Dr. FOOTE, Senior,

Of 120 Lexington Avenue, New York,

Hereby cautions the public NOT to Employ or Communicate With a man styling himself "Dr. Foot, Jr." without making due inquiry.

This man came to Salt Lake City representing himself as the son of Dr. E. B. FOOTE of New York; the well known specialist, as abundantly proved by affidavits. As rumors came into Salt Lake City from Dakota and Montana from an expose made there, he changed his base and represented himself as the son of a more noted specialist in New York City than Dr. E. B. FOOTE, the well known author, Mr. JOHN F TROW, of the well known Trow's Directory, in New York City (forty years in the directory business), Ex-Governor FRANK FULLER, of Utah, and the Hon. ABRAM WAKEMAN, for many years Postmaster in New York City, also Surveyor of the Port, gave their affidavits that there are no other doctors in New York by the name of FOOT or FOOTE, excepting Dr. F. B. FOOTE, the the author of "Medical Common Sense," etc., and h s two sons, Dr. E. B. FOOTE, JR., and Dr. HUBERT T. FOOTE. The genuine Dr. FOOTE, Jr., will hereafter always employ the initials, M. D., in designating his name. Heretofore he has been known not only at home but wherever his publications have been circulated, by the name of Dr. FOOTE, JR. Greater care will be taken hereafter, in view of the fac that an unprincipled person has assumed to prostitute his and his father's reputation.

Those desiring further and more detailed information in respect to this matter, will receive it by addressing Box 414, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Persons having information of advantage to plaintiffs will kindly communicate the same to J. W. Ivey, with Sutherland & McBride, Salt Lake City.

Those desiring to consult Dr. FOOTE professionally or to order remedies should address either

Dr. E. B. FOOTE, Sr., or Dr. E. B. FOOTE, Jr.,

EDUCATION OF DEAF MUTES.

LETTER WRITTEN BY A DEAF AND DUMB BOY, AFTER ONLY SEVEN MONTHS SCHOOLING—AN INTERESTING STORY OF THE EARLY EDUCATION OF DEAF MUTES.

SALT LAKE CITY, August 27, 1885.

Editor Deseret News:

In view of the attention which the education of deaf mutes in this Territory is now receiving, it may interest the public to read the simple but clearly expressed contents of written at home by a young man of 16 years, who has been but seven months in school at the University. Considering the fact that this time last year the writer had not the slightest idea of written language, much less of the meaning of the words he uses in communicating with his teacher, his progress is a fair sample of what can be done by the aid of signs in a single year. What other system could have taught a congenital mute better?

"LEHI, August 22d, 1885.

"Mr. Harry White:

"I am well. Are you well. When I get through making hay I will go to school. I will go to school in September 14th, 1885, Salt Lake City.

"I like to go to school. I will come with my father in the buggy.

"You write to me.

"JOHN BECK, JR."

By their fruits shall ye know them. Apropos of this subject, I crave the indulgence of the patient editor to relate which dates far back to the earliest dawn of deaf mute education in America, and conveys a moral of its own to the present time.

A BIT OF HISTORY,

The great man, Peyton Randolph, of Virginia, the President of the first Continental Congress, the same who once said contemptuously in referring to John and Samuel Adams, of Massachusetts, "The northern clodhoppers talk well and write well, but upon a fair field, they will prove poor soldiers in comparison with Southern chivalry"—a boast that was bloodily refuted, less than a century later, upon many a hard-fought battlefield—had by the name of St. George Tucker, whom he had destined for the heir of his vast wealth and princely property. En passant, it may be remarked, that Hon. Randolph Tucker, the present member of Congress, is a lineal descendant of the two families.

A DEAF MUTE NEPHEW

The famous statesman of Roanoke was a man of keen intellect but strong prejudices. He employed an ingenious gentleman, Prof. Craidwood, to teach his nephew by means of articulation and lip-reading. St. George, the Deaf Mute, finished his education in due time but unfortunately he fell in love with a hearing young lady of his neighborhood, an heiress and the belle of the county, who rejected his suit, backed though it was by the great influence of his uncle; and the disappointed lover brooded to such an extent over his rejection, his sensitive nature attributing the cause to his want of hearing, that his mind became deranged and he was

A LIFE LONG MANIAC.

There was a rich farmer in the neighborhood with two stalwart sons who were deaf mutes. One day a clockmaker or peddler from Connecticut made his appearance in the same neighborhood, and being acquainted with the use of the finger alphabet, he managed to inform the two deaf mutes in the language of signs, that there was a good school for the deaf in Hartford, Connecticut, upon which they persuaded their indulgent father to send them to that distant school. Before deciding, however, the father consulted upon the wisdom of giving his deaf mute sons an education, and the irascible statesman, disappointed over his heir, bluntly advised the old farmer to keep his sons to work upon the farm, like his horses or cattle, upon the principle expressed in those well known lines of the poet Gray:

PEYTON RANDOLPH'S OPINION

"Where ignorance is bliss,
'Tis folly to be wise."

For an education would only make them unhappy and drive them insane upon realizing their condition.

The simple old farmer returned home with the determination not to give his unfortunate sons the benefit of any education whatever, but what parental firmness can withstand the

of a pair of eloquent but voiceless eyes?

