It is the most delightful of all hair dressing—cooling the head, allaying irritation, curing headache and throbbing temples, making the hair strong, fragrant, glossy and obedient to control, so cleanly to use that it will not soil the finest fabric, causing the hair to grow luxuriantly and beautifully, removing dandruff and pimples. No man or woman can become bald who will use the Lyon's Kathairon properly.

District Court.—Monday morning, September 4th.

Jo. Gordon vs. N. P. R. R. Company; judgment, by consent, for $500 and costs. Ten days stay of execution granted.

People, &c., vs. John F. Tasker et al, indicted for murder; Sarah M. Macfarland was brought into Court, arraigned and pleaded not guilty.

Gone East.—This morning Bishop Edward Hunter and John Sharp, Esq., President of the Utah Central Railroad, departed for the east. Bishop Sharp will accompany Bishop Hunter to the place of the latter's destination, in Pennsylvania, where he will be surrounded by relatives and friends. They also expect to return home in company with each other.

Entertainment. — The musical entertainment at the First Ward school house, on Saturday night, was a very satisfactory affair, the pieces, both vocal and instrumental, being excellently rendered. The audience was large, being beyond the sitting capacity of the house. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was returned to Professor Thomas, the Theatre orchestra, the choir, and all who took part in the performances.

William Robert May. — Eliza May sends us a letter of inquiry concerning the address of her son, William Robert May, who left Havre de Gras, France, about fifteen years ago, and came to Utah. If this should meet the eye of the gentleman inquired for he will do well to communicate with his mother, who expresses great anxiety to hear from him. It will be to his advantage to open correspondence with her. Address to Mrs. Graham, 31 Richmond Row, Liverpool, England.

Arizona Mission.—Last evening, in the 19th Ward, Elder Edward E. Jones delivered a very interesting discourse on the Arizona Mission. He was formerly a resident of the Ward, and went as a missionary to Arizona about six months since. He speaks well of the country, the Indians and the general management of affairs in the settlements.

He expressed the belief that the colony would eventually be a great success. He returns to his new home in the South, with his family, in the Fall.

Not Just Yet.—We keep receiving letters from different parts of the world and from various individuals containing inquiries as to when the "Mormon" people intend consummating their proposed exodus, to Mexico, to New Mexico, to some of the Pacific Islands, or to some other parts of the globe. These interrogatories show to some extent how ready people are to gulp down improbable stories about the "Mormons." This community are splendidly located where they are, having a fine country and good, comfortable homes, which they are not disposed to vacate by any means. The stories of another "exodus of the Mormons" probably arises from the fact that those who are not at all friendly to them wish they would bundle up and go, that they might step in and take possession of their property. The "Mormons" are a very accommodating kind of people, but really their disposition in that direction does not lead them near so far as that. The "Mormons" continue to enlarge and strengthen their borders, a wise thing to do, but such a thing as an exodus, or vacating process, does not appear to be in their programme of proceedings. When the Lord wants any portion of them to go here or there to build up and establish his work, temporally or spiritually, all well and good, but the vacating operation does not appear to be necessary by any means.

Tabernacle Services.—Yesterday afternoon Elder George Q. Cannon delivered an interesting discourse, in the course of which he alluded to his late labors in Washington. His remarks were reported in full.

He was followed by Elder Joseph F. Simmons, who said he had just returned after having been absent ten months on a mission to the eastern States, where he had been blessed and prospered and met with many kind friends, and who had considerately supplied his wants and necessities. He had felt his weakness, but, by relying on God, had had some success in carrying the principles of the gospel to those whom he met. He understood the object of his mission to be to call upon the people to repent of their sins, be baptized, by being immersed or buried in water, by one having the authority of the Holy Priesthood, have the gift of the Holy Ghost conferred upon them, by the laying on of hands, and by remaining faithful to the end they would be saved in the presence of God. He had felt that he had been properly commissioned and had therefore a right to make this proclamation, and consequently gone forth in confidence. He felt thankful that he was a Latter-day Saint, or was, at least, trying to be one. Wherever he had gone while on his mission he had been called a "Mormon," of which appellation he felt proud, and that was the way in which he felt about his religion.

