

LEAVES FROM OLD ALBUMS.

ELDER JOHN HENRY SMITH.

How He Looked When He Was Twenty-five Years of Age. Old-time friends of Elder John Henry Smith will readily recognize the above photograph. It was taken in the spring of 1874, just prior to his departure for Great Britain on his first mission. He left home in June of that year and returned in August, 1875, laboring in the Birmingham conference during his absence. Elder Smith is now in his 87th year, which would make him a little over 25 years of age at the time the picture above shown was taken.

BOOKS.

Edwin Lefevre whose mystery of the money market, "The Golden Fleece," after a successful run in McClure's Magazine has just appeared in book form, gives an interesting explanation of the origin of the plot. "The story," he says, "is based upon a set theory of mine. I believe that the quality of mind—genius you might call it—which makes a man successful in Wall street is precisely the same as the quality of mind which makes him successful as a poet, a novelist, or an artist. At bottom it is high-powered imagination, guiding the captain of finance to see new channels for investment that his less capable brothers do not see, in the same way that it leads the great painter to see beauties in nature to which other artists' eyes are blind. The plot of "The Golden Fleece" developed naturally in harmony with this idea. The big capitalists in Wall street are not hopelessly sordid and unromantic; and when young artists come to them and began depositing millions of dollars in gold, he played upon their imaginative faculties. They immediately went further than ordinary men would have done, and made up their minds that Grinnell was an alchemist and was making the gold. I am confident that had the situation in the part of the dramatic situation, had already been dealt with, I will have worked out would have taken place." Mr. Lefevre has been over six years the financial editor of one of the big New York dailies, and his opinions have behind them the authority of an extremely close study of the financial world and financial matters of the United States—McClure Phillips, New York.

"A Knot of Blue" (Little, Brown & Co., publishers, Boston) is a story of the Heart's Deep Pages," by Sewell Ford, who contributed the novelette, "Cherub Devine," to the February number. Susan Bayne Fitzworth has a bright sparkling bit of fiction in "The Doing of the Lamb," which will have to be read to decide whether it is a story of Wall street operations. A significant feature is an essay on "Americans in London," by Lady Willshire, who is a prominent figure in London society. The poetry is contributed by Charlotte Becker, Theodore Garrison, Philip Gerry, William Hamilton Hayne, Madison Cowen and Charles Hanson Towne—Albion Magazine Co., New York. Two complete novels, five serials and nine short stories make up the contents of the June Popular Magazine—surely an imposing array of fiction for a magazine. The "Fletcher of Wheat," by Howard Pitzalan, and "The Tale of St. Anthony," by George Henson-Howard, are serials. The "Lion of Hagerston," by W. W. Andrewson, and "McKenzie, Richard, March and Louis Joseph Vance," are serials. "The Trivette War," begins in this issue, and, judging by the opening chapters, it will prove both uncommon and uncommonly good. Leigh Gordon Giltner, George Gibbs, Herbert Thompson, Chas. Steinfert Pearson, Louis Tracy and others contribute the short stories. It is an exceptionally good number—Street & Smith, New York.

WHAT THE BEST MAGAZINES CONTAIN.

Albion's for June will amply satisfy the anticipation with which this magazine is awaited every month by its rapidly increasing number of readers. "The Outgoing of Simon," by Elizabeth Dyer, is the novelette; it is a genuine love story, but one of the unbacked sort. Its plot is original, but plausible, and it contains a number of intensely dramatic situations. David Graham Phillips continues his great serial, "The Deluge," in which he has, in the person of Matthew Blacklock, consummated one of the finest pieces of character drawing in modern fiction. Holman F. Day and Emerson G. Taylor supply the humor of the number in their stories, "Plug" story and "The Avoys." "Queen Bees and Old Maids," respectively, the latter, as may be guessed from its title, being an automobile story. Robert E. Montgomery has a strongly dramatic story in "Supper With Nation," which is treated in a somewhat unusual manner. Two excellent travel stories are "By the Fountain," by Margaret Houston, and "Lago's Mushrooms," by Frances Wilson. An exciting and intensely dramatic racing story is "The Blood of Blunk Bonny," by Martha McCulloch. "Lago's Mushrooms," by Anna A. Rogers, is an amusing story of conjugal misunderstandings. A strong society story, describing some social problems, is "The Flattering," by George Hubbard. A delicious short story is "Concerning

