

UTAH TEAM WINS TARIFF DEBATE

University Men Present Affirmative Side of the Question.

COLORADO HAD GOOD MEN.

Vote of Judges Was Two to Three in Favor of the Local Talent—Justice Straup Presides.

The decision in the debate in the latter part of evening was given to the University of Utah team, which took the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, that tariff should be imposed for revenue only." The Colorado college team argued the negative side of the question.

The judges of the debate were Bishop Franklin S. Spalding, Prof. G. B. Swezey of the Collegiate Institute, and Principal George A. Eaton of the Salt Lake High school. The judges were divided in their opinion, but two of the three decided in favor of the Utah team.

The argument for the affirmative was opened by Hugh B. Anderson, who stated his case very succinctly. He explained the views of his side regarding tariff for revenue only, protective tariff and free-trade, and argued in favor of the latter. He stated that he maintained that as each country produced what was most profitable to it, some being better fitted for some things than others, unrestricted trade would be to the benefit of the nations, and this could be best done by having a tariff for revenue only. He argued that a protective tariff made it harder for the people and increased the cost of the things they used. He stated that the McKinley tariff bill, which was sought to be reduced by the introduction of a tariff for revenue only, was a mistake.

C. M. Rose, the first speaker on the negative side, argued that because of the fact that the tariff for revenue only was introduced, it was a mistake. He argued that the tariff for revenue only was a mistake because it would be to the benefit of the nations, and this could be best done by having a tariff for revenue only. He argued that a protective tariff made it harder for the people and increased the cost of the things they used. He stated that the McKinley tariff bill, which was sought to be reduced by the introduction of a tariff for revenue only, was a mistake.

PROTECTION AND REGULATION. Ralph Hartley, for the affirmative, argued that a tariff for revenue only was a mistake. He argued that the tariff for revenue only was a mistake because it would be to the benefit of the nations, and this could be best done by having a tariff for revenue only. He argued that a protective tariff made it harder for the people and increased the cost of the things they used. He stated that the McKinley tariff bill, which was sought to be reduced by the introduction of a tariff for revenue only, was a mistake.

DECISION FOR UTAH. The last speaker on the negative side was J. L. Calhoun, who argued that a tariff for revenue only was a mistake. He argued that the tariff for revenue only was a mistake because it would be to the benefit of the nations, and this could be best done by having a tariff for revenue only. He argued that a protective tariff made it harder for the people and increased the cost of the things they used. He stated that the McKinley tariff bill, which was sought to be reduced by the introduction of a tariff for revenue only, was a mistake.

A JOKE THAT FAILED. As a jokesmith, H. J. Miller, a teamster, confesses himself a failure. Last night while walking down Commercial street, he thought it would be great fun to snatch his comrade's hat and run away with it. The friend, however, didn't see the point of the joke, and such a hue and cry that the intention of Patterson Olson was abandoned. Miller lay in jail all night, wondering how a joke could be turned to a charge of petit larceny.

ADVOCATES STORAGE PLAN. F. S. Montgomery of Mountain Home, Mo., is in the city, en route to Chicago. He is an enthusiastic advocate of the Chicago wool storage plan, and says there is little wool left in Idaho to buy. He stated that he pledged to the warehouse. Mr. Montgomery was offered $100 for his wool at home, but he had shipped it instead to the Chicago warehouse, the clip was sold at 22 1/2 cents. On account of the Chicago shipments, there have been no wool auctions in Idaho this season. Mr. Montgomery thinks the warehouse will have to be enlarged.

Dr. S. H. Allen Lends His Aid To Truth Crushed To Earth

Dr. S. H. Allen is desirous of lending aid to truth crushed to earth that it may rise again. Ever watchful of the opportunity, and perhaps more watchful when the moment sometimes characterized as psychological is ticked off in his own and immediate vicinity, he rises to the occasion presented today. The occasion has to do with a newspaper reporter and his story, a machine, a small boy, an automobile, a slippery pavement and a trolley pole. All combined yesterday to get Dr. Allen's name into print in a manner that has caused him much chagrin and embarrassment.

Yesterday in these columns a truthful reporter related how Dr. Allen had been giving his new automobile, a slipshod machine and how in making a sharp turn from F street into South Temple street a mishap occurred in which the new car was badly damaged and nobody was hurt. Dr. Allen was credited with being the chauffeur of his own car.

Now since that thrilling recital of an automobile accident was committed to print, Dr. Allen has been called many times on the phone by his friends wishing to impart various bits of gasoline gossip and whizz wagon wisdom and, perchance, to playfully tickle his temper with a jest or two. When he started out this morning in his automobile, he was not expecting to be called to the attention of his friends, but he was not prepared to refuse them. He took refuge behind friendly trees or even withdrew within the seclusion of stout fences. All of this perturbed the physician's feelings to a degree and as a valiant champion of truth he comes forward with a veracious account of the episode.

At the time the retractable car skidded down the thoroughfare, Dr. Allen was in the operating room at one of the city's hospitals and not nursing the gasoline and electrical auto combustion. His car was meanwhile in charge of a professional machinist and the doctor's son was an interested and delighted passenger. Whilst speeding up South Temple street, which Jake Raleigh in his official capacity had provided with a liberal sprinkling, the machine began to skid. It skidded and skidded and the machinist applied the brakes. This was a fatal mistake, Dr. Allen says, for an auto driver should go ahead when his machine skids, for otherwise it is sure to switch the machine around like schoolboys playing crack the whip. The machine did manage to get pretty well bent up and a wheel needed replacing, but no fatalities were recorded and the machine is as good as ever today and is sputtering and whizzing along just like any other misbehaving horseless carriage.

This much said, Dr. Allen has materially aided truth crushed to earth to again assume an upright position and the designing person who misinformed him, was reported to the police at night and the truth has transpired despite his effort to cover it with a veil of interesting and entertaining recital of the maiden trip of the new car.
