TO BATTLE AT THE POLLS

Tabernacle Session Yesterday Leaves
No Doubt That Contest Will Be Waged in Earnest.

The campaign looking for legislation in favor of local county option is on. The opening gun was fired yesterday in the presence of several thousand persons and the report will resound throughout the state. At the tabernacle yesterday, Rev. Dr. P. A. Baker stirred the large audience by his masterful eloquence, as he inveighed against the evils of the liquor traffic. In a strong preparation he declared that whiskey is a panther in the path of every boy in Utah and parents were advised to shoot to kill.

Addresses were also delivered by Gov. John C. Cutler and Rev. Lewis S. Fuller, superintendent of the Utah Anti-Saloon league. The latter was named as chairman of the meeting by President Francis M. Lyman, who presided. Besides the four named there were present on the stand, Elders John Henry Smith, Heber J. Grant, Rudger Clawson, Hyrum M. Smith, Rev. Albert Buxton, Elder Seymour B. Young, Hon. Frank B. Stephens, Elder Matt Thomas and Judge George F. Goodwin.

The tabernacle choir rendered two selections, "Light and Truth," "True to the Faith," and with the congregation sang "Do What is Right." "The Gushing Rill" was sung by the Sixth ward Sunday school choir. Elder Heber J. Grant offered the invocation, and the benediction was pronounced by Elder John Henry Smith. President Lyman introduced to the congregation Rev. Lewis S. Fuller.

REV. LEWIS S. FULLER.

The Rev. Mr. Fuller expressed appreciation of the courtesy extended by the Church authorities in making possible the great gathering. For nine months he had traveled throughout the state, and everywhere he had met with kindly reception, and he had found a sentiment favorable to temperance. The people seem to be alive to the necessity of restrictive and prohibitive legislation. This has become necessary because of the westward movement of saloon men and their element which has been driven out of states that have legislated against the evil. The Anti-Saloon League of America is not a political organization, but represents all creeds and persons with temperance tendencies.

GOV. JOHN C. CUTLER.

Gov. Cutler said there had always been in Utah a strong sentiment against the liquor traffic. So strong was the sentiment that for a long time the evil was kept entirely out. Gradually the saloon crept in, first in Salt Lake City, then to other cities. Even at this time, many settlements in the state, some of them quite large, have no saloons. Personally, Gov. Cutler said that he believed the saloon had no rightful place in any community, and he would like to see it legislated out of existence. He inclined to the belief that for the present, local option was the best measure to be adopted. If this proves in any way effectual, more general measures can be undertaken. He expressed a willingness to aid in every possible way all attempts to put down the liquor traffic.

DR. P. A. BAKER.

The Anti-Saloon league is the newest move against the liquor traffic, said the Rev. Mr. Baker. Fifteen years ago, in 1893, the league was organized and formed the society. It is international in character, and will have no part in bickerings or discussion except against the common enemy, liquor. It will have no part in the church, and its political creed is wrapped up in the sentiment that voters should vote for good candidates, on the opposite ticket rather than a poor one on his own. It favors local option, followed by prohibition. It will seek a divine way of accomplishing its purpose. In God's economy, there is a proper time, a fixed dispensation for the accomplishment of all His purposes. The church sometimes devotes itself to little things, while great evils flourish. This condition has driven many great men away from the church, and sometimes such men have said harsh things, but the speaker said he had more sympathy for a person who scolds and criticizes than for an individual who never is stirred or awakened against an existing evil.

GOD WILL TRIUMPH.

Once in a while a person, legislature or a congress will place himself or itself across the pathway of God's Church and seeks to stop its progress, but in time the kingdom tears its way through. God will sweep out of His way everything that stands in the way of His plans. God is getting Himself to His world by means of modern institutions and inventions for the betterment of the human race. "Obstructionist, get out of the way, or you will get run over," said Dr. Baker. "Voter, go into your voting place, and with the aid of God and a lead pencil, say whether or not you want saloons in your community." The history of the present internal revenue regulations was given by Dr. Baker. The inception of which was strenuously opposed by President Lincoln, until he was persuaded that it was a war necessity, and would be repealed when the Civil war was over. When the crisis was over, the worthy president was in his grave, and the promise was forgotten by the men that made it.

