SENATE.

Speeches on Louisiana.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 16.—Saulsbury contended that the legislature in New Orleans was legally organized, all the members having been sworn in, and recognizing Wiltz as speaker. There was a rapid tendency towards centralization of power in this country, and it seemed as if the States were to be deprived of many of their constitutional rights. He would say, frankly, that the tone of the President's message pleased him. He referred to the speech of the Illinois Senator, Logan, as a denunciation of the Democratic party, and not an argument. He said that such an exhibition of the skull and crossbones was to prepare the public mind for the republican party's taking military possession of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama, and he did not know how many more of the southern States, and compel them to vote for the next republican President.

Conkling said this reminded him of a newspaper enterprise called the "Exclusive News," and the senator was the only one who had it.

Saulsbury said if the senator intimated that he concocted this story, it was false.

Conkling characterized this remark as exceedingly out of place, indecent and wicked, inasmuch as he did not say that the senator concocted the story.

Saulsbury said that he inferred that the senator intimated that he put the rumor in circulation, and he resented it; he had never offered an indignity to any senator, "and" said he, "so help me God no senator shall offer an affront to me." If the senator did not intend to insult him he was sorry for what he had said, but he would not tamely submit to what he deemed an insult, even before his majesty the senator from New York. Saulsbury then concluded his speech.

Clayton spoke of the Kuklux in the Southern States, and said the White League was the remains of it. He knew of the existence of the White League in Arkansas, though Governor Garland had told the President there was none. If so, it was because, when the democrats gained power, they made the White League a State militia, and gave them arms. In Arkansas, of five hundred white democrats who had murdered negroes, not one had suffered the extreme penalty of the law. He had asked several of the southern senators if in their States white murderers of negroes were punished to the full extent of the law, and was generally answered that they were.

Cooper obtained permission to give the substance of a dispatch from Brown, of Tenn., to the President, but he commenced to read the dispatch, when Clayton objected, and the Speaker entertained the objection. Cooper appealed to the Senate, which laid the appeal on the table.

Clayton, resuming, said that wherever the democrats controlled the Southern States there is no peace, the slave power still lives, and is grasping for all the Southern States.

Sherman obtained the floor to speak on the resolution, but yielded for a motion by Morrill, to lay aside the pending motion, and call up the appropriation bill, with the understanding that he (Sherman) should have the floor on the Louisiana question next week after that bill was disposed of.

Various opinions were expressed as to the advisability of continuing the debate on the resolution, and it was finally decided to continue the discussion to-day. Sherman replied to the charges of Bayard and Schurz against the President and Sheridan. He said that Schurz' argument was based on a false statement of facts, and was wholly unreliable. He believed that many who had taken part in the recent meeting at the Cooper Institute would one day regret their action. Neither Grant, Sheridan, nor the republican party were responsible for the occurrences in New Orleans on the 4th instant. The whole matter was, an officer of the army expelled from the legislature five men who had no right to be there.

Thurman contended that the organization was legal, but even if it was not the officer had no right to interfere.

Before concluding Sherman yielded for a motion to adjourn, agreed to 17 to 16.

EASTERN.

Want Order Rescinded and Distillers Relieved.

WASHINGTON, 16.—Senator Sargent called on the Secretary of the Interior to urge the issuance of and order wholly rescinding the reservation of lands in California for the benefit of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, or at least for the abrogation of the order of last year, which dated back the reservation to 1872, and thereby threw a cloud on numerous settlers, preventing the completion of their titles. He argued that it was very doubtful if the congressional grant was intended to run beyond the California boundary line, and at all events the ex post facto order was clearly unjust and unadvisable. Delano took the matter under consideration.

Sargent and Page were before the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to-day, to secure his approval of the latter's bill for the relief of the California brandy distillers. Douglass expressed himself in favor of a provision authorizing a distinctive stamp for native product, but he feared the other section, permitting fruit distillers to introduce coloring matter without being considered rectifiers, would open the door to whiskey frauds; he, however, promised a careful consideration of the argument.

Advantageous.

The probable accession of W. E. Forster as Gladstone's successor as the Liberal leader in the British parliament is considered highly advantageous to the United States, because of his long known and conspicuous friendliness to the United States and his high appreciation of the good relations which should be cemented between them and Britain.

Fight among Railroad Lobbyists, &c.

