EVENING NEWS.

Friday, June 22, 1882.

PANGUITCH STAKE CON- FERENCE.

The Pangutch Quarterly Conference was held on the 17th and 18th inst. Apostles Erastus Snow, F. M.
Lyman, and J. H. Smith were present.

Apostle Snow occupied the forenoon on Saturday on the atonement.

The afternoon was taken up with reports from the Presidency of the Stake, Bishops of Wards and presidents of Associations and Quorums.

Apostle Lyman spoke on the needfulness of some of the people, and advised them to stay at home, and not wish to change locations unless called by the proper authorities so to do.

Sunday, 10 a. m.

After the opening exercises, Apostle J. H. Smith, although quite hoarse from a cold, gave an excellent discourse on the position we occupy before the world; our presents and the future that awaited us.

He was followed by Bishop Mc-Intyre, of Panguitch, and Elder E.
W. Snow, of St. George.

2 o'clock p. m.

Apostle Snow stated that Prester had resigned his office, and it had been accepted, owing to the feeble condition of Bro. Henrie, and it was decided to ordain him a Pastor, which met the hearty approval of the Conference.

Jesse W. Crosby, Jr., was chosen President of the Pangutch Stake, with M. M. Steele, and David Cameron as his Counselors.

R. G. Clark was sustained Supt. of the Sunday Schools, and Recorder and Clerk of the Stake; G. W.
Smyth, of the Stake, and James Houston, President of Y. M. M. Association; all of whom, with the general and local authorities, were unanimously sustained.

Apostle Lyman made the closing remarks.

Adjourned for three months.
M. M. STEELE,
Clerk of Stake.

A Woman's Victory.

When they reached the depot, Mr. Mann and his wife gazed with quite a surprised expression at the receding train which was just pulling away from the bridge switch, at the rate of a thousand miles a minute. The first impulse was to run after it, but as the train was out of sight and whistling for Sagetown before they could act on the impulse, they remained in the carriage and disconsolately turned the horses' heads homeward.

"It all comes of having to wait on a woman to get ready," Mr. Mann broke in very grumpy.

"I was ready before you was," replied his wife.

"Great heaven!" cried Mr. Mann, in irrepressible impatience, jerking the horses' jaws out of place, "just listen to that; and I sat out in the buggy yelling for you to come along until the whole neighborhood heard me!"

"Yes," acquiesced Mrs. Mann, with provoking placidity which no one but a woman can assume; "and every time I started down stairs you sent me back for something you had forgotten."

Mr. Mann groaned. "This is too much to bear, when everybody knows that if I was going to Europe I would just rush into the house, put on a clean shirt, grab up my grip-sack, and fly, why you would want at least six months for preparations, and dawdle around the whole day of starting until every train had passed."

Well, the upshot of the matter was that the Manns put off their visit to Aurora until the next week, and it was agreed that each one should get ready and go down to the train and go, and the one who failed to get ready should be left. The day of the match came around in due time. The train was to go at 10.30, and Mr. Mann, after attending to his business, went home at 9.45.

"Now then," he shouted, "only three-quarters of an hour until train time. Fly around, a fair field and no favors you know."

And away they flew. Mr. Mann barged into his room, and rushed into that one, and dived into one closet after another with inconceivable rapidity, clutching under proprietors, and dawdle around the
train had passed."

"Eleanor!" he shrieked, "where are my things?"

"In your bureau drawer," calmly replied Mrs. Mann, who was standing placidly before a glass, calmly and deliberately cooing a refractory cry into his ears.

"Well, by thunder, they ain't!" shouted Mr. Mann, a little annoyed.
"I've emptied every last thing in it that I ever saw before."

Mrs. Mann stepped back a few paces, held her head on one side, and, after satisfying herself that the cry would do, and stay where she put it, she things scattered around on the floor are all mine. Probably you haven't been looking in your own drawer."

"I don't see," testily said the husband, "why you couldn't have put my things out for me, when you had nothing else to do all the morning."

