Except for Their Tilt, the City Council Meeting Was

ROW OVER GRADING STREETS.

The Breaking Point.

Only one little disturbance arose at the meeting of the city council last night to mar the peace of that body, and that occurred between Black and Carter, "American" councilman, in re-act to the work of grading the streets in the eastern part of the city. Carter, the eastern part of the city, told the council that Black did not tell the truth in regard to the matter before the council, and for a few seconds it looked as though there would be trouble between the two councilmen. President Davis, however, was equal to the occasion and called both men to order and thus put a stop to hostilities.

A STRONG PROTEST.
The property owners along Third and Sixth streets entered a strong protest against the street grading. President Davis, however, was equal to the occasion and called both men to order and thus put a stop to hostilities.

The property owners along Third and Sixth streets entered a strong protest against the street grading. President Davis, however, was equal to the occasion and called both men to order and thus put a stop to hostilities.

WHEN TROUBLE CAME.
Street Supervisor Raleigh called the attention of the council to the protests and it was during the consideration of his letter that the trouble arose. Ferguson wanted to know who gave the street grading authority to cut the streets down and put them in such bad condition. Carter stated that he and Councilman Black had visited the streets in question and that Black was a party to cutting down the street. He stated that the streets were in very poor condition and said that the streets committee was to blame for it.

Black admitted that he consented to having the street cut down and thought it would be placed in good condition before the weather arrived. As to the appropriation he said that he was not in question and that Black was a party to cutting down the street. He stated that the streets were in very poor condition and said that the streets committee was to blame for it.

THE NAUGHTY WORDS.
"I don't like to call Mr. Black a story teller," said Carter.
"I don't think you will," holly replied Black arising from his seat.
"I will if I feel like it," was the rejoinder of Carter. At this point President Davis called the men to order and told them to resume their seats and that he would not permit any more of the kind of talk that was being carried on.

The claim of D. O. Wiley, Jr., of $10 for a horse which was sold by the city was allowed. The horse belonged to Mr. Wiley but had strayed from his home and was found by the city and finally sold for $10. The city claimed a claim against the horse for its value amounting to $9 so Mr. Wiley filed for the balance received from the sale of the animal.
O'Donnell introduced a resolution providing for a weekly report by the plumbing inspector to the city board of health of all sewer connections made during the week together with the description of the property connected and the name of the owner. The resolution was adopted.

AMENDMENT MADE.

An amendment was made to the special police ordinance by which the chief of police will have the authority to appoint special police officers for a term of one year only and the city recorder will keep a record of all appointments of special policemen.
An amended ordinance was also passed making it a misdemeanor for one to impersonate either a regular or special police officer. The penalty for such an offense is a fine of $300 and imprisonment in the county jail for six months. The ordinance also makes it a misdemeanor for a special policeman to assume authority as an officer elsewhere than about the private property which he was appointed to protect.

BID ACCEPTED.
City Engineer Kelsey notified the council that the board of canal presenters had accepted the bid of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., of $6,385 for fuel oil pump and fire pump at the Utah dam pumping plant and recommended that the mayor and recorder be authorized to sign a contract for the same. The recommendation was concurred in by the council.

Christine Berg presented a claim for damages in the sum of $1,000 for personal injuries alleged to have been received by her on the night of Sept. 22, while walking on an expanse of the street at First West and First South streets, which was left unguarded. The claim is claimed by petitioner, F. J. Moran who is walking by Contractor in that locality. The matter was referred to the committee on claims.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater—The liveliest, busiest, and most glibly show the Salt Lake Theater boards have held this season, and for many seasons, was seen last night in "The Royal Chef." As far as "business" of the electric battery sort goes, and as far as the best budgeting array of ever-changing costumes is concerned, "The Royal Chef" certainly stands unexcelled. It is crowded too with catchy ballads and choruses, and most of them caught the fancy of the audience so heartily that scores spun the presentation out to rather undue length, but for that the audience, or the galleries, had only themselves to blame. The cast is crowded with people who are capable without being brilliant. The principal comedy work is in the hands of Mr. Herman who is the man from Chicago landed amid the Orientals, gave a laughable presentation of a more or less faithful copy of the man from Cincinnati in "The Prince of Pilsen." Mr. Felch (he of the old time "Salt Pasha" was mildly funny, where he ought to be uproariously so. Mr. Ragland gave a fine impersonation of the Rajah. Miss Hutchison made a pretty picture as the Rajah's daughter, and had many number of recalls. The other parts were in good hands, but the business of the chorus, the dancing, costumes, lights, and the throwing out in the audience at the close of a shower of paper ribbons and confetti, all made up the real hits of the evening.
The same bill goes tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

In the box office at the theater last night John Cort, the Portland manager, was shaking hands with numerous friends. He was passing through Salt Lake en route from the east where he had been to look out for his number, attractions, such as Florence Roberts, Max Figman, and many others, and passed here long enough to receive reports of what the Stuart Opera company—one of the western ventures—was doing in the way of business. While in Salt Lake Mr. Cort received a dispatch telling of the successful opening of Mr. Figman in "The Man on the Box." Figman fills Harry Dixey's part in the title role, and according to the reports, made an entire success. He is due in Salt Lake in the near future.

