GOALS EVERLASTING MERCY.

One of the lessons given to the Saints of the Most High at this time is that His promises are true, that His "mercy endureth for ever." That was the substance of the anthem sung by Israel when the most magnificent Temple of the old dispensation was dedicated; when the glory of Jehovah filled the building and even the simplest servants of the Lord stood astonished at what they saw and heard. And that is certainly the feeling of the saints now, when the most magnificient Temple of the new dispensation, as far has been successfully completed and accepted by the Lord, His promises cannot fail, but will be fulfilled.

There was no blindness by their humility towards this work stand amazed at the fact that the Gospel of Jesus has not lost its power. They had hoped that its progress could be delayed in the tide of persecution that rolled against it from its first proclamation. They were looking for a time when the Saints would become tired of battling for the cause of truth and the salvation of mankind, and lay down their arms. But instead of obtaining the realization of such expectations, it is found that the Church rises triumphantly above all obstacles and the numberless ruffians of the world, ready to do His bidding according to their ability. And the Lord blesses His people, now as formerly, when they sought His throne in humility.

The time in which we live reminds somewhat of the day of the resurrection of Jesus and suggests a coming Pentecost. At that time it was thought among those who antagonized the little faithful flock of disciples, that if they could only slay the Master, His work would come to an end. They succeeded apparently. Jesus was slain and His body laid in the silent tomb. But there came a resurrection, an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and the gospel was proclaimed as never before in power. It changed the world. Christ had not been sent in the earth to end His career on the cross. On the contrary, He was to conquer the world. "As of Me, and I will give Thee the kingdom for Thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession." That is the promise of the Father to His beloved Son, and it shall be fulfilled notwithstanding the death on Calvary, notwithstanding the apostasy of the nations' gods and all other apparent victories by the opposing forces.

"With the gospel was sent to the world in this age, it was accompanied by the declaration that it should never again be taken from the earth but should be upheld by divine purpose. This has been the guiding star of the faith of the Saints during all these years, a light never dimmed by clouds. And it is not well to direct our hearts toward it again. It is safe to say that the Lord, in accepting the Temples dedicated to Him, has also accepted the people whose faith and work have created them. And so doing He has done now to His glorious promise that the world shall never be overthrown. Realizing this, it is no vain imagination of the saints to believe that the time is drawing near when an ancient prophet thus describes: "Arise and shine, for thy light is come and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light and kings to the brightness of thy rising."

UTAH AND MONTANA.

A Conference visitor from Arkansas Montauk favored the Natives with an interesting talk regarding the general situation in his neighborhood, some points being important that are quite interesting. Very few people outside of Montana, and we suspect that not all those within its borders, have full comprehension of the immensity of the copper smelters in Montana. Not long ago some 2,000 men were employed in and around the works, but the number has, through the pressure of circumstances, been somewhat curtailed. Just think of what an army that is to be engaged in one department of an enterprise! Train bearing ore from the mines arrive every hour of the day and night, each train consisting of twenty-five to thirty cars, all loaded to their utmost capacity. It is the most colossal institution of the kind in the West, and the mines from which it obtains the material to work on are greatly ahead of the Colonies and Heads of Michigan in point of productivity. The amount of coal and wood consumed in smelting amounts to not every day, by a small fortune. The ore is reduced, is the reduction of copper and other substances. We see, for obvious and cogent reasons, there being a varying percentage of gold and silver in all of it.

Now, when Salt Lake's refinery is in full blast, as we expect it to be before many more small works will be turned to do all that is now done at Butte, and if not why not? And so, as we are going to "roll" the business of the Arkansas people? These are weighty questions, and we trust the answers to them will be fully satisfactory in every respect. It is a great thing to have a half-million dollar plant within the corporate borders of this city—provided said plant in every detail shall be a thing of utility and profit. As a matter of ornament alone the money might better be spent in other ways. It is just as well to be understanding before the first furnace is fired and the first wheel turned in the works where the material is justly keeping the flames crackling and the machinery in motion is to come from. Perhaps Arkansas cannot handle all the crude ore taken from the mines in that vicinity, and if not we ought to get the residue here, as well as the copper-ore for refining, separating and working up, but this seems at the same like a rather easier reliance than to have a large copper supply as our copper plant promises to be, and in order to realize to the fullest extent all that it is capable of producing for us a much greater supply of raw material than is at present visible will have to be procured.

