

ROYALTY VICTIMS OF DULLARD'S FUN

King of Wurttemberg and Grand Duke Adolphus Rush to Rescue of Clown Horse.

COUNTRY LOUT HAS A LAUGH.

Explains to Exalted Personages Their Sweat Was Disturbed in Vain Because Naz Merely Had a Habit.

Special Correspondence.

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—Much-traveled people will tell you that the most stupid people in the whole world are found in Mecklenburg. Natives of that district are even more dense than the inhabitants of the county of Wiltshire, England, and that is saying a good deal. The inhabitants of both of these places will admit the im-ment, but they do not call it stupidity; they have another name for it. They have called it into a virtue and call it "Imperturbability." In the United States, if a country yokel didn't know the way to a town 15 miles away he would be accounted a fool; but in Mecklenburg the peasant one meets on the highways doesn't know, has never been there and never wants to go. That is imperturbability.

KING WAS FOOLED.

It is a big mistake, however, to think that the country dullard never "scores," as the king of Wurttemberg has just discovered. Recently, the royal individual went to shoot with the Grand Duke Adolphus of Mecklenburg. Yesterday, accompanied by the grand duke's eldest son, they drove in a luxurious motor car to the famous deer park at Neustrelitz. On the way they came upon a country tilt-cart drawn at a snail's pace along the narrow road by a white horse. Perched on the seat were a peasant and his good wife. The chauffeur blew his horn and much to the royal party's surprise, the horse began to prance briskly.

HORSE PLAYED A PART.

As the peasant made no attempt to pull the horse and cart out of the road, the chauffeur repeated the "honk, honk." The horse reared and jumped about in St. Patrick's day parade style, but strange to say the peasant and his wife sat stolidly on the seat without any signs of excitement. Finally the horse flopped over on its side and lay quite still.

Immediately out jumped the king, the grand duke and the son of the grand duke and came running up to the fallen horse. The grand duke made a dive at the horse's head, his son grabbed the bridle and the king narrowly escaped serious injury in unfastening the traces while the horse's hind legs were working like hails. All this while the peasant and his good wife sat calmly on their seat and watched the royal trio perspire at their self-imposed task. Finally, after a great deal of pulling and coaxing the white horse scrambled to its feet and patiently submitted to being re-embarked by the three pair of hands which had probably never before done such humble work. When everything was in order again, the grand duke handed the peasant a piece of money. "There, there, my good man," he said, "it's all right this time, anyhow. Now you can tell your cronies that the grand duke and his son picked up your horse, and the king of Wurttemberg helped them."

The humble subject slipped the coin between his teeth and after assuring himself that it was a true coin of the realm, observed in his slow even tones of imperturbability: "Thanks, yer royal highness, but yer might 'na' saved yer breath 'er cool yer cabbage with. The ol' 'os' allays lay down when he hears a machine behind, but he do allays get right side oop again himself."

BIG SQUABBLES; TRIVIAL CAUSES.

It will be no longer as a licensed minister of the gospel according to the Church of England.

FORCED WINE'S USE.

A little while ago the bishop of Manchester censured one of his vicars for using unfermented wine at the holy communion service. The vicar replied that many of his parishioners were teetotalers, that some of them had a hard struggle to keep the pledge, and that even a sip of intoxicating liquor might rekindle the appetite that they were striving to conquer. All that had no effect on the bishop. He ordered the vicar to use only the sort of wine one can get drunk on if he takes enough of it.

SEVERE AND SILLY.

But it isn't only the bishops that show intolerance. The other day a vicar of a parish in a little one-horse town gave the newly elected mayor "fits" because he had announced his intention of attending vespers "in state" accompanied by the members of the town council, at a Nonconformist chapel. "If you come to my church after that," said the vicar, "you will come uninvited."

POOR OLD NEWSMAN.

Many rural towns in England are ruled by the parson and the squire. Helmsley, which is tucked away in a remote corner of Yorkshire is one such place. The parson is the Rev. C. N.

Gray and the squire Lord Faversham. In a recent sermon Mr. Gray issued a command that no Sunday paper should be bought or sold on Sundays in his parish. One poor old man who could ill spare the money he made by the sale of Sunday papers disregarded the edict. That made the parson furious. "If you don't stop selling Sunday papers," I shall complain to Lord Faversham and you will have to take the consequences," he said to him.

Then the man became afraid. He knew the power of Lord Faversham, his home and his livelihood depended on the good graces of his overlord. Therefore he had no alternative but to make his submission to the parson and sacrifice his little income he had made from the sale of Sunday papers.

WHAT WAS OBJECTIONABLE.

A reporter asked Mr. Gray if he read the daily paper on Monday. He replied that he did.

"But the Monday paper is produced by Sunday labor and the Sunday paper is the product of week-day labor only," said the scribe.

"That makes no difference," replied the parson, "the Sunday paper is sold on Sundays and it is that I object to and intend to put a stop to as long as I have power in this parish."

GREAT BUTTINSKITS.

Not very long ago this vicar issued a decree against dancing, and dancing was forbidden in the village. Now, however, he has withdrawn his ukase against dancing, but has taken the dances and dancers under his own care, and the villagers can indulge in "the light fantastic toe" only under the vigilant eye of the parson.

"Why don't you tell the vicar to mind his own business?" a resident was asked who had told of his irritating interference in all sorts of matters that were in no way connected with his spiritual duties. "That's all very well," was the reply. "Some people have gone so far as that and they have had to clear out of Helmsley."