Orpheum—Big houses have come to be a part of the stock in trade at the Orpheum, and last night was no exception to the rule. Besides it was as good natured as large. The heavy round of applause that was accorded Prof. Weihe's orchestra for its superb rendition of Suppe's "Poet and Peasant" overture, found numerous repetitions in the numbers that followed. Minnie Kaufmann, who is booked as the greatest lady bicycle rider in the world, and who in her wonderful feats upon the wheel apparently defied the laws of gravitation, is probably entitled to the distinction which she claims is hers alone. Linden Beckwith presented something new in the singing picture line and participated in the honors of the evening. The principals in the Gardner-Madden sketch of "Too Many Darlings" have doubtless yet to be coached in the new rules promulgated by Mr. Beck, and caused to be published locally by Manager Jennings, for both indulged in the prohibited stage profanity and both contributed to acts that shocked, a fact that could not be hidden by the roar of laughter that arose from the galleries. The Italian trio in grand opera selections is, in the language of the day, decidedly worth while. Their work alone is worth the price of admission. Katherine Nugent, the "American Cissy Loftus," pleased immensely in her imitations and impersonations of leading stage women.

The kindom had some good new pictures to interest and amuse as usual. The same bill runs throughout the week.

Grand—"The 10,000 Beauty," as presented in song, dance, joke and whatnot, by Allen Curtis and company, drew a crowded house at the Grand last night and pleased most if not all of those who witnessed it. There are but two acts, but they are by no means short ones, and are filled with fun and frolic from start to finish. The plot is about as clear as the moonlight on a midnight, but, then, no one seems to care anything about that. There is enough hilarity in the piece to cure the worst case of "blues," most of the songs are catchy, the dancing is of a good average kind, and taken as a whole the conglomeration furnishes an interesting evening's entertainment. The same bill finishes the first half of the week, with the usual Wednesday matinee. Beach & Bowers, minstrels begin a three night and matinee engagement, Thursday evening.

Lyric—"The Man Without a Country" continues to run prosperously at the Lyric, and the new schedule of prices is drawing heavily from those who love popular attractions at popular prices.

REPORT BY COL. LUND.

Filled With Adjutant General Taylor In Regard to Encampment.

A report in regard to the recent encampment of the National Guard of Utah with the regular army at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, has been filed by Col. H. M. H. Lund, with Adj.-Gen. R. C. Taylor. It follows in part:

"It can truly be said that this was the best encampment the guard has ever held, because it was held under the most favorable conditions never experienced before at the local encampments, giving all such instructions as could not have been attained by the usual means. The preparations were necessary for service in the field and in a measure measure teaching what is expected of a person entering the service of his country. The hardships endured were a great deal less than anticipated. We were part of the time associated with the troops of the regular army and under the command of its officers who helped materially to ease the burden of the discipline essential to the service. The discipline and behavior of the command during the entire tour of duty as a whole was excellent, and while on route we certainly were frequently heard from persons having associated or had dealings with similar bodies of troops, that they certainly were a credit to our state.

"After arriving at the camp, supplies were drawn through the proper army department, but at times it was difficult to obtain what was wanted and at the proper time needed, which evidently was due to the fact that most of the supplies had to be transported from Omaha and Denver part of the way by teams owned by civilian contractors, who, it seemed, suited their own convenience.

"According to instructions issued from the commissary, department of Missouri, fresh bread was to be supplied by the camp bakery, but which was found to have no existence, and bread could not be had until the regular field ovens had been put up and bakers secured, which took several days. In the meantime biscuits and the so-called 'hard-tack' had to be resorted to.

"The most objectionable and tedious feature of the trip, however, was the treatment received from the railroad companies and the delay caused by their facilities to handle troops from which the men lost one day's experience in the field, that of brigade maneuvers, and the state suffered financial loss by being obliged to pay for additional time and damage for a horse which had sustained injury in transit.

