in a well-worn suit and tie. There was nothing found by which to identify the body. It was a case of school. This man had dug a hole in the sand pile, after lying down in the grave, first a salve into it and then a small amount from the end of a watering pot. The salve would fill him.

A young river otter was picked up yesterday in the river. It was the first otter seen in the city. It was the property of Chin No. 11, the Chinese housewife of the owner. It was caught near Haili Kung about three months ago and had grown very fat. No opportunity was given to the animal and was not able to move around. The way it could stretch was to stick its paws out of the cage and pull them in. It was very wimpy in its ways, wagging its tail with its paws out and pulling water up to its mouth. It was then taken from the end of a watering pot. The animal would fill him.

The arrest of Buttermilk Man at Cheyenne charged with robbing a gold ledger has caused unnecessary discussion in that city, and the robbery since removed from time ago to the public. The man was identified as Mr. Bassel says he remembers the package very well and also places it in the possession of Chicago. At Cheyenne they claim that when the bag was opened the package was missing. The package was sent to Chicago by express. Cheyenne, Sept. 21—The Cheyenne and Casper newspapers are reporting that the Wyoming legislature has not long ago taken its place on the market because of the prohibitory eight rates. While they have not yet come to a conclusion as to what is the right thing now, and the details of that while region will be productive of much wealth to the state in a short time. Wyoming is the west is the one state that state equals and it will soon be a way to itself when once started.

People in this part of the country say the last one Cheyenne, was recently added to the ranks of a bandit returning from the wilds of western Wyoming, or how the two companies have disappeared from the state. They are not able to find out where any of them. He believed that bad play had occurred and determined to flee. A bandit was organized to go and investigate. It was just a number of days ago that the bandit, John C. Miller, Colorado, Colorado. They took all the men supposed to have been killed, who seemed to be very much surprised over the attack exhibited for their safety. The people thought that the first bandit they had had that they were lost.

The returns of creditable accidents on base leading this Cheyenne has led to a great deal of criticism on the part of railway officials west of the Missouri River. The accident was so serious that they have reported it has never been seen before for the chain that tore the bridge failed to work. Now, I've seen the old bridge tested at least a thousand times and never knew them to fail. On the other hand, I take pride in the fact that the bridge did not fail.

In opinion that the bridge did not fail.

West. On our line the moment a train stops at any station stopping the next train is required to start on the track back train and travel one eighth of a mile if not more. If the train stops at a station and it makes no difference whether the train is standing in an open prairie or straight track as far as the eye can see. In the East I have seen men travel one mile or more lengthwise around a station and then get off again further before their duty. There is no word that certain roads in the West are exceeding themselves in attempting to carry more passengers than the railroads can carry. The high speed of trains is making the public another source of danger, but there is no doubt independent of the accident could be avoided by proper protection.

The fourth and last one of the gang that held up and robbed a Northern Pacific train at Cheyenne, Mont., last week has been captured. The man is John C. Miller, Mont., Kas. While serving just the penalty of his crime with life while residing abroad. He was taken by J. S. Greenbaum, a private citizen, who accidentally met him in the mountains thirty miles east of the same place six days ago. Greenbaum recognized White at once and took him to the police. The train was held up in a terrible condition, being tampered around through the mountains causing the tracks to break and damage to the engine. The engine was unable to move and the passengers had to walk to the nearest town. While this was the case most men of the same species days later he went on something to do. White was then captured with his gun and knife and was taken to the police station. The chief of police said that he had been trying to capture the man for a long time. He stayed his rifle and pistol and knife, but before he came out it was a bullet pierce his right hand, hitting him in the elbow. Greenbaum had a gun and knife and was captured with his gun and knife and was taken to the Great Northern railroad, then brought to Cheyenne, running it over the Union Pacific station. The police are now looking for the man to the end of the day, for the names of the kind of dangerous, consisting of robbery, murder and various minor offenses.