"Because," she said, setting herself into an additional article of resolute, with a willful deliberation, "no body put mine out for me. A fair field and no favors my dear."

Mr. Mann plunged into his shirt like a mad bull at a red flag.

"Foul!" he shouted, in malicious triumph, "No button on the neck."

"Because," she said, sweetly, after a deliberate stare at the fidgeting, impatient man, during which she buttoned her dress and put eleven pins where she would do the most good, "because you have the shirt on wrong side out."

When Mr. Mann slid out of that shirt he began to sweat. He dropped the shirt three times before he got it on, and while it was over his head he heard the clock strike ten.

When his head came through he saw his wife coaxing the ends and tows of her necktie.

"Where's my shirt studs?" he cried.

His wife went out into another room and presently came back with her gloves and hat, and saw him emptying all the boxes he could find in and about the bureau. Then said:

"In the shirt you took off."

The lady put on her gloves while he hunted up and down for his cuffbuttons.

"Eleanor!" he marveled at last,
"I believe you must know where those cuff-buttons are."

"I haven't seen them," said the lady, setting her hat. "Didn't you lay them on the window sill in the last night?"

Her husband remembered, and he went down stairs on the run. He stepped on one of his boots and was immediately landed in the hall at the foot of the stairs with needless dispatch, attended in the train with mission with more bumps than he could count with a Webb's adder, and landed with a bang like the Hell Gate explosion.

"Are you nearly ready, Algenor?" asked the wife of his family, sweetly, leaning over the banister.

The unhappy man groaned.

"Can't you throw down that other boot?" he asked.

His wife plingly kicked it at him.

"My valises?" he inquired, as he tugged away at the boot.

"Up in the dressing room," she answered.

"Packed?"

"I don't know—unless you packed yours, probably not," she replied, with her hand on the doorknob. "I had barely time to pack my own."

She was passing out of the gate when the door opened and he shouted:

"Where in the name of goodness did you put my vest? It has all my money in it!"

"You threw it on the hat-rack," she called back. "Good-bye, dear."

"Eleanor! Eleanor! Eleanor!
Mann! Did you wear off my coat?" She paused, and turned, after signaling the street car man to stay, and cried:

"You threw it on the silver-closet."

And the street car engulfed her graceful figure, and she was seen no more. But the neighbors say that they heard Mrs. Mann charging up and down the house, rushing out at the front door every now and then and shrieking up the deserted street after the unconscious Mrs. Mann to know where his hat was, and where she put the valise key, and if she had any clean socks and undershirts, and that there wasn't a linen collar in the house, and when he went away at last, he left the kitchen door, side door, all the downstairs window and the front gate wide open. And the loungers around the depot recently have seen a woman amused just as the train was pulled out of sight down in the yards, to see a flushed, preening man, with his hat on sideways, his vest buttoned two buttons too high, his cuffs unbuttoned and necktie flying, and grip-sack flapping open and shut like a demented shutter on a March night, and a doer in his hand, dandled across the platform, and halt in the middle of the track, glaring deflected, impatient, wrathful mortification at the departing train, and shaking his head at a wify woman, who was throwing kisses at him from the rear platform of the last car.

Unexpected Criticism.

One of the most eloquent and popular clergymen of Austin, being about to ascend the steps leading to his church a few Sundays ago, was asked by a partially blind old lady, who did not recognize him, to help her up the steps. With his usual urbanity he complied with her request. Just as they reached the top steps she asked him who was going to preach.

"Parson Smith," he replied, that he was his own man.

"O Lord!" exclaimed the old lady.
"Help me down again. I'd rather listen to a man sawing wood. Please help me down again. I don't care to go in."

At first the clergyman was inclined to refuse, but, on reflection, he gently assisted her down the steps again, remarking as they reached the bottom, "You are quite right, madam, about not going into the church. I wouldn't go in either if I was not paid for it.—Editor's Drawer in Harper's Magazine for June.
