LETTER FROM MEXICO.

Editor Deseret News

A few words from Colonia Juarez may be of interest to some in Utah who have friends residing here, and therefore, I now send a brief description of the place as I find it after a prolonged absence.

Situated in the valley of the Piedras Verdas, here about one-third of a mile wide, the first view obtained by the visitor from the brow of the mesa or bench overlooking the town is beautiful indeed. He sees comfortable dwellings, some of them elegant, built of adobe, concrete or brick, embowered with fruit trees, vineyards and flowers; lots neatly fenced with boards or pickets, the broad sidewalks shaded by rows of fine trees, while the stream flowing through the town is bordered nowing through the town is bordered along its whole course with the magnificent cottonwoods peculiar to this southern land, and with sycamores, black walnut, ash and willow trees, and mu'berries growing naturally above the village. Everywhere one sees abundant evidence of prosperity.

A large and well finished building of addle and concrete just completed.

of adobe and concrete, just completed, was dedicated on September 6th by Apostle Teasdale, on which occasion it was filled to overflowing with a well dressed and harpy looking assemblage, representatives of Juarez, Pachico, Dublan and Diaz. The choir singing representatives was especially fine, led by Brother Walser, an experienced leader in both vocal and instrumental music.

Juarez has an excellent grist mill built by Brother Stowell, a good tannery, owned by Bishop Seavey. A brick machine, owned by David E. Johnson, a tin shop, lime kiln, store, and two cane mills, besides the usual proportion of blacksmiths, carpenters, and other trades. Fruit trees and vineyards make remarkable growth, and flowers grow in uncommon luxuriance. I notice at this writing now in bloom roses, zinias, trumpet keepers, morning glories, and moon flowers, and chrysanthemums just about to flower.

There is a much larger area of farm land in cultivation than I had expected to see, fields of corn, cane and fucern extending up the river four miles. The cane is now being pressed for molasses Many miles of ditches are in use, and another ditch is in process of construction. Everyone appears husy, for in new settlements a hundred things must seemingly be done at once. The people are united and happy, with no sickness except a single case of diphtheria in the family of Bro. A. J. Stewart, Jun., whose daughter has now nearly recovered.

A woolen mill is much needed here. There is abundant water power, and many thousands of sheep, both Mexican and American, whose wool is now shipped to the woolen mill in Chihuasnipped to the woolen mill in Uniqua-hua. A mill here would give employ-ment to many of our people, and build up a solid prosperity. The silk industry would also do well here, the climate, mild both in summer and winter, being specially adapted to the production of

Juarez is principally adapted to mills and manufactures, the river affording abundant power which may be used over and over again; while the lands at Casas Grandes (twelve miles below) are rich and unexcelled for field grops.

Good thoroughbred stock, both horses and cattle, have been Imported, and now throughout the State it is commonly said among the Mexicans, "If you want good horses or cattle, go to the Mormon settlements and get them." The Mexicans look upon the "Mormons" with wonder, and frequently say they wish we would come and live among them in El Valle, and live among them in El Valle, Carmen, Galena and other places, and show them how to do, they being a full century behind the age. They have not the push and energy of the Anglo-Saxon race, but seem contented and happy. Give a Mexican plenty of corn for tartilles, thems (friinles) and corn for tortillas, beans (frijoles) and Chili (peppers) with a little money for public festivals, and he thinks he has nothing more to desire. Thus far good feelings exist between them ... nd our people, and if we do right it will, no doubt, continue. I believe the Lord has a great work to do in this land, has a great work to uo in tuis ianu, and those who desire to forward that work will be very welcome here; but those who do not—those who look simply to find a good country and to get rich—are not desired here, and had better look for a richer land. All countries have their disadvantages, and Mexico is no exception; but the Lord has greatly, even wonderfully, blessed His people here not with standing, and the people are full of lope. And especially do we hope a temple may be built in this land before long, that we may work for the dead with-out being obliged to expend a year's revenue in a long and tedious journey to Utah. Scarcely any here can af-ford to go by rail, but have to go by wagon nearly a thousand miles across a desert or mountainous country, spending weeks in the journey each way. But we are willing in this to await the Lord's time, as in all things else.

J. H. MARTINEAU. COLONIA JUAREZ, Sept. 30, 1891.
