ing the appointing power, there would now be no opposition worthy of notice to the merit system of office. Those who oppose it, will, with few excep-tions, be those whose participation in appointments and removals is an above appointments and removals is an absolute usurpation and intemeddling, by which the counterpoise of government has been impaired and its perpetuity is being threatened. To that usurpation to selfish aims of those who promote the gathering of spolls and the distri-bution of offices which are its motive force, the open competitions of merit for appointment and the suppression of Political assessments, are fatal. President Grant approved of a civil service rule to parrest that intermed-dling and to concede to the President and the other appointing officers that

Commissioner, but out of deterence to your wishes, 1 will not urge its accept-ance until such time in the autumn as you may find convenient for a new ap-poin ment. It may not, 1 hope, be thought inappropriate if 1 add some who of a characteristic to the merit system to be the judges. And, I repeat, the final decision is al-'ommissioner, but out of deterence to words of explanation. Prior to the passage of the Civil Service Act of January 16, 1883. I had held under three earlier Presidents, and was then holding nuder President Status Three earlier Presidents, and was then holding under President Arthur an official position, closely analogous to my present office as Civil Service Commissioner. For nearly the whole period I had served without compen-sation and had been compelled to bear my own traveling and other expenses, including those of a journey to Europe and the preparation of an extensive report made at the request of one of those Treshicuts but printed by Cengress. I had taken an active part. by which my time was margely taxed in connection with the preparation and passage of that law. When the time arrived for executing its provisions, it seemed to me that seekers may, notwithstanding the i could not fairly be called upon to vastly augmented strength of an enmake a further sacrifice of my private interest in and of civil service reform, ing from the speedy and disgraceful failure sure to follow any attempt to texecute so chimerical and impractica-ble a statute. In such a situation I had hardly the liberty of a choice, but I entered upon my official duties with the declared purpose of remaining DORMAN B. EATON. PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S REPLY. EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON. the constructive work of making rules. and regulations, and enforcing the new 11, 1885.-Hon. Dorman B. Eaton .- MY DEAR SIE: I am in receipt of your system at its most difficult stage, could be accomplished. At the end of that time I had bedifficult letter tendering your resignation as a member of the Board of the Civil Service Commission. I cannot refrain from expressing my sincers regret that you have determined to withdraw from a position in the public service where come more deeply than ever interested in the practical application of the new system. Its great utility and easy processes had gained the commenda-tion of the President, united more processes had gained the commenda-tion of the President, united more largely the party in power, and secured from a committee of thirteen members of the Democratic House of Repre-sentatives a upanimous report declar-ing the great usefulness of the law and the rules, and commending what it de-clared as the intelligent, efficient, non-partisan and conscientious work of the Civil Service Commission. I could then see no obligation to remain longer. That had been done which the enemies of reform had declared to be impossi-That had been done which the enemies of reform had declared to be impossi-ble. The law and the rules were vin-dicated, but there were impractical methods which, not being matured, I remained to take part in their develop-ment. When, a few months later, I was about to insist on being relieved, those friends dissuaded me by urging that there would be a critical period, in case a new party should come into power, and I saw plainly from hostil-journals that I should be charged, if 1 resigned, with fleeing from the perils of that crisis. It was clear enough that no excuse for my long service, no declaration of my confidence in the re-form policy of the Presidential candi-date and the statesmen of the Demoform policy of the Presidential candi-date and the statesmen of the Demo-cratic party, would relieve me from the cratic party, would relieve me from the damaging plausibility of such a change. As a private citizen I could scorn the imputation, but as a public officer and as being in a private way some-what identified with the cause of civil service reform. I had no right to make in either party to use such charges to its injury. There was another reason why I could not tender my resignation, and should have refused to do so had it been requested at or near the time of your accession to office, for I should regard it as a pernicious precedent, utterly repugnant to the spirit of the Civil Service Commissioner as a polit-vigorous execution of the loctrines and the beginning of each Presidential term. These considerations cou-strained me to continue in my piace strained me to continue in my place strained me to continue in my place until the reform policy of your admin-istration, so clearly defined in your declaration, should be as unmistakably developed in your acts as President as it had been in your acts as Governor of New York. That time has arrived. No candid man can longer pretend to re-gard that policy as indefinite or doubt-ful. Every one of the five months of your administration, during which the Civil Service Act and rules have been enforced with as much breadth, firm-ness and fidelity as under that of Pres-ident Arthur, has not only added new evidence of the nullty of the new strained me to continue in my place form marshalled on the practical side ident Arthur, has not only added new evidence of the utility of the new system upon which he congratuimmediate perfection. The reference in your latter to the attitude of the members of my Cabines to the merit system established by the Civil Service Law besides being en-tirely correct, exhibits an apprecia-tion of honest endeavor in the direc-tion of neast endeavor in the direc-tion of reform and a disputition to do justice to proved sincerity which is most gratifying. If such treatment of those upon whom the duty rests of ad-ministe ing the government according lated the country, but has made more definite the settled purpose of your administration to finally enforce the law and the rules in future. The few changes you have made in the rules have but added to their justice and efficiency. So far as I have been able to learn, there is not a member of your cabinet who has not, as a result of his experience in office, a higher sense than before of the need of enforcing that merit system which the Civil Service Act and the rules have established, from those at the head to the many officers in the postal and customs service to which the examinations extend in all parts of the Union. And whether they be republicana hold-ing over or new officers from the other party, there has come no reason for believing that the merit system is not welcome as a great benefit to the pub-lic service, a great influence for hon-esty in politics and a great relief to the heads of offices. The principles of justice upon which that system is based has a tendency to

> First-That the provisions of the aud Nation should be strengthened and extended to all grades of the public service to which they may be appli-cable, so that the selection of admin-istrative officers in the civil service, so far as possible, be governed solely by capacity and fitness. We insist upon the enforcement of these laws by the public officials not only in letter, but also in spirit. Honorably discharged soldiers and sallors who have shown by competitive examination that they possess the necessary requirements should be given preference in certification and in appointment. Second-That the laws affecting the government of citles should be simplified so as to enable the people to fix responsibility with ease and certainty. Third—That we demand of Congress the passage of an act putting an end to the enlargement of the stock of money formed of silver or based on it is the maintenance of a gold silver; that the maintenance of a gold standard of purity, which gold of all kinds of money in use, is essential to the prosperity of our country, and that the prosperity of our country, and that the restoration of aliver to its former position as good money, through equality with gold before the law in the majority of all commercial nations, must remain until accomplished the chief aim of our monetary policy. The platform reaffirms the protec-tion plank in the Republican National Platform. While it endorses the dying senti-ments of Gen. Grant, it insists that "an end shall be put to the criminal evasion of the guarantees of equal civil interest in and obsides, the enemies of reform, and besides, the enemies of reform were so kind as to charge that I had promoted the act for the treble pur-pose of gaining notoriety and office and salary. But President Arthur, without the least intimation of his purpose, nominated me and I was confirmed as Commissioner. When I was about to decine, the friends of reform, with whom I had labored for many years in its benalf, insisted that I was in duty bound to accept, and the enemies, with amiable consistency, made clear their purpose of charging any refusal on my part as cowardiy and as shrink-ing from the speedy and disgraceful
