

THE SEMI-WEEKLY NEWS
The Great Country Paper of the West
Issued Mondays and Thursdays and Contains All the Cream of the Daily and Saturday News.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Contracts Awarded—Eugene R. Whelan has been awarded the contract to build the Cullen additions and remodel the present building. The entire work will cost about $150,000.

Birthday Celebration—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Bishop Joseph Warburton of the First ward will be celebrated this evening, in the ward assembly hall with a suitable program.

Glanders in Idaho—The trouble with horses at Idaho Falls, has been pronounced to be glanders, by Veterinarians E. A. Bundy and E. J. Drake of this city who went up there the other day, to investigate. The affected animals are being killed.

Deserter Arrested—Private William F. McCabe of L. company, Twenty-third Infantry, was arrested as a deserter yesterday, by William E. Scager, and handed over to the military authorities. McCabe enlisted at Fort Douglas last October and deserted in April last.

Had Serious Fall—Louis K. Ritter, a contractor, fell yesterday afternoon, into the basement of the Thompson-Murdoch building on west Second street, and was picked up senseless with a broken leg and many bruises. He was removed to his home at 242 Fourth east, and given medical attendance.

Fuse Blew Out—The west elevator in the "News" building carried heavy load on an early trip this morning, and when part way up, the fuse blew out. The passengers climbed out of the cage onto the landing immediately above and trooped down stairs again to wait until the damages had been repaired.

Students' Reunion—The west students' reunion at the Y. M. C. A. last evening, was an enjoyable affair, including a banquet and program. O. A. Honold, chairman of the young committee; Rev. Benjamin Young of the First Methodist church, and Gustave White, educational director, made addresses. Jack Held made a number of crayon sketches and Harry Stevenson gave a humorous recitation.

Emery-Holmes Banquet—The Clayton Music company banquet last evening, at the Emery-Holmes cafe was attended by 30 people, including the entire establishment of the music company and their immediate relatives. The function was an elegant affair, and greatly enjoyed by the participants. Col. J. J. Daynes, Jr., general manager of the company, presided, and only the necessity of early retirement to attend the evening performance at the Orpheum on invitation of Col. Daynes, prevented the usual after-dinner speeches and responses to toasts.

Rabbi Freund's Address—In his New Year's address yesterday, Rabbi Freund preached on the test of Abraham, in which he said, "Our new year, renews with the query, 'Where is the lamb for the sacrifice?' The question seeks and deserves a fitting answer. We apply the question to individuals and await their reply. Worshippers and professional religious people, wherein lies the lamb of sacrifice? Shall it consist in the contributions to charity? Is such the equivalent you give as a sop to win your favor and not disapproval? Is your sacrifice to consist in attendance at public worship? Any answer to be satisfactory must imply that the individual's sacrifice is one of actual service."

Zion's Saving Bank and Trust Company was organized in 1873; has opened over 43,000 savings accounts, and now opens an average of more than 10 new accounts every day. We want YOUR business. Joseph E. Smith, President; George M. Cannon, Cashier.

TEAMS WANTED

FINE TRIBUTE TO SYDNEY L. HAGUE
Eloquent Address by Rev. P. A. Simpkin at Funeral Yesterday.

MUSIC BY CHILDREN'S CHOR.

Impressive Services Over Remains of Newspaper Man—Body to be Shipped to Galesburg, Ill.

Rev. P. A. Simpkin of the Phillips Congregational church made an eloquent address at the funeral yesterday of Sydney L. Hague, the newspaper man who died Tuesday night, at the Holy Cross hospital of typhoid fever, after an illness of one month. The service was held in O'Donnell's undertaking parlors, and the remains were laid out in a handsome casket, preparatory to shipment to Galesburg, Ill., for interment in the family plot there. A large floral piece rested on the casket, and there was a good attendance of friends of the deceased. Music was furnished by a choir of children under the direction of Miss Nora Glenn, organist of the cathedral choir. The speaker brought out the many good qualities of the deceased, and the esteem in which he was held by the community, and his industry and courage in the battle of life. The text of the eulogy was as follows:

"I am glad for the custom of our time that calls for the utterance of a word of love and esteem for a life closed to earth, as we gather about the sacred dust of one whom we have known and loved. I am addressing a body of men who, as a class, differ as widely in their conceptions of the great fundamental beliefs of Christianity as any class, and yet men who hold in common a great reverence for life's highest truth and a great hope for the future. And for him, with all its promise of the larger and more perfect things. I think you are ready to say:

"Death is not ceasing to be, it is but living eternally. It is not ceasing the upward flight, it is not darkness but living light. It is not putting out weakness and putting on might. Putting forever off the cloud, Putting forever on the God."

"As a craft, by life's necessities, you are forever thrust against the hard side of life, and facing this experience of death in all its forms, you are sometimes counted callous. But when death comes to one of your own, too often, alas! in a loneliness and apartness that is pathetic, you demonstrate the tenderness of your souls and your apprehension of the things that center here, as you move out in that love and tenderness that make life beautiful to minister to the bereaved. And for him, my friend, I would thank you now for the ministry of this hour.

"We are not here because we think death is more than an incident in life. It takes death sometimes to dignify life in our eyes, but we seek to understand the meaning of the ground of what it means to the bereaved heart, finding the stress to be laid rather on life and lofty service in even the commonest things that fall to us in duty."

WORTH OF THE MAN.
"The man who lies before us in earth's last scene, was unknown to thousands of our citizens by either face or name. But our presence here is a tribute to the fact that many knew him and loved him because they felt the beneficent touch of a helpful life. He came to our city years ago, and he lived here with the love and greeting flashing from his eyes. He was unknown to all save one or two of his close friends. In the last few years, taken to his heart a broken and limited life and ministered of his substance for his clothing and education.

"In common with his co-laborers, he saw at close range the hypocrisy and unworth of life, saw the lust and sin back of seeming respectability, saw the unkindness and infidelity of life, and yet he never lost either his high ideal or his heart to his fellow men. His character had in it many noble things, and while he owned no church membership, and his creed was very brief, his life was in its expression a reproach to thousands of those who have a long creed and a church membership."

EVIDENCE OF COURAGE.
"We do not realize that he is gone to his rest, until we realize how incomplete, and we grieve that he is lost to earth. When I called the last time at the hospital to see him, he emerged briefly from his delirium, in his weakness he smiled, and with cheery courage spoke out in his characteristic way. 'Person, glad to see you, but you are not going to have a chance to throw bouquets at me yet.' It was not making light of death. It was just the courage of the man that marked all his life. He suffered in the deep things of the heart as men suffer in the world; he carried deep scars. They were honorable, but he hid them from the world and laughed men away from the holy ground of which they were the abiding tokens. And no today we look away from this which lies in the last cold sleep, up to the heights where he is gone. That master soul, the Christ to whom he gave reverence, and faith amid the shadows of the earth, is now to him an open vision.

"We thank God that he lived, for the tender humanity that reached to all that made appeal to him, for his true courage and fidelity to his best in the toils of life. We are glad that he has gone from the fret and burden to a rest, and may it be our own lot to be down at last, with the same child-like faith. In Him who came to be the world's friend, and the brother of every soul in the age, to be gathered to the wider life beyond the shadows where earth's brokenness shall be filled, and the heart a heart of light and truth. We will not say to him 'good night,' but in some fairer clime bid him 'good morning.'"

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

ACTS ON NATURE'S PLAN.

The most successful medicine is one that acts on nature's plan. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is such a medicine. It is a simple, natural, and effective remedy for all coughs, colds, and bronchitis.
