In Carr Fork inst night As the inhibitants cannot speak English it was almost impossible to secure information from them but the starting of the fire of this time is regarded as suspicious, and many incline to he belief that it was the work of one of the factions of "Little Austria's" ven-detta. The houses homed were all small frame structures and the property loss will probably not exceed 11,000 as the houses were of little value and their in-mates did not possess much property. From its proximity to the powder mag-sains of the Highland Boy mine, the fire caused considerable excitement. This magazins usually contains from 500 to 1,000 pounds of powder and had it burned