The hour came when the father yielded and the two young men set out for school at a somewhat advanced age. They rode on horseback to Richmond, taking the boat thence to New York and then travelled in a stage coach to Hartford, where they were kindly welcomed by Dr. Thomas H. Gallaudet, the pioneer of deaf mute education in America.

Such was the primitive mode of travelling, and after a few years, the two Virginians completed their education, returning home by their perfect command of all their senses but one.

Their father was so much delighted with their intelligence that he presented each of them with a fine farm stocked with horses, cattle and a body of slaves. The two educated deaf mutes were more fortunate than the unhappy St. George Tusker, in securing hearing wives to suit them and they managed their farms with such prudence and wisdom that they left them in a prosperous condition to their children. Some of their sons were killed upon the side of the late rebellion, but others survived and beat their swords into plough-shares, resuming the peaceful occupation of their silent fathers.

The moral of the story is well expressed by the Latin proverb, "Abuse is no argument against proper use"—Abus non tollit usum. H. C. W.

How Oil Cloth Is Made.

The palette of the artist who paints the bright figures upon oil cloth is a round, revolving table, about ten feet in diameter, with checks of red, yellow, brown and other colors in a row around the edge. The artist's brush is a block eighteen inches square. There may be seven colors in the pattern. If so he uses seven blocks. Round whisks the big circular palette, down presses the block, "thump, thump, thump" goes the iron palette, and the ochre and the vermillion are impressed on the burlap. The foundation of the goods is burlap, made of jute. All of it is imported from Dundee, Scotland. It is a coarse, gauzy substance. You can easily see through it. Its first treatment is starching.

It runs over twenty-two steam drums, and is thoroughly impregnated with tapioca. Then the ground paint is put on—a brown or perhaps a tan color. The best goods receive seven coats of paint." After each coat, the cloth goes through a scouring machine, which works the paint in and smooths it. Then the printers take the cloth and stamp the figures on it. The printer stands before a table on which the cloth is laid. Each color is put on separately. A block containing the lines for all the red used in the pattern is laid on the thin bed of paint on the revolving palette, above described, and then carefully stamped on the cloth. The first impression leaves a skeleton of the figure.

When the artist has turned his palette around once, all the six or seven colors have been stamped on the piece, and the pattern appears in its entirety. Then the cloth is moved forward and the process is repeated for another row of figures. The blocks are made of rock maple. Printing is an operation that requires nicety of touch and experience. The printers are paid by the piece. A good man can print three thirty-five yard pieces a day. After having been printed, the cloth goes to the "bakery," where it is hardened by being dried on racks in a hot room. The next process is varnishing and the last is crimming. It is six or eight weeks after the burlap is starched before it is well hardened and packed for shipment.—Philadelphia Call.

THE NEEDLE AND THREAD PLANT.—The Agave Americana (century plant) holds the place of Asiatic hemp and Egyptian papyrus. Ancient hieroglyphics were inscribed on the leaves macerated in water and glued together as the bark of paper mulberry. Much attention has been paid to the manufacture of paper from leaves. "The fabrication of this material is destined to be a great industry," says the "Catalogue of Mexican Products," owing to the quality and cheapness of the material. The fibers of the leaves with the thorns at the end are applied to manifold uses. The edges of the leaves are indented; at each indenture is a spine. These spines are frequently so strong as to serve the Indians for nails. A needle and thread is also furnished the natives by the simple process of pounding the leaf so as to soften the pulp, then scraping the latter away, allowing the fibres with thorns attached to remain. These are dried by hanging in the sun a few days, and the Indian woman has her needle, which is smooth and not liable to rust; her thread to sew her coarse dress made from "petal flax" (a textile fabric of this plant), prepared in the crudest manner, yet stronger than cotton which has gone through many processes of manufacture. A rope is made from the fiber of the maguey which is used in the mines and for the cordage of ships on the western coast. The poorer classes of Mexico thatch the roofs with the leaves, and these being concave, serve as gutters to conduct the water away from the eaves.—Scientific American.

Two for a Cent Apiece.

A young editor, bright, poor, and punsterious, had won the affections of a rich man's daughter, and they fixed a day for him to call on the father, and on that day he was promptly in the old gentleman's office.

"Good morning, sir," he said, confident, but ready to run, "I have called on you on a matter of—"

"We don't want any advertising today," interrupted the old gentleman, looking up over his glasses.

"I am not on that business, sir. I came to ask you for your daughter."

"What do you want with her?"

"Marry her."

"What for?"

"For better or worse."

"What does the girl say?"

"She says she will be my wife."

"Uch! You haven't got a cent in the world, have you?"

"Yes, sir. She gave assent, and if you will do the same, that will make two, and we can buy a postage stamp and write to you for the balance of our salary."

It was a wretched attempt, but he got the girl.

NOT BITTEN THAT TIME.—"Father," he said, as he let go of the cross-cut saw to straighten his aching back, "they say that fish have begun to bite."

"Yes."

"The Burns boys caught a big string yesterday, and are going again this afternoon."

"Yes."

"And I thought — being I was — I thouent—"

"Henry," said the old man, as he spit on his hands and reached for the saw, "you just let the Burns boys go, and you stay here and help me saw. Put the date down on the barn door, and fifty years hence see who is worth the most clean cash, Pull away on your end."—Wall Street News.
