BREVITIES.

Horse oil is the latest Parisian addition to salad dressing.

A very nice waterfall can now be purchased for $8.

New York averages 1,000 violent deaths per annum.

The world's tobacco crop is estimated at 432,000 tons.

A tumor weighing 120 pounds has lately had a lady of Troy, N.Y., removed from it.

Dr. Livingstone, the celebrated African explorer, is expected in England before Christmas.

A Polish Jew of Wilna, who had his house burned down, was fined 25 roubles for crying fire in the Polish language.

A Frenchman has invented a kind of safe, which, when fraudulently opened, will kindle a brilliant Bengal light, and assemble a crowd.

An Italian paper announces the forthcoming publication of a novel founded on the loves of Queen Isabella, and the adventures of the cone-shaped-headed Marfiori, her attendant.

Dr. Stark, the Registrar General of Scotland, reports that "bachelorhood is more destructive to life than residence in an unwholesome house or district, where there never has been the most distant attempt at sanitary improvement of any kind."

So quiet was General Grant's coming to Washington, Saturday evening, that he was not recognized at the depot until his name was discovered on an old valise, which had been with him from Vicksburg to Appomattox. The discovery was made by a reconstructed huckster, who shouted at the top of his voice to an associate, "Hello, Sam! Seymour's partner is somewhere here. Dar's his carpet-bag."

Professor Casturina, of Turin, has discovered that animals may be killed without pain by forcing air into their eyes, within the space of a few seconds, and it is thought without causing them any pain. Within the space of a few minutes four rabbits, three dogs, and a goat were killed in this manner. "The most remarkable thing about this 'killing made easy,' is the fact that it leaves absolutely no outward trace; and it can be as easily applied to men as well as to animals."

A lady asked a very silly Scotch nobleman how it happened that Scots who came out of their own country were generally speaking men of more ability than those who remained at home? "Oh, madam," said he, "the reason is obvious. At every outlet there are persons stationed to examine all who pass, that, for the honor of the country, no one be permitted to leave it who is not a man of understanding. 'Then,' said she, 'I suppose your lordship was snuggled.'"

The falling off during the last two years in the attendance at the common schools in New England, it is asserted, is not to be attributed to a neglect of education or to mistakes in the returns, but to an actual decrease in the number of children. It is stated that, forty years ago, ten children in a family were frequently observed, and that the average number of the offspring of parents, aged forty-five, was seven. Now, however, the average is only four. In many towns the deaths exceed the births, and only the immigration of foreigners keeps up the general standard of the population.

When a rakish youth goes astray, friends gather to bring him back to the paths of virtue. Gentleness and kindness are lavished upon him to bring him back to innocence and peace. No one would suspect that he had sinned. But when a poor girl is betrayed, she receives the brands of society and is henceforth driven from the ways of virtue. The betrayer is honored, respected and esteemed—there is no peace for her this side of the grave. Society has no loving, helping hand for her, no smile of peace, no voice of forgiveness. These are earthly mortals unknown to heaven. There is a deep wrong in them and fearful are the consequences.

A Scandinavian girl recently arrived in this country was employed as servant by a lady in Chicago, who told the girl it was not fashionable for servants in America to wear long handsome golden ringlets, by which argument she persuaded her servant to allow her hair to be cut off. The next day she was given by her mistress to a party of friends, the servant was surprised to see her hair on the head of the lady, and in the presence of the company she demanded her hair. The mistress denied the claim, a suit was brought and the court decided the girl should recover her hair, which had been appropriated by her mistress for a chignon.

A contemporary, turning his visage to the misty distance of two hundred years, describes the following scene: House of citizen in New York—A. D. 2067. A telegraphic message has been sent to a servant who presents himself at the window in a balloon.

Master—"John go to South America and tell Mr. Johnson I shall be happy to have him sup with me this evening. Never mind your coat, go right away." In five minutes John returns.

John—"Mr. Johnson, sir, says he will come; he is obliged to go to the North Pole for a moment, and will call here as he comes back."

Master—"Very well, John! now you may wind up the machine for setting the table, and tell me to my wife that Mr. Johnson will be here presently. After that you may dust out the balloon. I have an appointment in London at ten o'clock."

John disappears to execute his orders, while his master steps down to the West Indies to get a fresh orange.
