

Mine and Smelter Managers Find It Difficult to Get a Summer Storage Supply.

APPREHENSIVE OF A FAMINE.

Consequences May Be More Serious Than Last Winter-Outlook Anything But Bright.

The fuel situation is viewed with considerable alarm by the managers of the Utah mines and smelters and the general impression prevails among them that the experiences of last winter-only in a worse form-are to be repeated.

Early in the year, several of the larger operators concluded that they would avoid any embarassment during the coming winter by putting in summer storage orders, but a survey of the siuation during the past few days has revealed the fact that very few of these requisitions have been filled.

The Utah Consolidated Mining company has probably fared better than any of the operating companies. According to officials of that corporation there are about 3,000 tons of coal in the storage bins; but it will require 10,000 tons, in addition to what the company tons, in addition to what*the company might reasonably expect during famine times, to tide over. The Boston Consolidated company weat to considerable expense in the construction of bins for the storage of coal at its Bingham mine with the as-surance given by the fuel companies and the railroads that there would be no difficulty in filing them up during the summer months. But labor has been scarce at the mines and other con-ditions have arisen over which the fuel been scarce at the mines and other con-ditions have arisen over which the fuel and transportation companies have had no control, with the consequence that the bins at Bingham are still empty. The Utah Copper, and for that matter, nearly every other mining company in Bingham has been a sufferer in a simi-lar manner. General Manager Han-chett of the Boston Consolidated and other Newhouse enterprises said today that he has been barely able to get enough coal to keep the mill at New-house in operation and this is the time of year when fuel is supposed to be the most plentiful.

most plentiful. The fact has been pointed out that unless these storage orders are filled during the next month the mining and during the next month the mining and smelting companies of the state will have a hard time to keep going as practically all of the available railroad equipment used to move coal from the mines will be needed in the beet fields, and the beet sugar companies will have to get coal to run their factories. The situation as fer as the mining man is is situation as far as the mining man is concerned is far from satisfactory and it is no wonder that the future is look-ed forward to with not a little appre-

The Newhouse Mines & Smelters cor-poration's management has lived in hopes that the new electric power line being built in Beaver county by the Telluride Power company would be completed before winter arrives, but it has been learned that the latter cor-poration has found it difficult to get prompt deliveries of material for use in construction, as well as equipment of its plant on the Beaver river. But to cap the climax it has been simply impossible to get the desired number of laborers, and the result of it all is, the company will not be in position to deliver power until several months The Newhouse Mines & Smelters corto deliver power until several months later than had anticipated.

MISTOOK THE BOTTLE.

A young man named Frank Harris was almost killed this morning by mistaking a bottle of permanganate of potash for a bottle of wine. Young Harris had been drinking during the night at 60 south West Temple street This morning he awoke with a thirst, and seeing a bottle handy and thinking it was wine, took a liberal drink. In a few seconds he discovered his mis-take. The bottle contained perman-ganate of potash. Harris went into-convulsions and was rendered uncon-scious. The police were notified and the patrol wagon summoned. Harris was taken on the stretcher to police headquarters where he was placed in the emergency hospital. Dr. Faul at-tended the young man and soon had him out of danger. This morning he awoke with a thirst,

 Last Legislature Signis Secretary of State—Special Meeting Probable.
The last legislature, it is claimed, failed to make provisions for the sai-lary of the secretary of state after the first Monday in January, 1909. If this contention is correct a special meeting of the legislature will have to be called before the election of 1908 to remedy ffairs. The constitution of Utah, ex-plains Atty. Cyrus Gatrell, who made the discovery, provides a specified sai-lary for the secretary of state unless "otherwise provided by law" and as the legislature of 1901 changed the salary it is argued the constitutional provision has been made void. The last legislature amended the provision passed in 1901 but did not include the secretary of state's salary in its rul-ings. C. S. Tingey, the present incum-bent, is not worrying as the new law does not become effective until the expiration of his term but his succes-sor is the person who is to suffer from the reported oversight of the lawmak-ers. Mr. Gatrell further explains that ithe next legislature cannot effect the necessary correction as the law states implicitely that salaries of state of-ficials cannot be changed during their terms. As the next legislature and secretary of state go into office togeth-er the only hope is held in a special meeting of the last legislature. BLOOM HEARING TODAY.
