

MUSIC FESTIVAL LAST EVENING.

Nordica Warmly Received and Given the Accustomed Ovation.

HOUSE BELOW EXPECTATIONS.

Receipts Were Thirty-five Hundred Dollars—A Rare Artistic Program.

Our long-awaited festival of music occurred in the Tabernacle last evening. The world-wide fame of the Conried organization, and a long and brilliant campaign of effective advertising, combined to draw to the Tabernacle one of the most beautiful audiences the grand old auditorium ever contained for a concert event. The house was not crowded in all parts; perhaps that was too much to expect in view of the prices charged, but in all the sections where the $3, $2, $1.50 and $1 prices prevailed, every seat was occupied. In the $4 and $5 places, the center of the hall down stairs, there was room for many more. The receipts were about the same as those for the Melba event, $3,500, or $2,000 less than the amount drawn by Patti. While the total was a disappointment to the Conried people they accepted it philosophically, believing that the visit of the Savage company just ahead of them was the main cause for it; while it may have been, another that should not be overlooked, is that the prices charged were too high for any concert. Had an opera been given, people would not have grumbled at paying $3 for the best seats. Then, too, the knowledge that Casero, Semberich, Farnes, Burgstaller, Fremsted, and Piancon were appearing in other cities, but were held back for the San Francisco engagement, did not help to soothe the ruffled feelings of the public.

The great musical program well deserves the name of a festival. After the music lover had consented to swallow his regrets that the Conried had given us more of his stars of the first magnitude, and had settled himself down to listening to the program on its merits, it was impossible for him to deny the beauty and brilliancy of the night's offering. The audience, which at first seemed inclined to be cold, was awakened to a high degree of enthusiasm before the concert had progressed very far. The program was the building perhaps never rang with more vociferous applause than that bestowed upon Nordica first, and upon some of the other artists and the orchestral numbers.

The program opened with the full Tabernacle choir, heard at its very best, in the church scene from opera of "Cavalleria Rusticana," all the choir seats being filled and the semi-chorus being stationed in the gallery at the right of Conductor Stephens. The beautiful number went with fine effect, and the male voices, especially have been heard to better advantage.

The Conried chorus, who were seated under the south gallery during this number, joined heartily in the applause that followed. The choir then retired to the galleries, and their seats, a small part of them (the Conried Chorus numbering about 75 voices) were taken by the visiting singers.

The second number was the familiar "Barber of Seville" overture, the orchestra of 60 doing beautiful work under one of Conried's master conductors, Vigna. The orchestra's other selection, "La Filleuse," the Mendelssohn number had a great reception, the string work being wonderfully executed. Miss Bella Allen, soprano, was down for two numbers, "Jerusalem" by Mendelssohn, and "The Balladina" from Paganini, substituted for "The Pearl of Brazil." In "The Balladina" she was especially fine, and had to come back twice to acknowledge the plaudits of the audience.

The accompaniment to her song, especially the pyrotechnic work of the strings, was beautiful. Miss De Macechi, the other soprano, whose big dramatic voice and effective acting have made her one of Conried's operatic stars in New York the past season, was also down for two numbers, the old familiar "Bel Raggio," which Patti sang so beautifully, and the favorite Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria." De Macechi was at her best in the first number and the runs, trills and general coloratura work was truly rendered.

The other number which she sang was a gem, with the organ, harp and violin accompanying, was less effective, the organ being rather loud and her voice occasionally flatting.

Mr. Franko, an old friend, had a warm reception for his fine violin solo, but, like the others, he declined to respond to an encore. The first part closed with the rarely beautiful chorale, "Nabucco," by the chorus and orchestra combined. It was a fine instance of well rounded, subdued tone work, and well deserved the round of applause it received.