Shakespeare Suffered From Insomnia, Says Churton Collins

Special Correspondence. LONDON, May 10.—Of the making of theories about Shakespeare there is no end, and the latest person of real prominence to weave one is Prof. Churton Collins, who thinks that the bard suffered from insomnia. "He must," says this eminent Shakespearean authority, in a magazine article just published, "have been distressingly familiar with the tortures of the madly. Time after time his characters are made to refer to the agonies of sleeplessness, and the language of reason. To say nothing of the famous lines in 'Macbeth,' and of the two great soliloquies in the second part of 'Henry VIII.' and in 'Henry V.' what is Margaret's case on Richard III. No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine. 'What is lago's first exclamation after he has wrecked Othello's peace of mind?' 'Not penny, nor mandragora. Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep Which thou owedst yesterday.' 'What is Prior Laurence's instructive comment, when Romeo comes to visit him in the early morning?' Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye. And where care lodges sleep will never lie;

A FATAL ERROR

A man steps into your office, draws up his chair, and talks right into your face. His breath is offensive. You only thought how to get rid of him and his business. You cut him short with, "I am not interested."

SOZODONT

is essential to one whose breath is not pure and sweet. Penetrating the little crevices, it deodorizes, sweetens and purifies them, and makes you feel genteel and clean-out.

man's fickleness and woman's steadfastness, conquering love. The knot of time was the low fair Aimée de Chagnac, the bride lover, to whom he had wanted to regain his self-respect after having been duped by an intriguing woman and a cunning villain. The story attracted a unique, adventurous life of living and achieving, and it throbs with romantic tenderness. Although not an historical romance in any sense, the scene is laid in that quaint spot where the Old World and the New have met for centuries—Old Quebec—a field in which Mr. Wilson has shown himself a worthy competitor of the best writer of romantic fiction.

William R. A. Wilson, author of "A Knot of Blue," is a native of Central Illinois, a graduate of Williams college, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. After practicing successfully as a physician, he abandoned his profession for literary pursuits and travel. His previous book, "A Rose of Normandy," published two years ago, is now in its 7th edition.

The Funk & Wagnalls company, New York and London, announces that the long awaited Standard Encyclopedia is at last in course of preparation. The publisher announces that the work was made to the press several years ago, soon after the completion of the great Standard Dictionary. Then new channels for investment that his less capable brothers do not see, in the same way that it leads the great painter to see beauties in nature to which other artists' eyes are blind. The plot of "The Golden Fleece" developed naturally in harmony with this idea. The big capitalists in Wall street are not hopelessly sordid and unromantic; and when young artists come to them and began depositing millions of dollars in gold, he played upon their imaginative faculties. They immediately went further than ordinary men would have done, and made up their minds that Grinnell was an alchemist and was making the gold. I am confident that had the situation in the part of the dramatic situation, had already been dealt with, I will have worked out would have taken place." Mr. Lefevre has been over six years the financial editor of one of the big New York dailies, and his opinions have behind them the authority of an extremely close study of the financial world and financial matters of the United States—McClure Phillips, New York.

The literary folk here who, like Sidney Lee, deplore the conquests of the "American collector," are delighted at the repulse of some of these gentlemen by the public spirited citizens of Rheims. In this picturesque French city there stands a mansion known as the Musician's House, which is the only remaining vestige existing in the old city of thirteenth century architecture. The owner recently received an offer of $25,000 for it from an American, whose name is not forthcoming, but who proposed to have the place pulled down, and to transport the chief decorative motives to the United States, where they were to be rebuilt into another house. The owner of the mansion thought the offer too good to be refused, but had the grace to give the city a prior right to the purchase. Englishmen probably would have left the place to its fate, but in France they are attached to their historic relics. Forty thousand francs toward the amount required was raised by a public subscription almost immediately, the state has given a subvention of 20,000 francs, and the municipal council of Rheims has just decided to vote the other 30,000 francs needed to preserve the interesting old building.

One of the first things that Signor Marconi will do on his return from the United States will be to unveil a tablet which has just been placed on the house in Clifton once occupied by that pioneer of science, Humphrey Davy. The tablet to be unveiled by Marconi will also state the fact that two other famous people are connected with the same house—Thomas Lovell Beddoes, the poet, with whose family Davy lodged, and Beddoes' aunt, Maria Edgeworth.

I hear that among the unpublished work left by the late Jules Verne is a book entitled, "A Trip to England and Scotland." It has not yet been decided if it will see the light.

HAZARD CHURCH. Ancient witchery was believed in by only a few but the true merit of De Witt's Witch, Hazel Bates is known by every one who has used it for boils, sores, tetter, eczema and piles.

Strength and fragrance saved by grinding Golden Gate at home (not too fine) fresh each morning. Aroma-light tins. Never in bulk. J. A. Folger & Co. Established in 1850. S. Francisco.

to its fate, but in France they are attached to their historic relics. Forty thousand francs toward the amount required was raised by a public subscription almost immediately, the state has given a subvention of 20,000 francs, and the municipal council of Rheims has just decided to vote the other 30,000 francs needed to preserve the interesting old building.

