THE WOES OF A WOOER.

"When a man marries, his troubles begin." Yes, and sometimes before he marries, as I learned by rough experience. And thereby hangs a tale. Inasmuch as I am the hero of my story, I may be allowed a few words concerning myself, by way of introduction. Briefly, then, my dear reader. I am a type of the "real, live Yankee," born away down in Maine, and there, in that delightful land of fish and sawlogs, during the first nineteen years of my eventful life, I lived, worked and had my being upon my father's farm, situated on the noble Kennebec, about midway between the capital, Augusta, and the beautiful Moosehead Lake, near the town of Skowhegan.

About half a mile from our "estate" there lived a family by the name of Millburn; and as the members of this family played an important part in the events I am about to narrate, and of which I was the central figure, the reader will allow me a few words respecting them. The family consisted of the father, John Millburn, a widower, his brother Nathan, familiarly known in that region as "Uncle Nathan," a spinster of a certain age, and last, but by no means least, his daughter Milly, a charming creature of sweet sixteen. Milly and I had grown up from babyhood together, had been playmates, schoolmates and boon companions all our lives. In Summer we chased the wild butterfly over the meadows, or baked our mutual mud-pies by the clear, running brook; and in Winter, slid down hill together on our sled. As might have been foreseen by any anxious mamma, as we grew older, there grew up a feeling in our hearts deeper than respect, deeper than mere friendship. We had learned to love each other. True, there had never been any formal engagement between us, but the understanding was mutual. At that time, all my worldly effects consisted of a yoke of steers, a pair of cowhide boots and a mammoth jack-knife. These, we both considered quite inadequate to begin house-keeping with, and it had been agreed that I should start that Fall to seek my fortune, and carve out a home in the wilderness of the great West.

It was in the Fall of 1840, during the pendency of the famous "Hard Cider" campaign between Harrison and Van Buren, and the country rang with the praises of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too." Millburn was an ardent partisan of of General Harrison, and, as fate would have it, my father was an equally earnest Democrat, and at that particular time was a candidate for the State Legislature on that ticket. From these circumstances an ill will had grown up between the two, which came near proving fatal to my prospects matrimonial. My father threatened to disown and disinherit me, if I married "that girl," and Millburn was just as much opposed to the match on his part. He gave a decided negative to my proposal for his daughter's hand, and intimated that my visits could very resignedly be dispensed with. Furthermore, Milly was privately instructed to discourage and repel my attentions to her in every way—in a word, she was to "turn the cold shoulder" on me, an injunction which was scrupulously disregarded and broken at every convenient opportunity. Nor were such opportunities few; for love, which laughs at locksmiths, is not apt to be thwarted by a couple of testy old papas; and many were the stolen meetings which we continued to secure, notwithstanding their vigilance. If they had been as wise as the poet when he wrote,

"Will love be controled by fathers?
"Will Cupid our mothers obey!"

They would have foreseen all this; but they were not.

One evening, while the political excitement was at its height, a mass meeting was held in town, and, of course, Millburn and Uncle Nathan attended. Besides, Aunt Hetty wanted to do some shopping that evening, and "If Milly wasn't afeerd to stay at home alone," she'd like to go alone.

"Bose'll be here," added she encouragingly, "and he's worth a dozen men. He won't let nothin' come around to hurt ye, an' there'll be nothin' to fear."

Of course Milly wasn't afraid, and readily consented to stay at home and keep house. But she didn't stay alone—not exactly. This was an opportunity that could not be allowed to go unimproved, and as soon as the family had got off to a safe distance a certain young gentleman called at a certain farm-house, where a certain young lady had been left to keep house, and easily circumventing "Bose," aforesaid readily gained admission. Strange as it may appear, and incredible withal, the unprotected young female did not manifest any fear or uneasiness at this event. So far from it that a close observer would have thought she was pleased with the call, and had been expecting it. The reader may believe, if he chooses, that this was all accidental; But I didn't, and never shall. In fact, looking back upon the circumstances through the lapse of years, I am firmly persuaded that it was an understood thing between them, and being one of the parties, I was in a condition to know. The evening passed pleasantly, happily, and the young lady was not the least bit lonesome. In fact, so happily engaged were we that the flight of time was entirely unnoticed. Nevertheless, the hours flew on apace, and nine, ten, struck the old clock on the mantle ut we heeded not its voice, so entirely were we absorbed in our sweet selves and oblivious of all else.