The Stabat Mater, Rossini's divine setting of the glorious theme, the mourning of Mary for the crucified Savior, was the real feature of the evening. It formed the second part of the program, and required exactly one hour in its rendition, beginning at 9:45 and closing at 10:45. Nordica, Madam Jacob, who took the place of Madam Homer, who was ill, Mr. Dipel, tenor, and Mr. Journe, bass, were the quartet and they took seats in front of the orchestra. Nordica presented the usual queen-like appearance, her beautiful white silk gown, her coronet, and her wealth of jewels, giving her a truly regal appearance. Her voice is, as it always was, full, beautiful, ringing and completely satisfying. The great ovation of the night came after the "Inflammatus," which she rendered divinely, with the chorus and orchestra assisting. Her high C rang out above the great volume of sound, in a fashion that fairly electrified the audience, and there was no going on with the program until half the number was repeated, the sole encore of the night. Even after that the great singer had to rise again and again and bow her acknowledgments.

Miss Jacob rendered her part excellently, the duet with Madam Nordica being especially fine. Mr. Dipel, while he has two or three ringing notes, did not stand abreast of the others, and gave the impression that his voice was badly worn. Mr. Journe, the bass, is a good, reliable singer, not great, but never much place. His aria with the chorus, accompanied, was a real treat. Last night's singers take part, amounts already to $98,000.

The chorus finished the program with the "Amen," rendered in most effective fashion. In fact the 75 voices of all musical Trojans, must have been a revelation to the 300 singers of the choir by the tone they brought forth.

DID NOT PROVE EASY TO HANDLE

Receiver Anderson, Leading Witness in Schettler Case, Testified Today.

NO DECISION YET REACHED.

Preliminary Hearing of Bankrupt Banker's Case Drawing To a Close This Afternoon.

At noon today no decision had been reached in the case of ex-Banker B. H. Schettler, up for preliminary hearing. Arguments began at 10 o'clock before Justice Dana T. Smith, and at 12 o'clock the court adjourned until 2 p. m. when the hearing of testimony for the prosecution will be resumed. It is thought that the taking of evidence will be concluded at this afternoon's session and that the defense will allow the matter to go over to the district court without opposition, except to move that the case be dismissed on the evidence submitted by the prosecution.

This morning Receiver R. R. Anderson was the leading witness and he did not prove an easy one to handle. After refusing to testify as to values of Schettler property on Oct. 1, 1902, Thomas Homer, of the Real Estate association was called in to give expert testimony on this point. His evidence brought Anderson to his feet several times and resulted in cross firing which had to be stopped by a reprimand from the court.

The case opened with the books from the bank's vault piled high in front of Justice Smith, Receiver Anderson, who was the leading witness, and Mr. Schettler at the right.

Mr. Anderson took up the first item listed as assets, and read them to the court. The list of assets of the bank, as the bank's books at $69,925.25. Mr. Anderson appraised at $23,153.90.

"Then if this was their value on Oct. 13, 1904," put in the assistant prosecuting attorney, "what would you say it was on Oct. 1?"

"I don't know anything as to that," was the reply.

"But haven't you any opinion? Did values increase or decrease materially in those days?"

"I know nothing of Oct. 1. I will talk only of the 13th of October. I refuse to talk of any other date."

"But to the best of your judgment did values alter materially in that time?"

"I do not know. I refuse to say anything about it."

An objection of the defense to further questioning was overruled, and an attempt was made to secure an answer, but all roads of questioning led to no results. In answer to the query as to whether he owned any property himself, Mr. Anderson replied that he owned nothing of its value, the assessor knowing all about that.

Thomas Homer was called to give his opinion as to the Anderson schedule of debts. After looking over the figures of Mr. Anderson he stated that one item listed at $2,000 was placed too high.

CONFERENCE OF RELIEF SOCIETY.

Good Samaritans of the Church Report the Work Done in Their Respective Stakes.

WHEAT STORED FOR THE POOR

Pure Religion Strikingly Exemplified in the Efforts Put Forth by These Workers.