"Pursuant to G. O. No. 10, A. G. O. C. S., and verbal instructions from the adjutant, general orders No. 5 was published by these headquarters, to which the organizations responded as follows:

Off.	Men	Total
Headquarters First Infantry	5	13
Bands	2	2
Co. A, First Infantry	3	43
Co. B, First Infantry	3	29
Co. C, First Infantry	3	42
Co. D, First Infantry	3	24
Co. E, First Infantry	3	22
Co. F, First Infantry	3	24
Co. G, First Infantry	3	24
Hospital Corps	9	9
Signal Corps	3	26
First battery field artillery	3	56
Company	3	3
Troop, A, First cavalry	3	42

"This was an attendance of 50 per cent more than last year's encampment at Mendota, Utah, and the largest turnout of any encampment ever held by the guard. If I remember correctly, and the personnel of the organizations has in several instances been improved. The signal corps turned out with the maximum strength allowed that organization by law, and the field battery responded with more men than at any time before in the existence of that branch of the service.

"On Aug. 18," the report continues, "the regiment to which was assigned the troop of cavalry was detailed as an escort for a convey consisting of twenty-five wagons traveling from Cheyenne to Laramie. The command left the camp about 6:30 a. m., returning about 2:30 p. m. Three troops of United States cavalry were the opposing forces. Considering the 'weather' we had the advantage of being thoroughly acquainted with the country over which we had to travel. I was told by the chief umpire, Lieutenant-Colonel George A. Dodd, Tenth United States cavalry, that we did well. It was stated that the umpires decided that in the different skirmishes which took place, we lost 20 per cent of the men and two wagons. Troop A, however, was at a disadvantage because of poor horses and therefore unable to perform its full duty as it should have been, and its service was somewhat criticized by the umpire. We had the satisfaction that one of the United States troop commanders was criticized for a troop movement made with his command against us. It was reported that the regiment which preceded us at the camp, and who had the same problem, lost the entire wagon train and 90 per cent of the command."

Colonel Lund states that the command also worked at a disadvantage by reason of a shortage of blank ammunition, the men having only three rounds of ammunition. He praises Captains Henry D. Styer and Lawrence B. Simonds for their courteous treatment and assistance which they gave the command.

The approximate cost of the encampment, as near as can be ascertained, is given as follows:

Pay (government and state) ten to twelve days	$2,250.15
Transportation	$2,250.00
Forage and sundry quartermaster supplies	437.00
Rent of horses	1,145.00
Subsistence (officers and men)	$2,250.00
Sunday commissary supplies	77.00
Total	$12,552.15

The government paid $11,244.04, leaving a balance to be paid by the state of $1,308.11.

THE MOORISH SLAVE MARKET.

ONE by one the great slave markets of the world are disappearing; yet, within three hours' steam of Gibraltar, Morocco, remains one of the very few countries where the public auction of negroes, and other than negroes, may be witnessed, says a writer in the London Graphic. Any traveler who finds his way to the imperial city, Marrakesh, should make a point of visiting its famous market, which has recently been attracting the attention of the powers. A century ago it was no uncommon thing for Englishmen and English women—the captives of the Raisuls of that day—to pass into lifelong slavery from the very same yard, large and small, where I have just witnessed the auction of some 25 natives.

It seems hard to believe that while England was waging war with Napoleon the main duty of her ambassadors in Morocco was to appeal to the sultan, cap in hand, and with ample offerings of carriages and cannons—which the Moors described as tribute—for the release of British crews and their wives, who had had the ill-fortune to be captured by the famous rowers of Salée and Rabat. Faithful records of these transactions may yet be found in the diplomatic and consular reports of the period.

At about 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon the proceedings of the Marrakesh auction opened—with prayer—the eight or ten auctioneers formed in line, calling for the divine blessing upon both buyers and seller. In this appeal, I remarked, the sellers were not mentioned. Then, leading his chattels from one group of possible buyers to another, each auctioneer went the round of the market, stating the amount of the last bid. The presence of Europeans is not welcome at these sales; but nothing was said to us, excepting that we were asked, courteously enough, not to walk about. For any looker-on to move from his place would, it seems, be a breach of slave auction etiquette.

No writer in search of startling effects need visit the Marrakesh market. The whole thing is, as a rule, businesslike, not to say humdrum. Naturally enough, the slaves, especially the girls, are dressed in their best, and artistically groomed, and in many cases a change of masters is looked forward to with pleasure. Somehow or other the horror we have all felt at some period of our lives evaporated considerably on facing the reality. It is quite obvious for one thing that the average Moorish negro does not want freedom. It is also a fact that in nine cases out of ten he is far better off than a free person of his capacity dare hope to be. Indeed, it is no uncommon thing for a freed slave to resell himself and share the price paid with the friend who was his original owner. We all, in theory, recognize the something wrong in slavery, but in some mysterious way theory and practise clash. Of one thing we may rest assured. A plebeian of Moorish slaves would emphatically reject an offer of liberty which entailed the responsibility of working like an ordinary laborer.
