

SPECIAL TO THE DESERET NEWS. By Telegraph. CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.
The discharged men to return to work—Mississippi to be admitted—Mediation between Canada and Red River—The Currency question.

Morrill, of the committee on appropriations, reported, with amendments, a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to make a transfer, for the use of the Bureau of Construction and repairs of steam engineering, of certain balances to the credit of other bureaus of the Navy Department, which are available for the current year. This bill of transfer is about four millions, and is recommended in order that the men recently discharged may resume work. Another reported a bill to restrict the printing of documents to the lowest limit possible, and the citizens who want copies of the documents shall procure them at cost.

Conkling introduced a joint resolution restoring Mississippi to representation in Congress.

On motion of Spencer, the Secretary of the Navy is to report to Congress what number of naval officers there are residing or are employed in Washington, who have visited Washington since the assembling of Congress.

Ramsay offered a resolution instructing the committee on foreign relations to consider the expediency of recommending the President to offer the mediation of this Government between Canada and the Red River settlements, with a view to adjust the pending difficulties; adopted.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the currency bill.

Buckingham gave his views at length on the financial policy of the Government.

The question was further debated by Sumner, Williams and Morton, after which the Senate proceeded to vote upon the pending proposition on Morton's amendment to increase the amount of currency in circulation to fifty-two millions; adopted, 35 to 15.

Sumner's amendment for the issue of 200 millions additional currency was voted down.

Several other amendments were offered and rejected.

Morton renewed his amendment authorizing the withdrawal of thirteen millions from circulation from the States having an excess and distributing the same among other States and Territories having less than their share.

Davis moved to increase the amount to twenty millions, which was not agreed to.

Morton's amendment was adopted, 31 to 27.

Sherman moved an amendment to provide for the apportionment of the amount authorized by the bill upon the basis of the census of 1870; adopted.

Kellogg, Chandler, Vickers, Casserly, Price, Wilson and Thurman severally offered amendments, all of which were rejected.

The committee rose and reported the bill to the Senate, the question being upon agreeing to the amendments.

Sherman desired separate votes on Morton's amendment, which was at last adopted.

Upon the suggestion of Cameron, the final disposition of the bill was deferred till to-morrow, with an order for the bill as amended to be printed.

The Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.
Important Discussion on the Tariff Bill.

In the House, to-day, Pollard declared that Booker could not take the test oath without committing perjury, and assured the House that Booker had given personal and official aid to the rebellion and could no more take the test oath than Jeff Davis. The discussion continued some time. The report of the committee was finally adopted; 98 to 51. Booker took the oath of office.

Farnsworth, from the postal committee, reported a bill to prevent improper matter, such as gift enterprises, and circulars, being sent through the mails and asked that it be put on its passage. Wood objected.

Schenck reported an amendment to the tariff bill, and moved its reference to a committee of the whole and that it be made a special order for Thursday, the 10th inst., until disposed of. He explained that the committee had been unable to report on the bill earlier, and in justice to the various interests of the country, whose representatives they were, the committee had appeared before the committee day after day, and items of the bill are confined to those charges which are proposed in rates of duty or made on imposing duty. He said this bill had extended, at least, a little more advantage to the agricultural interests of the country than any previous tariff. He did not desire, however, to discuss the merits of the bill at present.

Allison, a member of the committee on ways and means, suggested that the consideration of the bill be postponed at least two weeks. The bill affected every material interest of the country, as far as they could be affected by a tariff for revenue or protection; it changed the value of property in this country not less than fifty millions; therefore it was important that the representatives of the people should have time and opportunity to examine the bill before the discussion commenced. In his judgment, the bill was constructed in the interest of protection rather than revenue, in the interest of that class of people who would be able to make large profits on manufactures, and not in the interest of consumers. He proceeded to instance some of the principal changes made by the bill, especially on iron and sugar. Schenck said the members of the committee had endeavored to keep in mind three things: revenue, protection and consumption. Brooks also in his criticism of the bill, particularly condemned that portion in relation to iron, steel, carpetings and many other articles, on which the duties have been increased; and proceeded to enumerate items of advances on iron and steel. He said that reductions in the bill had been made upon revenue articles; such as tea, coffee, sugar, brandy, spices and liquors, thus reducing the revenue in order to have an excuse for raising the duty on iron and steel, carpeting and even on old type. But what had been done in the bill was far more censurable than what was not done, for objectionable duties remained on coal, salt, lead, and hides. He went to show that Schenck did not carry out his duties of specific duties and gave details, showing the meaning, and weighing and specific duties were mingled together in the bill.

Schenck briefly defended the provisions of the bill relating to iron and hides.

Kelly, another member of the committee expressed his dissent from Brooks' statements as to the increase of rates on iron. Pig iron had been reduced from nine to seven dollars per ton, in his judgment an unwarranted reduction.

Marshall, another member of the committee declared himself opposed to the principles on which the existing tariff law and in favor of these upon which the bill now reported is based. He did not consider this bill as meeting the hopes and expectations of the country of giving any relief to industry.

Ship building and agricultural interests were entirely overlooked. After further discussion, the bill was ordered to be printed and made a special order for the 15th.

The House then went into a committee of the whole on the legislative appropriation bill.

Hoar defended the Administration from recent criticism. Dawes claimed that the President was faithful to his pledges, and declared there would be no split in the Republican party and no quarrel between the people and representatives and the President.

Wood complimented him for his manliness of style; brought up the question of the gold conspiracy and remarked that the integrity of the President was involved in the question.

Dawes made a point of order that his remarks were entirely irrelevant to the subject before the Committee.

The Chairman sustained the point of order; when Stiles resumed the current of his remarks, he was reminded that he must either obey the ruling or take his seat.

Stiles asked leave to print remarks; by Mr. Yeaburn (of Wisconsin) objected.

Stiles said if the charges against the President are true, he is unfit to be the ruler of the people. [Loud cries of "order."] The Committee rose, and the House adjourned.