I hear that among the unpublished work left by the late Jules Verne is a book entitled, "A Trip to England and Scotland." It has not yet been decided if it will see the light.

HAZARD CHURCH. Ancient witchery was believed in by only a few but the true merit of De Witt's Witch, Hazel Bates is known by every one who has used it for boils, sores, tetter, eczema and piles.

GREEN, FANCY, IMPORTED AND STAPLE GROCERIES, FISH, CURED MEATS, POULTRY, ETC. Telephones Nos. 904-905-906. W. S. HENDERSON, 267-269-271 South Main St., SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH. WHOLESALE. RETAIL. WHOLESALE TRADE ESPECIALLY SOLICITED.

IDAHO REAL ESTATE. If you wish to secure a good farm on easy terms, or fine fruit, sugar beet, alfalfa and grain land with abundance of water, and a lovely climate, come or write to Blackfoot Real Estate Co., Blackfoot, Idaho. We also have plenty of MONEY TO LOAN AT EIGHT PER CENT. ELIAS S. KIMBALL, President. J. Z. STEWART, Manager.

REDUCED RATES EAST. ONE FARE PLUS $2 ROUND TRIP. To Kansas City, St. Joe, All Missouri River Points and Intermediate points East thereof up to and including Chicago, St. Paul, St. Louis and Memphis. Dates of Sale: May 27 and 29, June 3, 5, 10 and 12. Final Return Limit Sept. 15. Let Us Know When You Go, and We Will DO THE REST. C. F. WARREN, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, 411 Dooly Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Burlington Route TEACHERS' EXCURSION EAST. On May 27th and 29th; and on June 3rd, 5th, 10th and 12th, round-trip tickets will be on sale from Salt Lake City, Utah, as follows: Chicago and return $44.50 St. Louis and return $35.50 St. Paul and Minneapolis and return $43.00 Omaha, St. Joseph and Kansas City and return $23.00 Corresponding low rates to all points east of Missouri River. Through Pullman Sleeping Car to Chicago daily, without charge. Through Tourist Cars three times a week. For further information, please call on, or write to R. F. NESLEN, General Agent, 79 West 2nd South Street, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

POEMS EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW.

THE ROSE-COLORED GLASS. Once, when a child, I found somewhere A piece of clear red glass, And when I looked through it, it brought A miracle to pass: The dull old earth and clouded sky Became most wondrous bright, And trees and flowers and everything Rejoiced in rosy light. And through the years of later life Some happy folk I've known Who'd found the magic of the glass And made it all their own; Some happy folk for whom the sun Still shone on cloudy days, For whom the flowers would always spring Along the stony ways; Brave-hearted folk who yet could smile When troubles closely crept, Who ever had a word of cheer For those who sighed or wept; Dear folk whom it was good to know, Who made the dull grow bright, And shed about their way on earth A rosy heavenly light. And oft I think how good a time 'T would surely bring to pass, If all of us could look on life Through their rose-colored glass! —Charles Stewart Pratt in March Housekeeper.

TRODDEN HARD.

Three thousand years or more ago King Solomon, both sage and hard, Observed a fact he noted thus: "The way of the transgressor's hard." The question why is oft discussed, But the solution seems complete: The sinner's way is hard because It's trodden by so many feet! —Smart Set.

NOTES.

