

SQUIRES WANTS ANOTHER CHANCE

Did Tommy Burns Win Short Bout On Merely a Fluke Blow?

MIKE SCHRECK IS ANXIOUS.

His Manager, Billy Hogan, Hot on the Trail of Man Who Claims Heavyweight Title.

Should Bill Squires be given another chance? Was the first blow that put him to the canvas a fluke punch—merely a chance blow?

These are questions which the fight fans are asking seriously. When you think of the affair and reflect upon it, you will find that there might be something in the proposition. The Australian is apparently a great deal of in his right hand. According to a dispatch given on this page his backer has made an offer to Burns of $250,000, and all the gate money, win or lose. If the offer is bona fide, it would indicate that his backer would answer, "Yes," to both questions. If the offer is made in good faith Burns will not hesitate to take advantage of it, but what club will care to take chances on promoting a second meeting of the pair? There is where the rub comes. Could enough interest be worked up in a second meeting to even pay training expenses? It is doubtful.

A POSSIBLE FLUKE.

It is possible that the blow that laid the Australian low, that is, the first one, was of the fluke or chance variety. Many good men have been beaten by one punch. Kid McCoy was not called back names after he was sent to the hospital by one blow delivered by Jack McCormick. In the first meeting between Gus Ruhlin and Tom Sharkey, the latter was knocked out in a single round for the reason he had Ruhlin in a badly muddled state of mind, the result of a bad cold. In the second meeting, however, he was given another chance at the salter and made him look like a novice. Dick Hawkins knocked Marty Fisher in four seconds, and yet the loser was a good man at the Queensbury game.

TOUGH ON SQUIRES.

From the accounts of the Squires-Burns meeting it is evident that the American style of fighting, that is, "protect yourself in the clinch," after they were separated by the referee, Squires stepped back and dropped his hands. Like a flash Burns shot out his right and the Australian went down. That blow practically finished him. Could Squires redeem himself if given another opportunity? It does seem rather hard to send him back on that long journey with an empty purse and defeat hanging over his head. It is a mistake to think of many a grave mistake was made in matching him with a man of Burns' caliber, before anything was known of his ability. He should have been "tried out" against some of the lesser lights of pugilism.

SCHRECK AND BURNS.

While the dickering is going on with reference to Squires, the pugilist manager of Mike Schreck, the big Cincinnati Dutchman, is hot on the trail of Burns and is keeping the wires warm flashing challenges and threats. There can be no doubt, Manager Hogan declares he will force Burns to meet Schreck before the end of the month. He should have been "tried out" against some of the lesser lights of pugilism.

A SWEEPING OFFER.

Backer of Squires Makes Most Generous Proposition.

Melbourne, Victoria, July 8.—The backer of "Bill" Squires, the Australian pugilist who was defeated by Tommy Burns at Colma, Cal., July 2, has cabled to the United States offering to give Burns $250,000 and the whole gate money, win or lose, for a return fight with Squires within a month.

SPITBALL KEEPS LOW THE BATTING AVERAGES

What is the hardest ball that a pitcher can throw to hit? That question, asked of some two dozen ball players on major league clubs, including some of the best batters in the country, brought with hardly an exception the opinion that it was the spitball. The spitball is one of the hardest single delivery which can be made, and practically all of them agree that this delivery is one that is worrying them the most because it is so general use, while the jump ball can be thrown by a pitcher, and the spitball is as hard to hit safely, as its more recent rival.

deadly in stopping run getting than it is. Properly delivered, the spit ball comes almost straight up to the plate, but just as it looks like it is coming on over with only average speed it suddenly drops from a fraction of an inch to half a foot. Then the pitcher's arm is in this break it is the easiest thing in the entire pitching repertoire to murder. When it is breaking right there is no way as yet found to hit it successfully.

Even if the bat connects with the ball it only drives it down to the ground and gives one of the infielders an easy assist, unless he happens to get his fingers on the wet spot when throwing. Then there is an error charged squarely. The spit ball is the deadliest ball a batsman has to drive, and even when hit hard it can be driven but slowly unless hit squarely on the nose.

When the spit ball first came out batters thought they had discovered a remedy for it in a slash almost straight down as a cricket bat is used, but the trouble is that the pitchers have discovered ways to make the ball break out or in at the same time it takes its down shoot and, of course, the slashing style of batting was no better for them than the old-fashioned horizontal one. Players are now pretty well agreed that a hit is rarely made off a properly delivered spit ball, and that about the only hope for batters is to try to pick out ones that are badly delivered by the pitcher.

One of the peculiarities about the jump or raise ball is that a batter who is hitting it in perfect form has less chance of hitting it than one who is out of form. Before the spit ball came in the raise ball was the king of them all. The trouble with this delivery, however, is that it takes tremendous strength and speed to handle it, and it can therefore be used only by comparatively few pitchers. When it is breaking properly in the hands of a pitcher who can control it the effect is almost the exact opposite of that of the spit ball.

Instead of being hit on top the ball is hit below and popped up in the air with would not land once in a thousand times. The jump ball comes up fast until it gets almost on top of the batter, and then it takes a slight jump. For this reason it is a small fraction of an inch, but that is enough to cause the bat to hit below the middle. A batter hitting perfectly at the ball has no chance to drive it safe, as the break comes so late and is so fast that there is no chance to alter the swing of the bat to meet it squarely.

A faulty batter, who normally hits too high, on the other hand, is the one who is most likely to get hit when it is being used. How effective the delivery is shown by the fact that most of the no-hit games are to the credit of pitchers who use it.

Shedding his coat and jamming his soft straw firmly upon the head of his head he trudged along in the midst of a crowd of golf enthusiasts watching the play of Walter J. Travis and W. C. Fowler.

He applauded their good plays, expressed sorrow for their bad shots and in general enjoyed himself to the full in observing the play of these two crack amateurs.

"Oh I am getting too old, my boy," said Mr. Rockefeller. "It's too much of a nervous strain."

Travers' play today has made him a champion favorite for the championship honors, although it is evident that from the high class field entered some close matches will result.

The first qualifying round of 18 holes for the championship will be played tomorrow. The second round of 18 holes will be played Wednesday.