The Latter-day Saints should be active and energetic in the performance of their duties. They enjoyed greater blessings and privileges than any other people, having the Holy Priesthood, empowered to preach the gospel and administer its ordinances. They were unlike the world, whose clergy taught for hire and divined for money, and the more money they got the better they preached. There was nothing complicated or ambiguous about the gospel, being conspicuous for its simplicity. God had created all things, and had a perfect right to give laws for the government of his children, and it was the duty of the latter to obey.

The speaker deplored the carelessness regarding the work of God manifested by some of the Saints, and made special reference to this feeling as shown by some of the young people. Some of the young women were uniting themselves in marriage with unbelievers, which he said they would some time discover would be the means of clipping them of future glory.

He concluded by bearing testimony to the truth of the gospel, as revealed through Joseph Smith.

Murder Case.—John F. alias Ben Tasker has been indicted for murder, is now under confinement awaiting trial for that offense, and this morning Sarah M. McFarland was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to being a party to the crime. The latter's husband, who is also included in the indictment, is "away from home" and cannot be found.

We understand that the alleged victim of the crime is an old man named Lund, who several times testified for the prosecution in some of Tasker's thieving operations. Lund suddenly disappeared from view and has not since been seen.

Civilization.—We are reliably informed that three young women of this city recently departed for one of the mining camps west, to go to one of those infamous houses of ill repute, in that locality. This is the kind of "civilization," the introduction of which some people think will solve the "Mormon" problem. Breaking down the barriers of chastity and virtue is the work of villainous scoundrels.

Release and Appointment.—Elder Wm. B. Barton is released from the Presidency of the Liverpool Conference, to return home on the 16th inst.

Elder James Mellor, now traveling in the Liverpool Conference, is appointed to the Presidency of that Conference.—Millennial Star, Aug. 14.

Seventies.—We are requested by President Joseph Young to remind the Seventies of the various quorums that the next general meeting of that organization takes place on Wednesday evening, September 6, at 7 p. m., at the City Hall, when it is desirable that there should be a large attendance.

Splendid Grapes. — From Mr. Godfrey Leinhard, watchman of the NEWS Office, we received to-day a basket of luscious grapes, large and beautiful, raised on his lot on the 18th Ward bench, north of the old city wall. They comprise five or six different varieties, all of which are fine.

Closed.—After a successful run of two months, the Ladies' Territorial Centennial Fair closed on Saturday. Exhibitors commenced to take away their wares to-day, and it is desirable that the others should do the same as soon as practicable, in order that the building may be cleared as speedily as possible.

A Disturbance.—After midnight yesterday morning there were noisy and turbulent demonstrations at a disreputable house on Franklin Avenue, resulting in the arrest of two persons, a male and female.

Came to Blows.—On Saturday night a night watchman and a U. S. Deputy marshal got cross with each other, ending their arguments with an exchange of blows. Both were arrested.

Removed.—Mr. Abe Blumenthal has removed his business quarters from the rear of Phelps' store, to rooms over Kahn Brothers' store.

Rain.—A short shower of rain at noon to-day.

Those Stolen Railway Tickets.

NEW YORK, 4. — The office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at Princeton, N. J., was robbed in July of one hundred thousand dollars worth of tickets. The tickets were promptly stopped, and becoming useless to the burglars, they sought to make something by negotiating their return to the company, but through the energy and shrewdness of Samuel Carpenter, general eastern passenger agent, the suspected thieves have been arrested.

Disastrous Fire.

2 a. m.—A fire broke out at one o'clock this morning, in Busch's Hotel in Hoboken, a large German boarding house, and spread with great rapidity to the adjoining buildings. At this hour, it is burning furiously, and notwithstanding the brilliant moonlight, lights up New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City grandly.

The Moulton-Beecher Suit.

The case brought by Moulton against Beecher for $50,000 for malicious prosecution, was up today in the Brooklyn court on the motion of Sherman for a change of venue, as it is thought it would be easier to procure a jury in some other county than New York or Kings county. Sherman submitted a number of affidavits from Beecher and others to that effect. Gen. Pryor, for plaintiff, objected and moved to dismiss the case, as he thought the court had no jurisdiction in regard to it. Judge Dykeman decided to consider Prior's motion first, leaving Sherman's motion to stand over for three weeks.

