WHAT ABOUT INAUGURATION?

Is anybody making any arrangements for the inauguration of the first State officers to take their seats as the choice of the people of Utah? No doubt some one has the matter in hand, but that some one is provokingly silent. There ought to be care taken for the various features of the coming program, no, not statement, etc., etc. The day should be made a general holiday from one end of the State to the other. Every flag and piece of bunting in the land ought to be flying proudly in the breeze. Houses and places of business should be decorated. Cannon should boom at the midday hour and confetti and rockets should light up the evening. In fact all the signs of a great people's rejoicing should be given in an enthusiastic yet decent manner. We will have many inaugurations days in the future, but there will never be more than the one first one.

Now should the dividing line of politics be distinctly drawn on that assumption. We have had our battle election campaign and caused the fight was lively while it lasted, but it is ended and everybody is anxious to be satisfied. As citizens of one commonwealth, as grateful and happy sons and daughters of the newest and best State of the Union, all ought to be able to meet in harmony and rejoice together in Utah's emancipation and their own.

There is not much time left for exhaustive formalities, but there is enough for a whole-souled and appropriate celebration of the day, such as, in the noon days—when we did not have half the money nor half the facilities now possessed—used to warm the heart and open the eyes of residents and strangers alike. All that is necessary is for some one to lead out—a committee of two, or three or four energetic citizens—our word for it, there will be found plenty to follow.

THE MURRAY ACCIDENT.

The shocking accident at Murray by which a human life was sacrificed under the wheels of our modern juggernaut, again suggests the necessity of proper protection at places where railways make the roads dangerous. In the present case a husband with a devoted wife and mother, and it would seem that their grief and tears as they are gathered around the well-loved form, mangled and bruised, would be an equal pitiful enough to move even a cynic to sympathy. But this is only one case of many. They seem to be of almost daily occurrence throughout the United States. And what renders them particularly deplorable is that most of them could be prevented, if the railroad corporations would but take the precautions common to other countries.

IT IS TRUE THAT railroad accidents will happen under the best regulations, but they can be reduced to a minimum, and it is the duty of somebody to see that this is done.

FALSE AND OBSCENE.

In a Hesperian Magazine just at hand appears an article copied, it seems, from an English medical journal. It purports to be a correspondence from Dr. A. L. Davidson, of Miami, Florida; and it is as full of medical and as uninteresting in its character as an exclude it from the category of respectable journals.

We do not know whether there is in Mount Pleasant a Doctor A. L. Davidson, or whether he is merely a name de plume. It appears that no such person is a member of the Utah Medical Association. But it seems pretty clear to us that any medical man, or other professional, who can stoop so low as to betray the trust of the people among whom he is living and whom he is dependent, and put himself abroad falsehoods calculated to mislead imagination, if his fall should be given to him, would find himself behind the walls of the penitentiary. And it is further clear that any community has the right to bar among its members, even an individual, the association of the people whom he has grossly insulted should be called to the fact, so that they may be in a position to govern themselves accordingly. If, on the other hand, the correspondence related to is forged and the author names does without his knowledge, a grievous wrong has been committed against him, which he can hardly afford to pass in silence.

Honest medical men, in this city, do not hesitate to say that the article referred to is most unprofessional and unscrupulous, and are likely to be taken to bad and where the responsibility for it rests.

As to the medical journals that have given it publicity, it remains to be seen whether they cannot be reached through the legal authorities that make it a serious offense to send obscene literature through the mails. We believe that publishers have been sufficiently seen that he has ordered the wrong paper. A few of the commercial men have tried to make his welcome as cordial as they could, but the great mass of the people either know of or care nothing about him and his friends, or express contempt for him and his wife. No newspaper or any influence or importance, make aware of the existence of the law or account of the law or object of it, which is to which we refer.

SPAIN'S NEW TROUBLE.

The announcement that Pino Ricci is in personality with the Cuban to the revolution against Spain is new made. It appears to be the next move of the great program prepared by the leaders of the Cuban revolution, which is about to be carried on. The Cuban government has been successful, notwithstanding all official reports to the contrary.

The insurgents commenced their struggle with disciplined and battle-worn soldiers, without money and almost without modern arms. They had no organization to speak of and no resources, and yet they have held against the army of the mother country and gained ground tact by tact. They have forced Spain to send reinforcements repeatedly until the Army of the Indies has become so reduced as to threaten the safety of the country, and to burn millions in order to carry on the war. And now with the fact demonstrated that a handful of patriots can hold their own in the apparently unequal struggle, another dependency is about to rise and strike a blow for the common cause. It looks as if it would be good policy for Spain to give up her West Indian possessions as graciously as possible.

Porto Rico is a little island, one of the Great Antilles, about a hundred miles from east to west and forty miles from north to south. Its area is not quite 4,000 square miles, and it has a population of between six and seven hundred thousand. It is one of the most healthy and fertile of the West Indian islands, and would undoubtedly under a rational government become a comparatively wealthy country.

The government of the people are similar to those of the Cubans, nearly all the resources of the island being monopolized by foreigners, while the natives are kept in poverty and a state of stagnation.

PAID THE PENALTY.

Harry Hayward has paid the penalty of his crime, and the last issue of one of the most notable tragedies in the criminal jurisprudence of the country is over. The condemned man professed to be a believer in Spiritualism, and in accordance with his views he caused one of his brothers to blind-mutilate him, promising to bind him from the moment his spirit left the body, while he accused the priest that he would send him a message from the other world. With a hoarse laugh he assumed the gait and died without a sign of regret for a wasted life.

Harry Hayward was a professional gambler. He visited different parts of the United States, everywhere spending his time in the most disreputable places. He played a double role, however, and some times appeared in high society, where he was honored by those ignorant of his real character. In Minnesota he became acquainted with Miss Gage, a young lady whom he decided to sacrifice for the sake of what little money she had. Five days on the evening of December 3, 1890, was found lying by the side of a lonely road, and the murder was attributed to Harry through the confession of one Civil Hill, who said he had acted as the hitman of the executed man and committed the murder. Hill was sent to the penitentiary for life.

The painful consequences of contact with immoral persons is plainly visible in the history of the principal actors involved in the Hayward tragedy. Even if the outcome is not always the same as in the case of the victim and his murderer, it is certain to lead with more or less precision in that direction. There is profound wisdom in the remark made long ago, that he who walks not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stands in the way of sinners, nor sits in the seat of the scornful, the final result is certain destruction.