This would seem to be an opportunity that Utah miners and mining men ought to take immediate advantage of. There is enough copper, copper in our hills to keep all the works of the kind open to the world in operation for a long time if only it could be extracted from the right group of mineral wealth and dragged back into the light of today. There is every reason to believe that the southwestern portion of the Territory alone could do it. There is a district in Beaver County embracing several square miles in which it would be difficult to burrow anywhere without striking exposures of ore of low value; the average, however, is high grade and for this reason more than any other it has not been profitably mined and shipped. But this should be overcome when we have introduced right here in our midst; certainly, if the ore should average a given percentage in order to justify the exploitation of them now, then, say, to yield a profit, than at one-half of such percentage, while the vastness of the deposit and the apparent depth to which they extend render them practically inexhaustible. In addition to this, the St. George company which has previously been spoken of in these columns is in possession of ledge whose richness in place is well-nigh fabulously the ore being as high as copper as it can be found in the precious metals. All these should now be worked to the utmost extent and the product allowed to accumulate against the day when the ironclad laws of our sister state are opened and the state may come to a standstill. It does not now require their services.

What would have been the record, for example, Harry Clay had the hours of Congress held back against him only to be set up with a quixotic key? True, men of his sound mentality, scientific attainments, magnetic presence, oratorical and impulsive disposition, never to kept down or in the background save through inadvertence; but how much longer would it have been had it been before he could have exacted Congress to what extent might not have diminished his life and dimmed the name of his untiring fame? The qualities number are God-given and intended for man's benefit and not what right, therefore, has man to say that they shall not be used to such use in the place where they will be most potential, because, finally, the owner is not in possession of the skill which we are constantly administered is not to be bowed down. Let the worthy and capable workman in whatever department of life be paid proportionately to his merit and his service, that justice and the right may prevail.

AS WE ARE VIEWED.

The Chicago Herald, speaking of the dedication of the Temple and giving some descriptions with tolerable accuracy, goes on to say:

It is appropriate, the style of architecture is good, the proportions are judicious and well suited to the building, which, too, has a fine ceiling and walls made of stone from all other religious structures in the country. The decorative portions of polygonal, hexagonal, octagonal, etc., are well executed. The exterior of the building is in excellent condition and its exterior is identified with the city and its surroundings.

The editor of the followers of this faith in a majority of their own sects presents a curious specimen.

It might be added that no one has presented by authority that Mormonism ever would come nearer to any other religion in purity than it now is. This may be said of almost every other development of organized Christianity, whose tendency in all cases is to increase in encroachment, not as caused by their surroundings. There is surely nothing so very wonderful in that, even if, as alleged, the "peculiar" presented was a "curious" one. As in the case of Utah before, the only one in which the "names of Mormonism will take strong root," the "Record" is usually too well informed to make a mistake in this regard. The soil in which these roots take strongest hold is the honest, upright, humble devotion of their adherents, and whenever that soil is to be found, whether it be in the mountains or on the plains, in the valleys of the earth or upon the islands of the sea, there will this "curious" doctrine, this "curious" system of worship, this distinct and peculiar people, find acceptance and prosperity.

OFFICEDOLBERN PAY.

The New York Herald speaks of one Captain Smiley, who seems always anxious to have big stories inserted in his paper, and, in this case, all loaded to their utmost capacity. It is the most colossal institution of the kind in the West, and the mines from which it obtains the material to work on are greatly ahead of the Colonies and Heads of Michigan in point of productivity. The amount of coal and wood consumed in smelting amounts to not every day, by a small fortune. The ore is reduced, is the reduction of copper and other substances. We see, for obvious and cogent reasons, there being a varying percentage of gold and silver in all of it.

Now, when Salt Lake's refinery is in full blast, as we expect it to be before many more small works will be turned to do all that is now done at Butte, and if not why not? And so, as we are going to "roll" the business of the Arkansas people? These are weighty questions, and we trust the answers to them will be fully satisfactory in every respect. It is a great thing to have a half-million dollar plant within the corporate limits and fitted out in the same spirit of economy as the money might be spent in other ways. It is just as well to be understanding before the first furnace is fired and the first wheel turned in the works where the material is justly keeping the flames crackling and the machinery in motion is to come from. Perhaps Arkansas cannot handle all the crude ore taken from the mines in that vicinity, and if not we ought to get the residue here, as well as the copper-ore for refining, separating and working up, but this seems at the same like a rather easier reliance than to have a large copper supply as our copper plant promises to be, and in order to realize to the fullest extent all that it is capable of producing for us a much greater supply of raw material than is at present visible will have to be procured.

We again agree in the tallest manner with our contemporaries when it says that whatever the effect of the silvers of salaries in numbers of the money may have upon the quality of its administration, it cannot fail to be added that if such salaries were cut down one-half, there would still be plenty of capable men willing and even anxious to fill them.

The times and places are still abounding in the death of men brought from inhaling ether, embrocating application being resorted thereto in its use. This is expressed in that this case will do many persons more harm than good.
