

Notice From The Best.
He writes after his father has given His best and purest when they have been The will of man, and the will of God.
All things come by high authority.
He writes now, and says, "I am
The life that has been here given,
And I have given it all away.
Through every stormy month and season
He will stand by me and comfort.
True to my word, I will stand by you.
When I have given it all away,
When the last day comes, and death
Has surely come to the body.
Jesus, our Lord, was not dead.
Whether through poverty or wealth and power, The pathway which he pursued always Was to help others, and to serve them.
He will stand by me and comfort.
When the last day comes, and death
Has surely come to the body.
Jesus, our Lord, was not dead.

MULTIPLIED SERVICE

THE CHRISTIAN MUST JUDGE BE-TWEEN MANY CALLS.

The Willing Worker Is the One Oftenest Called Upon—Let There Be No Mystery in the Heart, and Then Do What You Can Do Best.

We live in an age of peculiar perils.
No one can tell what the future holds in store.
We are often exposed to temptation at this point unknown to the absent service. It is very possible to forget the main path for some diseases and other afflictions. Calls for sympathy or to minister to others will be frequent.
A sufficient duty may result the action excess in diverting one's attention from intellectual and useful work. Our own providential task is then left unfulfilled.

Many & circumstances need not only to be met at this point, but also to be fulfilled the duties, fitting the worker to undertake to unnecessary work. When we consider what is meant by doing that's will from day to day, what is involved therein both to ourselves and others, we are compelled to realize that the burden on us which rests upon us is enormous.
The work has planned for us. Distraction of thought is frequently the bane of his children's service.

We presume there has never been a time when the pressure of service has been so great as at the present moment.
As at no time before, Colossal tasks waited with the added difficulty which one of several imperative demands made upon us is in the course of time absolutely inevitable. One Sunday during his earthly life Jesus called forth his twelve apostles and said unto them, "Behold, I give unto you authority over all unclean spirits; and unto you shall be given power over all diseases, and over all manner of snares; and I will give unto you the keys of the kingdom of heaven." He always spoke under these circumstances, it will worthy consideration. He always spoke and acted in sufficient purpose. His direction of the work of the Kingdom of God was so clear, so definite, so simple, so easily accepted the present task, leaving nothing else to follow in proper order, distinguishing as auxiliary, because to control such numerous important tasks seemed to be impossible. He said, as we could never doubt, "I will give you the keys which were left to me."

And he said to complete the whole word: By no means. His plan for the extension of the world included a division of labor. He could do a certain part better than another, and so he separated the tail and trumpet.

And it is obvious, no man or woman can do all that is needed to be done in any single church or community. God's distribution of labor places the indication of the importance of his service as well as his responsibility. No man can take the privilege of working for the Master while he has given to another, and no one may consider to interfere with him who is as specially called to perform in the areas where his field is the world. Least of all:
