PROGRESS OF PRESIDENT YOUNG AND COMPANY.

NEPHI, JUAB COUNTY,
Thursday Morning, Sep. 4, 1862.

EDITOR DESERET NEWS:

SIR:—Knowing the lively interest you take in all that tends to build up Zion, and to the furtherance of the cause of human redemption, I presume to intrude upon your well-known patience, and, à propos, that of your numerous readers, with an historical glance at the chief incidents of our visit to and journeyings through the southern settlements of our beloved mountain home.

President Young and company left G. S. L. City for the south a little after 7 a.m. of the 1st inst., and arrived at O. P. Rockwell's about 11, where all rested and lunched. The party then proceeded to Pleasant Grove, and held meeting at 4 o'clock, agreeably to previous appointment. Bishop Preston offered the opening prayer, after which the President preached an interesting and instructive discourse upon the important and interesting subjects of individual sanctification, the building of the Temple in G. S. L. City, the nature of the ordinances to be administered therein, and also described the kind of persons who will be entitled to receive them. His arguments and reasonings were impressive and forcible, accompanied with an unusual degree of pathos. Elder E. T. Benson, Bishop Raleigh and your correspondent followed with remarks of testimony and exhortation. Elder George Goddard pronounced the closing benediction. Our company was well entertained and kindly treated by the good brethren, resident at Pleasant Grove.

Tuesday morning we were up and off by 7. We endured the dust as best we could while passing along Battle Creek lane; it was not so bad on Provo bench, but bad enough. We forded the Timpanogas, the bridge no longer having legs to stand upon; drove through Provo city at a moderate speed, sufficiently slow to be within the limits of city ordinance, and reached Springville all in good health, except brother Calder, who was on that day afflicted with the tic-doloreux. Here a sumptuous dinner was provided by Bishop Johnson, to which all appeared to do ample justice.

On arriving at Payson, found that the notice of our visit, previously sent by the President had not been received, but Bishop Fairbanks caused the drum to be beaten, the signal for the people to come together, to which the people quickly responded, and ere the clock struck 5, the house was filled, and the meeting opened with prayer by Elder Lorenzo Snow, who, after singing by the choir, delivered a short address on the benefits and blessings of obedience to the requirements of heaven. He was followed by Elder John Taylor upon the general duties of the Latter Day Saints in Zion. Pres. Brigham Young then gave much valuable instruction on the importance of local and individual improvement; the necessity of learning, while here in these mountains, to make good fences, and to build cities, plant vineyards and orchards, how to farm neatly and economically, that we may be prepared to go and build up the waste places of Zion. The welcome greetings and kind treatment we met with were satisfactory evidences that the citizens of Payson have learned the full meaning of the term, "Brotherly kindness." The weather so far, has been very warm, and the dust plentiful.

Wednesday.—Yesterday we were not in a hurry in the morning, only intending to travel to this city. Passing through Summit Creek (I believe those who talk Spanish call it Santa Cruz,) we were treated to some excellent watermelons—the best I have tasted this year—by Mr. Abel Butterfield, which were finished at Punjen Springs.

About 4 in the afternoon, the western horizon began to be overcast with blackness, and by 5 o'clock loud peals of thunder brought a heavy shower of rain from the clouds which cooled the air, quenched the parched dust, and made house-flies intolerable.

The farmers here are very busy haying and harvesting, and the carpenters and joiners appear to be industriously engaged in roofing a new meeting house, the tower of which is to be eighty feet high; the building itself is forty by sixty.

A meeting was held last evening at 7 o'clock, at which President Young preached one of his fatherly and comforting discourses on the rapid progress of the great events connected with the latter day work. Elder Benson bore testimony, and gave a spirited exhortation to good works. Elder Taylor dismissed the meeting.

During the night the rain fell in torrents, thoroughly soaking everything capable of being soaked. This morning the state of the weather is cool and pleasant, the clouds are dispersing which gives us hope of an agreeable drive to Round Valley to-day.

I am, your friend and brother in the New Covenant,
JOHN V. LONG.

SPRING LAKE VILLA, DES.,
Sept. 1, 1862.