Post Office Changes.

WASHINGTON, 4. — The Salem, Utah County post office has been discontinued. Charles H. Lesbrook has been appointed Post Master at Highland, Salt Lake county, Utah, and Newton Dunyon Post Master at Tooele, Tooele county, Utah.

Instructions About the Coming Elections.

The U. S. Attorney General has issued full instructions to the U. S. marshals as to their duties in the coming elections, to the effect that all citizens must be fully protected at their registration lists while voting, and also protected from any violence which may be threatening for having voted as they deemed proper. Special deputy marshals are to be appointed only in cities of twenty thousand inhabitants and upwards. In discharge of their duties the marshals can call upon all citizens, civil or military, or in whatever service they may be, and no State law or officers can impede them.

Distillery Cases Dismissed—Indicted For Murder.

CHICAGO, 4.—The cases of the thirteen distillers, rectifiers, &c., known as the first batch who were indicted a year ago last May, and who gave their evidence to the government, were brought up in the United States court this morning, and after a brief presentation by their counsel of the facts in their behalf, were dismissed from the docket.

The grand jury, this morning, indicted Alexander Sullivan for the murder of C. C. Hanford.

The Troops Start Again—That Diabolical Trail—Where is Lo?—Everybody Disgusted.

TERRY'S CAMP ON YELLOWSTONE RIVER, Aug. 26, via Bismarck, D. T., 4.—Yesterday morning he moved his command after an eight days' rest, marching 20 miles before camping. Crook had changed his camp the day before, in search of better grass, going nine miles up Powder River, his last night's camp being about ten miles in advance of ours. Our road was that diabolical trail, which has enticed us so far to so little purpose, and which had been abandoned as a useless job. The only reasons apparently for taking it up again were that the generals were in absolute ignorance of where the Indians had gone and what they were doing, that the campaign had proven a failure so that something had to be done for appearance sake, that the trail was the only Indian sign found, and that the army might reach the agencies by this route, as well as another. Everybody has grown dissatisfied with what they claim to be the continued mismanagement of the officers, and criticize the conduct of affairs severely, and frankly express their disgust at having anything to do with a campaign which was evidently based upon theories. From the steamer, which is still waiting near our last camp, having met the Josephine and Yellowstone coming up forty miles below Glendine Creek, we learned that both vessels were fired upon by Indians, one private being killed. Several small parties of Sioux were seen at different points on the north bank of the river, but only one came within range, and they quickly retreated before sharp firing from the boats, one chap falling as though badly hurt. Just above here the Josephine picked up a white man, who hailed her. He with another had deserted from the little garrison at Glendine Creek. They had been surrounded by Indians. His companion was killed, scalped and mutilated, and he himself badly wounded in the arm. Creeping between some rocks, he lay in the pelting rain two days and nights, and the Indians firing at him for a while and evidently waiting till he was starved out.

A Village Discovered.

Captain Rice, commanding a company of infantry, at Glendine, sends word that he has been attacked twice by small bands of Sioux, but nobody hurt. His scouts claim to have discovered a large Indian village some distance down the river, numbering from 1,000 to 1,500 men. On receipt of this news Terry rode over to Crook's camp and the following plan was agreed upon—to cross the Yellowstone at this point, twenty-five miles by water below Powder, march inland a few miles, and swing down toward Glendine, so as to tap the trail if the enemy are moving north, and corral them if they are still below, Co. K to skirt the head waters of O'Fallon and Cabin creeks and strike the Yellowstone near Glendine, thus preventing a countermarch of the Indians and hemming them in. If the village really exists, which is doubted by many, a row may be expected within a few days at least. Should either column strike a fresh trail, it will be followed.

The Servians Panic Stricken.

LONDON, 4. — A correspondent telegraphs that when the villages around Alexinatz were fired by the Turks in Friday's battle, the Servians became panic stricken and whole battalions fled. The carnage was terrible. The streets of Alexinatz were filled with wounded and dying. The Turks pursued the flying Servians, pouring in a fearful fire.

Particulars of the Great Battle at Alexinatz.

