Indeed, Mormonism with its polygamy is not half so black as it is painted, nor is white, and were the two placed side by side the man in the moon, who is a trifle short sighted, could not select the whitest quite as readily as those can-tankerous politicians, the Baptist preachers of New York, think he could. Furthermore, however much we may dislike Mormonism we must perforce admire certain characteristics of the Mormons. In enterprise and courage in patient uncomplaining self-denial, in willingness to do to suffer or to die for what they believe to be right, the Mormons rank with the Pilgrims. As worshipping God according to the dicates of their own consciences, so the Mormons crossed the wide waste sand of the desert for a like purpose; and it probable that greater self denials were practiced, greater sufferings were endured, and a greater number of lives were lost in the effort to establish free-dom of worship in Utah than in Massachusetts. The Mormons with their adjusted as to require the application many and gross faults and sins are the heroes and martyrs of the age, some of whom have been sent to ball, and some of whom have been put to death by Christian mobs for no other reason than obeying what they believed to be the direct command of God.