The recent death of Miss Sarah Chauncey Woolsey, better known as Susan Collage, at Newport, R. I., at the age of seventy, removes another favorite author of for young people, whose books, like those of Louisa M. Alcott's will be read by boys and girls of the second and third generation. "The Kats-Dits" books, the first of which was published in 1873, have enjoyed widespread popularity, a new edition being printed annually to supply the demand. Her publishers, Little, Brown & Co., were anticipating a new book from her, the first for many years, when the news of her sudden death was received. Miss Lillian Whiting sailed for Italy before her new book, "The Outlook Beautiful," was published, to secure additional material for a more elaborate volume, to be called "The Florence of Italy." Miss Whiting has been spending the winter in Washington, where she has been the recipient of many social honors. "The Outlook Beautiful," just published by Little, Brown & Co., is a book of the nature of her well-known "World Beautiful" series, and, therefore, appeals to a large audience. Miss Lily Dougan, author of the new mystery story, "The Summit House Mystery," which is rapidly passing from one edition to another, tells some interesting facts concerning its conception. She says, "A story which contained some of the main incidents here depicted was once told me by a venerable lawyer in one of the American cities of the Atlantic seaboard. Afterwards I made a four-months' stay in those regions of wonderful beauty described in this book, and, wanting a plot which would work in with those alluring moods of nature—the bloom of the awesomeness, the rapturous delight, and above all, the aspects of victorious calm—that distinguished mountain scenery from that of our everyday level, the legal problem, which had taken strong hold upon my imagination, seemed to suggest a drama suited to the stage and scenery. The story, except its ending, was accordingly written. My final difficulty was that I could not find a solution to tally with my characters, and it was some years later that I woke up one morning among the et's letters in an interesting sketch of Victor Hugo's life at Guernsey, and the scene of his most active literary period. These love-letters, which are about to be given to the world for the first time, are the missives which inspired so many of the Hugo letters published in France. The significance of Mr. Wack's discovery is recognized in France, and M. Francis Coppé has written an introduction to the book, incidentally revealing many interesting anecdotes of Hugo and his literary conferees. While in Guernsey, Mr. Wack made the acquaintance of many people who were personally intimate with Hugo and obtained from them much information concerning the domestic life of the poet which was not in danger of escaping record. The book, which is charmingly printed and profusely illustrated, is a valuable contribution to the history of French literature, and brimful of interest to the general reader.

Used Round the World Walter Baker & Co.'s Chocolate AND Cocoa The leader for 124 Years. Grand Prize at World's Fair (St. Louis) Walter Baker & Co. Ltd. Dorchester, Mass. 45 HIGHEST AWARDS IN EUROPE AND AMERICA

A new volume of poems by Paul Laurence Dunbar, the negro poet, has just been issued by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Company. "Lyrics of Sunshine and Shadow" is the title of the volume, which will be uniform in size with "Lyrics of Lowly Life," "Lyrics of the Heart's Beat," and "Lyrics of Love and Laughter."

In writing her book "The Girl from Home," Mrs. Isabel Strong had not only such valuable material as she must have gained as amanuensis for her stepfather, Robert Louis Stevenson, but the good effects of vigilant and critical attention to her work on the part of her brother, Lloyd Osbourne, of her son Austin Strong, in whose one-act play Francis Wilson has had recent success, and of Mrs. Frank Norris, whose critical discernment had already been of valuable assistance to the author of "The Pit." What with this friendly grim criticism and her thorough and affectionate studies as to how to write "when Kalkous was king," it is little wonder that she made her story so well wrought and vivid a picture of life on the "Island."

Miss Lillian Whiting sailed for Italy before her new book, "The Outlook Beautiful," was published, to secure additional material for a more elaborate volume, to be called "The Florence of Italy." Miss Whiting has been spending the winter in Washington, where she has been the recipient of many social honors. "The Outlook Beautiful," just published by Little, Brown & Co., is a book of the nature of her well-known "World Beautiful" series, and, therefore, appeals to a large audience.

The works of Leo Tolstol have been translated into 28 languages, often appearing under fake titles and in fragmentary form. Frequently whole pages cease to have any relation to the rest of the work. In other instances, sections of his work have been cut out. The edition of his complete works in 28 volumes now in course of publication by Funk & Wagnalls company has Tolstol's entire approval. He has co-operated with the translators, Louis and Aylmer Maude, and has highly commended their work. With reference to his work "What is Art," the omission of and alterations made by the Russian censor so incensed the author that he wrote in the preface of Mr. Maude's translation, "The book appears now for the first time in its true form. More than one edition has already been issued in Russia, but in each case it has been so mutilated by the censor that I request all who are interested in my views on art only to judge of them by the work in its present shape."

Mary Inlay Taylor, the author of "My Lady Clancarty" and other romances should write plays, according to Mrs. Leslie Carter. Having read "My Lady Clancarty," this well-known actress wrote the publishers, Little, Brown, & Co., as follows: "I have received the book 'My Lady Clancarty' which you were good enough to send me, and I have read it with a great deal of interest. It is beautifully written, and the story is most fascinating. Who does not the authors try to have hand at the play? She would seem to have the ability for that form of writing."

Messrs. C. P. Putnam's Sons will shortly publish a volume from the pen of Mr. Henry Wellington Wack treating of the Romantic Attachment of Victor Hugo and Juliette Drouot. Recently Mr. Wack, while staying in Guernsey, had the good fortune to discover a basket of letters addressed to the great French poet by Juliette Drouot. Conscious of the intense interest taken by admirers of Hugo in the letters which constitute the dominant fact in the life of the kind of romance, Mr. Wack has embodied Madame Drou-

CANCER CURED WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS. (Lancet, Times, Herald, etc.) DR. RYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.