BREVITIES.

Judy asks if the first waiter was born in the days of Cheops.

American cars are used on the Mont Cenis railway.

Berlin announces an International Exhibition for 1872.

The Viceroy of Egypt has spent $12,000,000 in ten weeks.

A man in Paris was killed by the bite of a stuffed rattlesnake.

Levy, the cornet player, is to come to this country on a salary of $250 in gold a month.

Victor Hugo is writing an English novel, and is in a quandary about the title.

A German editor styles Mrs. Stanton's Revolution "The Weekly Female Demoralizer."

A jury in Wales recently tossed up a penny to decide a case of manslaughter. Tails won.

"My bark is on the sea," as the cur said when the captain threw him overboard.

An Oneida county farmer raised seven thousand quarts of strawberries from an acre.

Prentice says that man was the chief consideration at the creation. Woman was only a "side issue."

An English jury has decided that it is not murder for a man to stamp his mistress to death with spiked boots.

A man in Ohio got tired while blackberrying, slept upon a railway, and his friends had to do the rest of his "burying" for him.

Jeremiah Cathcart, the inventor of the melodeon, is dead. He received his patents in 1846, and during the past twenty years has secured a fortune.

Neptune, the nautical deity, sleeps in a river "bed," washes in a lake "basin," and keeps his dolphins in a water "shed."—Judy.

A Belgian challenges the world to a gastronomic duel. He proposes to eat a hundred dozen oysters and finish with a beef-steak.

A summer boarder in a country village says that at the meeting house they have a beautiful chime of belles—in the entry after the services.

A certain doctor asked Diogenese which he thought the best way to die. "Surely," he replied you might have learned that much from your patients."

"Are you not afraid that your wife will get married again when you die?" "I hope she may, as there will be one man in the world who will know how to pity me."

The Japanese novelist, Kioyte Bakin by name, has written one story in 106 volumes, which was 38 years going through the press. A serial, and no mistake!

A Chicagoan attempted suicide in the lake recently. A friend rescued him, and in doing so tore his pantaloons; whereupon he thrashed the friend for his carelessness.

The daily ornaments of Ben Griffith, a Texan desperado, were three six-shooters and a double-barreled shot gun. Through the energy of a sheriff he now ornaments a rustic graveyard.

A funeral in Norfolk, Va., not long since, was greatly astonished by the sudden lifting up of the coffin lid and the voice of the supposed corpse asking for a mint julep. The interment was indefinitely postponed.

The leaf of the plantain, the kind having a red stalk, is said to be a certain cure for the "hankering" after tobacco. Should there be any of the few who "chaw" anxious to be cured, let them masticate a little plantain leaf a day or two, and they will find relief.

"Sir, I'd have you to know that I keep one of the best tables in the city, sir," exclaimed an indignant New York landlady to a boarder, who had been finding fault with his fare. "That may be true, ma'am," quietly retorted the boarder; "but you put very little upon it."

A young lady, who teaches music in an academy in Western New York, sent an order to a publisher recently, in which she had spelt the words very poorly. She apologized by adding a postscript as follows: "You must eskews this letter, as I pla bi noat, but spel bi ear."

A London visitor asked an Irish seaman belonging to the coast-guard at Hastings, if they got any prize money. "Och, indeed your honor, yes; but it is sifted through a ladder, and all that falls through goes to the officers—all that sticks to the steps is left to the men."

According to a recent analyser, English beer contains cream of tartar, alum, green vitriol, small quantities of copper, sometimes lead, picric acid, cocculus indicus, grains of paradise, coloring matter of various descriptions, quassia wood, and the harmless, but still needless compounds, liquorice, molasses, coriander, capsicum, carraway seeds; ginger, salt, malted horsebeans, etc.

"Is it healthful to eat unleavened bread hot from the oven, or fresh? If so, why is this an exception to other bread in this respect?"

It is unhealthful to eat unleavened bread—or, in fact, anything else—hot, but it is healthful to eat it warm and fresh. Then is when it should be eaten. Bread raised with yeast is unhealthful, if eaten while warm and fresh, for the reason that the saccarine matter of the grain is changed by the process of fermentation to carbonic acid gas and alcohol, and it is necessary that the bread should stand awhile to allow the alcohol to evaporate. In unleavened bread there is no injurious chemical substance evolved.—Herald of Health.