A special to the Times from Belgrade indicates the crushing defeat and thorough disorganization of Tchernayeff's army. Taking advantage of the good will felt toward the English, and inspired by the arrival of an ambulance corps with a cash fund of £10,000, the correspondent of the Times got to the front in company with a number of officers of the Geneva Cross, and was an eye-witness of the most of the battle near Alexinatz on Friday. The battle commenced just as the party reached Alexinatz. The following are additional details of the engagement:

The battle was sustained uninterruptedly for eleven hours and a half on the ground which the Servians had made the strongest in all this country. It was a decisive encounter, long looked forward to, and was wanting in no features that could import a profitable grandeur to the one side for supremacy and on the other for existence. The first shot was fired under our eyes just as we had passed Rubonist, a small village of a house or two, about two miles outside of Alexinatz. It came from a battery which the Turks had got into position on the heights about Kruse, which is south-west of Alexinatz. It was followed by others from the guns of the same battery and a battery placed about half a mile further north. The Turks immediately appear, beginning their movements to turn Tchernayeff's right, and cut off the communication of Alexinatz with Belgrade. Hazardous as the design was, it succeeded for some hours. The battle is almost between the artillery.

The valley through which it is necessary the Turks should pass to gain their object, is guarded by two strong Servian batteries, against which the Turks direct the fire of three of their batteries. The fight continued three hours with no advantage for either side. The Turks then reinforce their artillery with three more batteries and advance, the fire growing tremendous. The Servians make a fine struggle and bring up another battery, but in spite of all their efforts, the Turks steadily advance. In the meantime the Turkish infantry are busy. From Alexinatz the Servian infantry and cavalry hurry out to get there in advance, and the storm of battle begins in earnest. We hear the first fusilade at 11.40 o'clock. The Turkish infantry dare not show at the end of the little defiles yet, for the Servian guns are too close, but they are not far off, and if that gallant battery which is doing such good service on the hill between the two defiles can only be silenced the battle will be at once developed. The Servian infantry are in the valley north of the little independent hill which commands the entrance to the defile and at intervals of a quarter of a hour sharp volleys from the rifles are heard amid the thunder of some dozen batteries.

At half past one o'clock we see dense masses of smoke and sheets of flame rise from the valley right before us, and close to the northern defile the conflagration is tremendous. The brilliant sunshine is completely overcome by the livid flames that rise high into the heavens, and are now only fringed by the dense masses of smoke. More to the north a village named Sustra is on fire. The Servian troops make a precipitate retreat from it, but as yet a good defense is kept up. The Turks advance under cover of their batteries, now skirmishing, now with a rush. The Servians, though they are falling back, have not yet lost all heart. Their infantry resist, but with such trepidation, that the number of maligerays is becoming greater. The battalions are evidently thinning.

It is now past two o'clock and for awhile the Servian artillery seems to be making ground, that the battery which has been doing such good service on the little hill has advanced beyond it, and is boldly pouring forth its fire farther into the enemy's position, but this is deceptive. The Turks do not care about it. The rattle of their rifles is heard more and more at the north. At each volley, return volleys are becoming feebler. The artillery fire on both sides has become languid, and all at once there is another great fire. The village of Great Adrawaz is now in flames. This village is close to Sitkowatz. Sutna still burns and the clear air is full of vast flames, and dense masses of smoke, and thunder of cannon, and the incessant volleys of rifles.

Collision.

The American ship Sonora from San Francisco, May 3d, for Liverpool, was sunk by a collision off Holyhead, to-day. The colliding vessel, a Spanish steamer, was also sunk; one sailor was drowned. The total loss will aggregate one million dollars.

TURKEY.

Another Servian Retreat.

BELGRADE, 4.—Official dispatches say the entire Turkish army attacked the Servian right wing on Friday. The battle lasted until 9 o'clock at night. The Servians maintained their position, but the Turks being three times more numerous, the Servians finally retreated within their fortifications at Alexinatz.

Visitors to the Centennial Exposition will do wisely to defer purchasing goods in our line until they come to our store in New York, where they will find greater variety and more moderate prices, and can select more at their leisure. But we have a concession to sell some styles of our goods in the building of the Department of Public Comfort, and those not coming to New York are invited to call on our representation there.