The general conference of the Relief societies of the Church opened this morning in the Salt Lake Assembly Hall, and no similar meeting of recent years has witnessed so large an attendance. The lower part of the hall was almost filled, and great interest was manifested in the reports.

After prayer and singing, the secretary, Mrs. E. B. Wells, called the roll, and Mrs. Susanna P. Booth of Boxelder was the first to report. She expressed pleasure in being able to have the privilege of being present, and especially of meeting with the venerable president, Mrs. Bathsheba W. Smith. She said she had never been in this work and had never been in this work in this way we are building up the cause of Zion. She reported that there were 86 members in the stake, 5,632 bushels of wheat stored, and $675 in cash on hand. All donations are paid promptly, and all the sisters show a faithful desire and willingness to attend to their duties.

Cache stake was represented by Mrs. Lucy Cardon, who stated that there were 11 branches, 568 members, 600 bushels of wheat stored, and $432 cash on hand. They had ten granaries, and all the members were working unitedly for the cause.

DAVIS STAKE. Mrs. Susan Grant represented Davis stake, and said that there were 12 branches and the sisters were diligent in trying to store wheat, visit the needy and afflicted, and help the poor.

CONDITIONS IN HYRUM. Mrs. Nellie E. Parkinson of Hyrum stake was the next speaker, and she reported 10 fully organized societies, 600 members, 250 average attendance, 6,125 bushels of wheat stored and $500 had been donated for meeting houses. The course of work had been along the usual lines and much good had been accomplished.

THE WORK IN EMERY. Mrs. Mary A. Sorenson reported the Emery stake, and stated that this stake included Emery and Carbon counties. They had seven granaries, and five Relief Society halls, 1,653 bushels of wheat stored, $1,337 in real estate, and this with merchandise made a total value of $6,534.35. There were 624 members in the stake.

REPORT OF GRANITE STAKE. Mrs. Woodruff reported for the Granite stake, and said that the stake represented 18 wards; that the work included the usual charity visiting and also the effort to minister to spiritual needs of Church and non-Church members alike. Their missionaries visit all classes and have interested a great many people in the gospel.

JORDAN AND KANAB. The Jordan stake was reported by Mrs. Larsen, who stated that the societies had 780 members, 770 bushels of wheat, and that the work was as far as possible faithfully carried out.

The Kanab stake was represented by Mrs. Spencer, who stated that she had reported for this stake, and that she represented the stake, and could not give definite numbers, but believed the stake had 200 or 300 members. There are six branches and while the county is not a wheat raising section, yet the grain is stored, and the sick and needy are visited, and every effort is made to arouse interest in the work.

MORGAN STAKE. Mrs. Nellie Druce Pugsley here favored the audience with a beautiful vocal solo and following it, Lydia Rich reported for Morgan stake, which she stated, was not as well off financially as they could wish, yet the members all worked together in harmony and the spiritual condition was all that could be desired.

ONE FROM AFAR. A visitor from afar, Mrs. Elizabeth Lake reported for the St. Joseph stake in Arizona, and gave an interesting account of the condition of the stake societies. She stated that it was her first opportunity to visit the general conference, and she believed she appreciated the privilege more than those near Salt Lake. The societies there are much scattered; there are 14 in all, and 455 members. A continued drought has caused many families to move away and this has decreased the membership. They cannot store much grain on account of insects, but have two granaries, and 1,000 bushels of wheat. They hold conferences twice a year, and the stake presidency are always present and work mutually with the sisters for the good of the societies. They have found that by sending missionaries to the religion classes and primaries, that much interest is awakened, and another thing is a social reunion held annually on the 17th of March, at which programs and dancing are enjoyed, and which seem to give great pleasure to all participated. Attention is shown in all charity efforts to those outside the church as well as within.

