

BREVITIES.

The Princess Metternich's bonnets cost $30,000 a year.

There is talk of a tunnel between Scotland and Ireland.

Cotton is grown in thirteen of the United States and one Territory.

Grote, the historian, succeeds Lord Brougham as President of London University.

Walter and Company cleared half a million of dollars out of the London Times last year.

The Chinese Embassy ran up a bill of $1,700 for hack hire in Washington. It is a city of magnificent distances.

Lord Ernest Vane Tempest, a conservative candidate for the English Parliament, fought at Ball's Bluff, in 1862.

John Ruskins has to keep a secretary to answer calls upon his benevolence. He spends an income of $300,000 a year on charity.

An Ohio exchange says something is the matter with the bees this summer. They refuse to send out swarms or make any honey.

Boston owns public parks and squares which would sell for fifteen millions of dollars, which is enough to pay the city debt.

A Prussian chemist has invented a new method of warfare on the battle field; it is a powder that makes a whole army sneeze for half an hour.

It was Lord John Russell who gave the famous definition of a proverb as "One man's wit and all men's wisdom."

Church mauling has given place to body mauling in Connecticut. The minister fights out all difficulties with his parishioners. Colchester started it.

Carbolic acid is believed by a physician of excellent standing to be a cure for consumption, the method of administering it being by breathing an atmosphere impregnated with it.

Opportunity has hair in front, behind she is bald; if you seize her by the forelock you may hold her; but, if suffered to escape, not Jupiter himself can catch her again.

The remains of an ancient Syracusan colony have been discovered in Cissaro, in Sicily. The surrounding wall was 2,000 meters in circumference, and three in thickness.

Ralph Waldo Emerson says he never expects to leave the country again, as he has not time to travel, and nothing is to be gained abroad that cannot be had at home.

The printers of Paris have just had a strike to redeem Sunday as a holiday, and have succeeded in suppressing the appearance of several leading papers on Monday mornings.

The following classical couplet was found on the fly-leaf of a school book at the Mount Pleasant College, last week:

"Pigs love taters, cows lovesquash, I love you, Ella, I do, by 'gosh.'"

"How do you get on with your arithmetic?" asked a father of his little boy. "Oh, papa!" exclaimed the delighted youngster, "I have ciphered clear through addition, partition, subtraction, distraction, abomination, justification, and amputation."

The largest, heaviest, and longest wire rope ever made, has just been completed in Trenton. It is 3,700 feet long, two and a half inches in diameter, and weighs twenty-one tons. It is to be used for dragging coal cars up the north slope of the Wilkesbarre mountains.

"Why don't you trade with me?" said a clever trader to a friend the other day. The reply was characteristic:—"You have never asked me, sir. I have looked all through the papers for an invitation in the shape of an advertisement, and found none. I never go where I'm not invited."

"Nine, sir," observed a social scourge, "I can speak nine languages distinctly, but my father, when he was alive, could speak no less than fifteen." "Ah!" remarked Douglass Jerrold, "I knew a man who could speak five-and-twenty, and he never said anything worth hearing in any one of them."

A lady and gentleman, on passing over the Pont de la Concorde in Paris, were politely accosted by a respectfully dressed man, who asked them, "Would they like to see the road to happiness?" before he could receive a reply, he jumped upon the parapet of the bridge and plunged into the river. Two hours afterward his body was found.

An old bachelor, who had become melancholy and poetical, wrote some verses for the village paper, in which he expressed the hope that the time would soon come when he should

"—rest calmly within a shroud, With a weeping willow by my side," but to his inexpressible horror, it came out in print,—

"When I shall rest calmly within a shawl, With a weeping widow by my side."

The North British Review says: "At the beginning of a carouse of a drunkard, alcohol stimulates the action of the heart, which now sends blood rapidly to the lungs for aeration. A large supply of blood disks constantly reach the brain, which is stimulated into activity. The ideas of the drinker now flow rapidly, at first coherently, but soon without control; the brain matter wastes too rapidly, and delirium ensues. During this time the volatile alcohol is diffusing itself through the system, converting arterial into venous blood, and loading that fluid with a spirit which has a tendency to prevent change in the tissues, so that the drunkard gradually becomes stupid, falls off his chair in the stupor of sleep, or, if too far gone, dies of venous apoplexy."