The fight between the Central Pacific lobby and Tom Scott's Texas Pacific has apparently blazed out suddenly and fiercely, and the Central's dog-in-the-manger policy is clearly developed. Houghton is earnestly opposed to the Central's movement and, as far as can now be judged, the temper of the railroad committee of both houses favors the keeping of the new transcontinental project free from all embarrassing riders. Page, Clayton and Luttrell are committed, by their vote on Holman's resolution, against any subsidy, but if they desire to give the Central a little healthy competition, they can do as others in the same situation will, and who argue that Scott asks no subsidy, but only the government endorsement on ample security. In the present attitude of the Central, Sargent safely declares himself opposed to granting government credit or aid in any manner whatever. If this attitude is directed by a proper deference to California sentiment, he will testify to it by attaching to the Central's bill, for a change of the Southern Pacific route, stipulations effectively protecting the people from oppressive extortions and discriminations. The Central opposition tends to make friends for Scott's bill, because it shows that the latter would, with proper safeguards, provide popular protection against monopoly in overland transportation. Luttrell has received memorials from several hundred settlers, protesting against allowing the Southern Pacific to change its route, and asking the passage of his bill practically excluding, from the lands granted to said road, any actually settled prior to the passage of said act, possessing preemption or other claim or right prior to May 21, 1867; also telegrams from Los Angeles, and the resolutions of the Grangers of Tulare, Fresno, Mercea and Stanislaus, asking him to resist any modification of the Southern Pacific line. Luttrell accordingly will fight Houghton's bill for that purpose.

Clayton has prepared a bill increasing the duties on native still wines, as provided in last year's little tariff bill, which he will introduce as soon as the conferrees on the latter report their already known disability to agree on the amendments contested between the two houses.

The bill for the incorporation of railroads in the Territories, passed by the House, is McCormick's bill of last session, with a provision added on motion of Holman, specifically reserving to future States the right to regulate railroad charges on the roads to which the bill applies.

In the course of the debate on the Indian appropriation bill Luttrell expressed his conviction that Indian commissioner Smith is acting in good faith, and he predicted that he would soon repudiate some Indian agents in his district for improper conduct reported by himself.

Luttrell recounted his failure to get Cresswell or congress to investigate straw bids for mail carrying, but said that Jewell is ready to inquire and to punish the guilty. Subsequently Luttrell created a sensation by remarks in connection with a motion to farm out Indian reservations. He read a letter from Jno. Matthews, offering to take the Round Valley reservation for five years, and to support and instruct the Indians free of cost. He said that several others were ready with the same offer. He testified that, from personal inspection, the Indians are stripped, tied up and whipped like dogs, as was formerly done in the South with negroes; besides an affidavit of the facts, Luttrell said that agent Burchard admits the whippings. The amendment was rejected. The only Pacific Coast amendment hitherto made devotes $5,000 for a hospital on Round Valley, on Luttrell's motion and explanation of its necessity.

A Contested Will Case.

In the Supreme Court, to-day, the case of Kieley et al vs. McGlynn, was argued, on appeal from the Circuit Court for California. This was a bill to procure a revocation of the alleged will of David C. Broderick, Senator from California, at the time of his death in a duel with Judge Terry, on the ground that it was a forgery. Complainants claim to be the only heirs of Broderick, and they allege that the executors appointed in the will were aware that it was a forgery, and that the action of the Probate Court of California in admitting it to probate was all that gave it any force; that it was the will of that court and not of Broderick. The decision below sustained the will, and it is here insisted that this court will remove the bar erected by the frauds imposed on the Probate Court to the prejudice of lands to which the complainants have undisputed title as heirs. It is also urged that purchasers under the sale had notice of the fraudulent will, and took their titles with that knowledge, and that, this being the case, they hold the property merely as trustees for the complainants. The statute of limitation having been pleaded, it is here urged that a court of equity will interfere to prevent a bar when it is clearly unjust. The appellees contend that a court of equity has no jurisdiction of the subject matter, the same being vested exclusively in the Probate Court, of the city and county of California, and that the action is barred without relief by the statute of limitations. They claim that the purchasers hold under an order of a court, which has never been reversed or set aside, and which is not now impeached, and that the complainants are now resident foreigners, incapable of taking or holding property in California.

A Mysterious Murder.

CHICAGO, 16.—The verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of Fred'k Ruetz, found murdered on Goose Island in this city, last Monday, discharged all the prisoners, the mystery of his murder therefore remains unsolved.

Another Condemnation Meeting.