THE WORK AT HOME. The next speaker was Mrs. Clarissa Smith Williams, who reported for the Salt Lake stake. The stake has ten wards, she stated, and though the stake in its new organization has not been in active operation a year, yet the work done has been satisfactory

'VARSITY FOOTERS CHEER FOR LOGAN

Extend the Olive Branch to Visiting Students of Agricultural College.

SPEECHES BY LEGISLATORS.

Speaker Hull, of the House and Senator Williams Addressed Mass Assembly of Students.

At the University of Utah today Logan was cheered to the echo in a chapel meeting called to hear speeches from Speaker Thomas Hull of the house of representatives and Senator W. N. Williams, chairman of the committee on appropriations.

Speaker Hull in his talk referred to the cheering, which was given in honor of a visiting representative of the Logan Dramatic society, as showing a spirit of fair play to a friendly rival and he complimented the students upon it. Later Yell Leader Fairchild Sherman and other students passed handbills announcing the performance of "She Stoops to Conquer" by the Logan club, and President Kingsbury announced that he wished every kindly offer extended to the visitors. An entertainment for the benefit of the gymnasium had been postponed in order to welcome their friends, he said, and he wanted nothing to occur that night of the least disrespectful character. The students themselves have taken the matter up further and declare that if they do not want this to be interpreted as making any student who carries anything but flowers to the theater with him.

The assembly was marked by the introduction of a new organization into the college life. The Associated Arts students came in yelling newly invented slogans in a manner that eclipsed the strong counter yells of the engineers. Henry Soule, of the Associated Arts students, was elected president.

After the yelling had quieted down Speaker Hull was introduced as one of the friends of higher education, and he made a 15 minute speech in which he referred to the idea which a young boy or girl ought to keep in mind while preparing him or herself for the world's work. He stated that while he was a friend of the University he did not want this to be interpreted as making him an enemy of any other school where young people may be prepared for the great battle of life.

Speaker Hull was followed by Senator Williams, who made an instant hit with the women of the University by narrating the incident of his early college work in the University of Deseret, with special emphasis on the portion dealing with the college romance that began in a class room and ended in his taking as a life partner a schoolmate of the University.

He declared that this early experience made him partial to the University, for it had always been an incident which he took a great deal of joy in recalling. He continued by taking up the subject of co-education and giving it strong endorsement as a feature of our higher institutions of learning. Neither speaker referred directly to his position in regard to consolidation of the two big schools of the state.

OPENS TOMORROW MORNING.

Will Adjourn Friday Afternoon Till Sunday Morning—President Smith To Speak.

The seventy-fifth annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints opens in the Tabernacle tomorrow at 10 a. m. It is expected that this will be one of the largest gatherings in the history of the Church, prosperous times and a splendid outlook for their continuance, being in great measure responsible for this condition. Already the city is besieged with thousands of visitors, and as a result the hotels and lodging houses are taxed almost to their capacity. The railroads report heavy business from all points, and indications are that previous records will be totally eclipsed.

There will be two general meetings tomorrow and Friday, the conference adjourning Friday afternoon till Sunday at 10 a. m., when it is expected the attendance will be such as to make necessary an overflow meeting in the Assembly hall and probably an additional meeting on the outside. On Friday evening the general Priesthood meeting will be held, while each night of the conference season there will be discursive sessions and church gatherings of different kinds. On Sunday night a general conference of Church Sunday schools will be held in the Tabernacle.

The first session of the conference will be addressed by President Joseph F. Smith, while members of the Council of Apostles, presidents of stakes and other prominent Church workers will be heard at the meetings following.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Tabernacle event had a paralyzing effect on the attendance at the Theater last night, but the "Red Feather" was given with vim and earnestness. Business is expected to be heavy during the remainder of the week, especially on conference nights.

Anna Eva Fay drew another big house last night in spite of the counter attraction, and will be heard in her pleasing program again this evening.

The advance manager of "The Virginians," with which Manager Pyper expects to pack his house in suffocation three nights next week, is in the city. Dustin Farnum in the title role will have a royal reception.
