

IN THE WORLD OF WOMEN

NOTABLE UTAH WOMEN.

The chief social feature of the week has been the great in-fading tide of Salt Lake's summer wanderers, returning from their season's sojourn at various local and foreign resorts, where the extended term of hot weather has made them well contented to remain. A large number have returned from Wasatch, Brighton, and the several resorts in Paria, including Mountain Dell, Sherry Hollow, Old Arm Chair, and Pharaoh's Glen, while the various camps on the Weber and at other places have been to a great extent deserted. The few who are still rusticating, are making preparations to return within a few days, and the cool rains that have descended throughout the locality will doubtless have its influence in depopulating the summer camps, so that next week's ending will in all probability see the majority of local rest and pleasure-seekers at home.

MRS. AMANDA C. SWENSON.

Mrs. Amanda Carlson Swenson the well known vocalist of this city, was born in Nykoping near Stockholm Sweden. Her voice showed signs of exceptional power at an early age, and as her family were not able to provide for her musical training, the pastor of her native town, the Rev. Mr. Ahlberger, secured the co-operation of some of the wealthy people of the place and succeeded in placing her in the conservatory at Stockholm. Here she won high honors, graduating at the end of three years with exceptional testimonials of her ability, and having won two silver medals. During her stay she had the honor of singing before the king and queen of Sweden, and upon one occasion with the Crown Prince Oscar, afterwards president of the conservatory.

A few years later she accepted the position of first soprano in the famous Swedish Ladies' Quartette, which made an extended musical tour, singing in all the capitals and large cities of northern Europe and America. Their first engagement in the latter country was in New York under Max Strakosch' management and with such distinct success that the tour was extended, the quartette singing with Theodore Thomas in all the large eastern States, with Ole Bull in a concert, in the New England States and afterwards making a tour of the United States, giving their last concert in San Francisco and separating afterwards at Chicago.

Miss Carlson was here persuaded to remain in the United States and accept a position as first soprano in the Episcopal church at Reading, Pa., where she remained two years. At this time she was married and removed with her husband to Kearney, Neb., where she spent several years.

In 1885, Mrs. Swenson came to this city, where her rare ability was soon recognized. Prof. Evan Stephens asked her to take charge of the ladies' chorus which sang at our first Elstedt held that same year and her success was proven in the fact that the chorus was the first prize.

In 1897, Mrs. Swenson again won first prize and much commendation at the great Elstedt given in Denver whither she had accompanied the chorus, her work being very highly praised by the best critics of the city. The work in tone production and fine coloring was especially spoken of.

At our last Elstedt, held two years ago, the test was again successful, as the highest prize was awarded her for the third time.

Dr. Parry, the Elstedt adjudicator, expressed the highest praise for her work, and an evidence of the esteem in which she is held by local musicians was shown in her choice as director of the Orpheus club concert, last March, in the absence of Mr. Peabody.

In private work, Mrs. Swenson has proved herself very competent, her recitals with individual pupils having been of a high order. Her work in tone production and expression with single pupils, as well as chorus and class work, is exceptional, and has elicited high praise and appreciation from all classes.

Feminine Factor in Evolution.

Taken in its widest sense we perceive how completely the scientific differentiation of sex has been worked out in the varying vicissitudes of mankind.

The first dawn of sociology, when the matriarchal rule was supreme, man was a tiler of the ground and a keeper of flocks; the brute reign of force had not begun; the female element kept within limits the destructive katabolic tendencies of the male through the exercise of mother-rule and feminine supremacy. Under that benign age were slowly and surely developing the arts, sciences and industries tending towards man's higher development. As Professor Starr remarks: "The world's industrial and military began then and there. Man has been cunning in devising means of killing beasts and his fellow-men—he has been the inventor of every murderous art. The woman at the first side became the burden-bearer, the basket-maker, the weaver, potter, agriculturist, domesticator of animals—in a word, the inventor of all the peaceful arts of life."

"It is to women, I think," says Elie Reclus, "that mankind owes all that has made us men."

"For the highest ideals in civilization, in humanitarianism, education and government the way was opened in advocacy by mothers and by the female clan groups," is the testimony of the eminent ethnologist, Professor Otis Mason.

And again he states, "It matters not whether we regard the history of the remotest past or the diverse civilizations of the present, the emancipation and exaltation of women are synonyms of progress."

The Secret of Happiness.

"I can truly say that I have much to be thankful for, and that I have discovered the secret of happiness in this sad world. I am in my eighty-second year, and I never could have attained such an age, or kept such perfect health, if I had folded my hands idly sixty years ago and yielded to despair. Fighting against odds is a wonderfully inspiring thing. Some people would say my life has been wrecked, that it is of no value because, the day that I became a bride, I was left a widow and blind. Yet I can truthfully say my life has been worth living. All the hours have been winged, for employment is the chariot of the soul."—Mrs. Helen De Kroyft, in "Success."

What a dreadful paradox!

What would one think of the engineer of a great steamship who would allow his engines to become disabled through a so-called too economical application of lubricating oil?—Henry Cleva.

On the Care of Our Cage Birds.

How and where will you keep your bird?

That cleanliness is obviously of the first importance, and that it is hard to keep fanciful cages free from dirt and parasites, is enough to condemn them. Swiss cottages, pagodas, and the like hung with pendants and sparkling with metallic ornaments, are both useless and dangerous. The bird will pick at the bright points and dangling spangles until it poisons or chokes itself, and the corners and crinkles are so many lodgings for dirt and vermin. Wooden cages are to be avoided because subject to impurity, and brass ones on account of the great danger from verdigris, for the sliding door wears off the gleaming wires are also harmful to a bird's eyes, and they offer no contrast with its yellow plumage. If you must have a cage of the popular bell shape get a painted one, and repaint it as often as seems desirable.
