THE PLACE OF THE HORSE IN WAR.

"HE part which a cavairy horse | the breast or shoulder, up so their takes in a buille can peyer he | bands and they get a heavy fall; if in takes in a battle can never be the leg, foot or arm, they fall forward and foll off. niled by any machine, no matter what its capabilities. The horse seems, in the hour of battle at least, to take on characteristics that helong only to a being endowed with reason. He partakes of the hopes and fears of the conflict, the same as his rider. If he has been six months in the service, he knows every bugic call. As the column swings into line and walts, the horse grows nervous with waiting, and if the wait be long will often tremble and sweat. As the call comes to advance, the rider can feel him working at the bit with his tongue to get it between his teeth. As he moves out he still either try to get on faster or bolt. The lines will carry him forward, and after a minute he will sudden resolve to brave the worst and have done with it as soon as possible. A num schom eries out when hit in the service, he knows every bugle call.

Unite in this one thought, all war would end.

Disarm the world; and let all Nations meet Like Men, not monsters, when disputes arise, When crossed opinions tangle into snarls, Let Courts untie them, and not armies cut. When State discussions breed dissensions, let Union and Arbitration supersede The hell-created implements of War. Disarm the world! and bid destructive thought Slip like a serpent from mortal mind Down through the marshes of oblivion; and soon A race of gods shall rise! Disarm! Disarm!