But a change came o'er the scene. Alas! that I should have it to say, the spell was broken. As the dream had been blissful, so the awakening was rude and painful. In the midst of our whispered nothings, we were suddenly startled by a loud clear voice at the gate, ringing upon the frosty night air, to us like the trumpet calling to judgment, "Whoap! whoa!" There could be no mistaking that voice of Uncle Nathan's, and directly we heard other voices coming from the porch which we both knew only too well. A consternation overspread our faces; fear and trembling took hold upon us, and each blankly asked the other at the same moment: "O, what shall we do?" Alas! what could we do? Retreat was cut off, and I saw no way but to put on a bold front and face the situation; but Milly, fearful of the consequences and the expected parental displeasure, would not consent to this. Her woman's wit, however, proved equal to the emergency.

SEWING MACHINE SALES FOR 1870.

"The magnitude to which the manufacture of Sewing Machines has attained is shown by the "SWORN" returns (to which any one can have access) of the manufacturers for the year 1870 to the owners of the leading patents, on which they pay a royalty. Accordiag to these returns the number of machines sold by each manufacturer in 1870 is as follows:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| The Singer | 127,833 | Florence | 17,000 |
| Wheeler & Wilson | 83,236 | Gold Medal | 5,912 |
| Howe | 75,156 | Ætna | 5,806 |
| Grover & Baker | 57,402 | Empire | 3,450 |
| Weed | 35,002 | Finkle & Lyon | 2,420 |
| Wilcox & Gibbs | 28,890 | Parham | 1,780 |
| American Suttonhole & Overseaming | 14,573 | Wilson | 500 |

And several other companies who sold a few Machines.

It will be seen by this table that the popularity of the Singer Machine far exceeds that of all others, their sale being one-half greater than even that of the famous "Wheeler & Wilson" machine. This is owing to the fact that the Singer Company have lately commenced making, besides their old and well-established manufacturing machine, what is known as their "New Family Machine," which is selling at the rate of nine to one better than their old style." Their total sales for 1869 were 83,751 machines against the 127,833 of 1870, showing an increase of one-half in the latter year."—New York Sun.

The New Family Singer Sewing Machine,
With Attachments for All Kinds of Work,

Is fast winning supreme favor in the household, as shown by the rapidly increasing sales, over all other machines.

This New Family Machine is now capable of a range and variety of work such as was only recently thought impossible to perform by machinery. We claim and can show that it is the cheapest, most beautiful, delicately arranged, nicely adjusted, easily operated, speedy and smoothly running of all the Family Sewing Machines. It is remarkable not only for the range and variety of its sewing, but also for the variety and different kinds of texture which it will sew with equal facility and perfection, using silk twist, linen or cotton thread, fine or coarse, making the interlocked-elastic-stitch, alike on both sides of the fabric sewn: the only stitch which is universally approved, or is at all adapted to first-class work. Thus, beaver cloth, or leather may be sewn with great strength and uniformity of stitch, and, in a moment this willing and never-wearying instrument may be adjusted for fine work on gauze or gossamer tissue, or the tucking of tarlatan, or ruffling, or almost any other work—even by a child—which delicate fingers have been known to perform. Even the careless and thoughtless have little or no trouble on this machine.

Send for Descriptive and Price Circulars.

We manufacture our own needles, silk and twist; furnish linen and cotton thread and oil—all of superior quality—but which can be relied on only when obtained through our Principal or Branch Offices, or Agencies.
