

was seriously entertained of bombarding the cottage with artillery, but to the civil authorities objected unless the military forces were prepared to give a guarantee that no other property would be injured. Then it was decided to blow up the dwelling with dynamite. The railway companies declined to transport so dangerous an explosive. They had a peculiar interest in prolonging the show, if it were possible, and the military forces were then made for transporting the bombs by motor cars. They were accompanied by a detachment of sappers.

CREPT UP TO HOUSE.

On the tenth day after the beginning of the military siege, at 1 o'clock in the morning, accompanied by two sergeants and five sappers, protected by steel breast plates, crawled up to the cottage and laid something like a hundred pounds of dynamite against one of the walls. So stealthily did they do their work that Roy did not hear them. With equal success a long fuse was laid to the explosives.

EXPLOSION DID IT.

Two hours later a general bugle call sounded. It was the signal for all parties to stand out of danger. A few minutes later, at a distance of several hundred yards, the Lieutenant ignited the fuse. A deafening explosion followed. When the smoke had cleared away it was found that one end of the building and part of the roof had been blown away. But the door still held fast. Some cartridges were placed against it and it was speedily shattered.

WAS MAKING ESCAPE.

A hasty search of the ruins failed to reveal any signs of the law-defying Roy who had been apprised of its night and majesty in this stern fashion. But the vigilant better half of the mayor of the town was on the watch with a pair of field glasses. She espied a figure gliding through a field of corn some 200 yards distant and raised the alarm. An excited crowd made a run for the spot. Roy—for it was he—started to run. With a yell the mob sped after him. The explosion had left him in no condition for a sprint race and they soon overtook him. Kicked, buffeted and spat upon, there would soon have been an end of him if some gentlemen had not galloped up and taken him in charge.

A NICE PROBLEM.

When he recovered consciousness some hours later he said that he had been asleep with a rifle by his side when the explosion had occurred and taking advantage of the fall of smoke that overhung the place had bolted through the breach in the wall. That he escaped serious injury by the explosion is hardly less than miraculous. He might have been able to get clear away but for the vigilance of the mayor's wife. He said that he felt secure against a night assault because he had a law book in the house in which he read that no legal process could be served between sunset and sunrise. He construed that as barring bombs between those hours and therefore regarded himself as the victim of illegal methods.

WIFE OF A NOTED FRENCH AUTHOR.

Mme. Edmond Rostand, herewith depicted, is the talented wife of the young French poet and playwright who wrote "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "The Roman Tragedy."

Mme. Rostand is a French actress and a great dramatist.

is talent and in one of the cleverest amateur actresses in Paris. She is in great demand in society theatricals, and her own little entertainments are among the most popular and exclusive social affairs in the republic.

DETECTED THE COUNTERFEIT.

"We have a man in this office," remarked one of the officials of the Treasury department the other day, "who is without a peer anywhere in the country when it comes to spotting a counterfeit coin. His faculty for telling the spurious product has been developed to a remarkable degree. He gave an illustration of his skill the other day. On that table in the corner there were piled up a couple hundred half-dollars. Apparently they were all sound and genuine specimens from the government mint. Our expert walked into the room, and, giving one glance at the pile of halves, twenty-five feet distant, he quietly remarked: "There's a counterfeit in that stack." "He then stepped up to the pile and pulled a coin from out of the middle of the pile. It was tested and found to be spurious. I asked the man to tell how he discovered the counterfeit. "By the reflection of the light," he replied. "The rays cast from that coin were wholly different from those sent out by the other pieces. That coin stood out as distinctly from the rest as a blood-red poppy in a field of white roses."—Brooklyn Eagle.

AN HONEST WOMAN.

One evening a dumpy little woman, with solemn eyes holding by the hand two dumpy little boys, also with solemn eyes, came to the box office of a theater where a western variety troupe was playing. Handing in a quarter, she asked meekly for the best seat she could get for the money. As the ticket man handed out the desired piece of cardboard, his eye fell upon the upturned face of the children. "These children must have tickets if you take them in," he said. A distressed look came into the little woman's eyes and she answered: "Oh no, mister! I never pay for them. I wouldn't bring them along only their father works at nights and there is no one to leave them with. I never can spare more than a quarter, and I just love to see a show. We don't cheat you any mister, for they both go sound asleep just as soon as they get into a seat, and don't see a single bit of the show." The argument, or the anxious eyes, convinced the ticket man, and the two children were allowed to go in. Toward the end of the second act, one of the fathers came out of the auditorium and handed a 25 cent piece to the ticket man.

THE LAST OF A FAMOUS CALIFORNIA FAMILY.

Beautiful in feature and beautiful in character, the last representative of the well known Crocker family a few days ago slipped away into the great hereafter. Mrs. Sarah E. McKee, widow of the late Rev. Jesse McKee, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. I. C. Curtis, 210 South Olive street. She was aged 55 years, and without attendant suffering her life peacefully ebbed away. Mrs. McKee came to this city from Troy, N. Y., with her husband in 1872, becoming pastor of the First United Presbyterian church. After her death she remained constant to the church of her choice, and during all the years that have intervened since has been the good angel of her denomination. Wherever there was suffering and discouragement her gentle hand and benevolent face were seen to comfort and strengthen, and wherever grief went unappeased there her means were divided to lend aid and succor.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG FARM.

Baltimore American.—It is estimated that the total area for farming purposes in the United States is $1,000,000,000, an area larger than England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, France, Germany, Austria, Spain, Japan and the Transvaal. There are 14,000,000 persons engaged in agricultural pursuits, while all other industries employ but 14,000,000.

HOW THE JAPANESE ADVANCE IS DELAYED.

The cut illustrates quite forcibly the manner in which the retreating Russians devastate the country as they move. The pursuing Japanese find the railroads badly damaged and the bridges either blown up or torn to pieces. The mikado's engineers are kept constantly busy at repairing these wrecks, and this much time is consumed. This, however, is precisely what is intended, since the longer the delay the less chance there is to be overtaken. If the streams are fordable and will admit of the passage of the supply wagons the Japanese do not wait to repair the dismantled bridges.

ONLY SULKY RACING DOGS IN THE WORLD.

As far as is known the two dogs shown in the cut are the only ones that have been trained to follow the race track driven to sulks. These intelligent and speedy St. Bernards are the property of the little boy and girl who are driving them, the children of M. J. Brooks of Franklin, N. H. Juno and Macot, as they are called, show the true racing spirit and are eager to win. When their young drivers hold a tight rein the dogs trot, and when given full rein they break into a run, and a speedy one. These novel racing animals are only a year old. Their enterprising breeder intends to make dog racing popular.
