SINGER.

THE COURT stated that there was no Territorial statute on the subject, and the attorney appointed would have to look to the Territory for the payment of his fees, as the Court would not be responsible therefor.

The names of jurors were called, after which the court dismissed them till to-morrow morning, as no jury case would be ready to-day.

The District Attorney read an indictment against John Beegan and James Dunn, alias "Dublin Tricks" (probably one of his Dublin tricks was to get out of the penitentiary), for larceny from the person of Wm. Sharp. Beegan was in Court, and his attorney, Mr. Dilley, stated that he did not wish to plead to the indictment till he had been furnished with a copy of the document. The Court stated, as in the case of Abraham Rasm, that the clerk would furnish the defendant a copy at the latter's expense. Mr. Dilley thought this considerable of a hardship, as the accused was innocent, and if it made no difference to the Court he would withdraw from the case. The Court stated that he had nothing to do with Mr. Dilley, acting as counsel, and had nothing to say in the matter, and desired the attorney to remember that he was not in a justice's court, but a court of record, and surely the attorney did not mean that he was going into such small business as assigning as a reason for his withdrawal from a case that the Court was not willing to incur upon the Territory the expense of about sixty cents for a copy of a document. The Court wished to know definitely whether Mr. Dilley intended to act or not, when the latter, very curiously, said he would leave it with the accused, and then finally said he would act. By his request the Court granted the prisoner till to-morrow morning to plead. The same time was granted in which to plead to an indictment against Beegan for manslaughter, for the killing of Ned Doyle.

The prosecutor read an indictment against Philip Shafer and William B. Kelly, for the murder of Peter Van Valkenburg, at Union Fort. Shafer was in Court, and through Mr. Dilley, his attorney, asked till Saturday morning before pleading, intimating that probably a demurrer to the indictment would be presented. Kelly, the other party indicted, is still at large.

John Murphy appeared in Court and pleaded guilty to two indictments, both for assault with intent to murder. The two cases were both in connection with the existing dispute between the Bingham Canyon and Camp Floyd Railroad Company and the accused.

Charles L. Williamson and John Smith, otherwise known as "Jack" Smith, were brought into court and pleaded not guilty to an indictment for robbing the body of Simpson, who was murdered in Summit County, last summer, of a promissory note.