DEAR NEWS:

If we may believe half we hear of what is transpiring in the Eastern world—of the spirit of war and bloodshed that is rushing over the earth like a whirlwind, we may in sorrow exclaim, "The times are sadly out of joint;"—yet moaning and sighing will have little effect in alleviating the miseries and horrors of war, or restrain the rapid progress in the fulfilment of ancient and modern prophecy.

Away here in the "hiding place" in the mountains, living in peace and quiet, with plenty surrounding us, we can have little conception of the sorrow, the tears, the groans, the miseries and heart-aches that follow in the train of such sanguinary conflicts as we daily read of—nor need we wish to know more than to listen to the recital of one in a thousand that comes to our knowledge.

Whilst the earth is filling with broils and confusion, we have reason to be thankful to the Great Dispenser of all good things that we have been gathered out, and are far removed from those scenes of turmoil and distress; and when I think of the troubles and sorrows this people have passed through, for opinion's sake I can appreciate the scripture which says, "If the righteous are scarcely saved, where will the wicked and ungodly appear?" As I am a poor preacher, I may as well drop this prolific subject, leaving the solution and sequel of these ponderous events to the great future, and speak of such matters and things as especially interest us as a community.

After the adoption of both theory and practice of well-doing, and an earnest desire to do that which is right, and live in strict accordance with the principles we profess, contentment is the great key-word to happiness. Adding to these a reasonable amount of the necessities of life, a good man or woman has abundant reason for thankfulness; for as the poet has it,

"We want but little here below,
Nor want that little long."

Yet in the way of adding to our small store of comforts, much depends upon DOMESTIC ECONOMY in the management of the affairs of every day life, and though much has been said and written upon this prolific subject, much more may profitably be said, as very few understand the term, and I propose dropping a few hints upon this subject that may not be unprofitable. I do not consider it a matter of economy for a farmer to toil all summer to make a crop for which he has neither barns, cribs or granaries in which securely to preserve his crop; but first, let barns, granaries, etc., be provided; and then what may be grown, may be saved, and prove a blessing, if properly used.

It is no mark of economy for a housewife to banter a merchant or marketman out of a few dimes, to furnish an unwelcome or big dinner, but that virtue shows its brilliancy in making an excellent pudding of fifteen cents worth of material.

It is no mark of economy for a man to accumulate flocks and herds to perish, unsheltered and unfed in the wintry storm; but the quality and condition of the stock he produces prove whether he understands and practices economy.

The number of patches upon a garment never proves the economy of the feminine head of a family; we look more at the neatness, order and fitness of a repair, to judge of the economy of the women.

It never proves the economy of a family to notice the house and its inmates well supplied and provided with comforts. I first scan the premises to learn what portion of these blessings have been produced by the industry and energy of the family; and judge accordingly.

It does not show economy in parents to keep their children out of school to save expense; for the dissolute and idle habits thus engendered will never be outgrown.

In making a "big lot of pork," it shows a lack of economy to keep a "big lot of half starved hogs." Keep what your kitchen and dairy slops, brown and vegetables will feed well. Keep all in a constantly well-filled cask or vat to mix and ferment through the summer; then for fattening, always have your grain ground or chopped, and either ferment or cook before feeding.

It is no mark of economy to keep a flock of half fed fowls to eat your garden stuffs up; but keep what you can feed well, and you will have both your garden and plenty of eggs.

It is not economical to keep a large flock of diseased sheep that will lose both lambs and fleece through the winter. Keep a few well. Provide dry sheds and vegetables for the winter, plenty of rock in a clean corral, and give them always plenty of salt and a little sulphur, and you will have a good increase, heavy fleeces, and show your economy.

Never "spoil a ship for want of a little tar." What is worth doing, is worth doing well. In this consists true economy. If a farmer till double the amount of ground he can do well, he loses much labor, and has less crop than one half the land would have produced.

Domestic economy does not consist in pinching oneself for fear of want, or to lay up for the future, but to use the blessings received in moderation, adopting the Indian chief's rule: "If you have plenty, save all, it will be wanted. If you are short, save all, and you will have enough." You will be excusable for feeling an honest pride in producing from the elements around you, as far as possible, everything necessary for not only your necessities, but for your comfort and convenience. Do something! use your own head and hands; make yourself useful to your neighbors and the world of mankind, remembering ever that

"He who by the plow would thrive,
Must either hold himself or drive."

If you are a man, a woman, or a saint, show it by your actions; make yourselves independent.