Over 39,000,000 of the people of the United States are living under prohibition laws, and this year more saloons will be put out of existence than in any previous year. The movement is not a wave, it is an ocean swell, and before it subsides this nation will be a liquorless nation, and the flag will be without a stain.

"The liquor traffic will only be lawful when it is dead, and the only good saloon is a dead saloon."

"When God is woe, it is time to stop, and it is written 'Woe to him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips.' Who are we to whom the saloon can say, 'You shall not interfere with my business affairs?' We are American citizens and have the right to legislate against anything that grinds to pieces the weak among humanity. The liquor-panther is on the track of every boy in Utah—your boy—and I bid you shoot and shoot to kill."

REV. D. A. BROWN TO LEAVE.

Rev. D. A. Brown of the First Baptist church surprised his congregation yesterday morning, by resigning after a strenuous pastorate of seven years. He said his health had been impaired, making a rest necessary. He will remain, however, in Salt Lake until September. During Mr. Brown's pastorate, the membership of the church has more than doubled. The church has realized a good sum from the sale of its property at Second South and Second South streets, and is about to erect a fine house of worship at Second South and Fourth East streets.

FAREWELL TO PRIEST.

With Burl Armstrong acting as toast-master and trying to preserve order the Salt Lake Press club met Saturday evening to bid Joel Priest, farewell. Mr. Priest has been connected with the Herald for many years and has been one of the hardest workers for the success of the Press club. He has resigned his newspaper position here to go to Boise as industrial man for the Oregon Short Line. At his going away

SPEAKS TO THE PARTIES

The Rev. W. M. Paden Draws a Sermon from the Events of the Day in Politics.

Rev. Dr. W. W. Paden preached on political platforms last evening, in the First Presbyterian church, taking as his text, Acts xix: 22: "Some therefore, cried one thing and some another; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together." The speaker said in part:

Our recent national conventions have been falling over each other in their endeavors to get votes by pledging unlimited appropriations for water-ways, swamp or arid land, reclamation, etc., and yet as late as 1856, a man was elected president on a platform which declared that the Constitution does not confer upon the general government the power to commence and carry on a general system of internal improvement.

"Some questions are soon settled when made definite. All that is needed is a clear cut issue and a fair fight in the open. The paramount issue of 1896 is not even mentioned in the platform of the party which forced it, and only mentioned by the other by way of reminiscence. Cleveland was elected (in 1884) on a platform which began 'The Democratic party of the Union, recognizes that, as the nation grows older, new issues are born of time and progress and old issues perish.' The tariff question seems to be an exception. Both parties are still trimming away at it. The only question seems to be which has the biggest and best body of trimmers. As for such new issues as interstate commerce, court procedure in the matter of injunction, and the new phases of the banking question, neither party is quite satisfied with what it says on these questions. Even the party, one of whose boasted assets is courage and confidence, is not quite satisfied with what it has done. Both parties are in a hopeful state of dissatisfaction.

"The number of points on which the platforms virtually agree is greater than the number in which they essentially differ. It is encouraging to note the readiness of both the parties to commit themselves to the civil service policy. Yet some of us can remember when such a policy was greeted with a cynical smile by all the practical politicians. As for the English system of accounting for election expenses, the Democrats have got there first. The Republicans will, in spite of impediments, doubtless report for duty later.

"Both platforms are fony on the temperance question. The Republicans put in a bid for the liquor vote by leaving out the customary splinter of sympathy with wise temperance legislation. They no longer dare to say that. The Republican party cordially sympathizes with all wise and well directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality. On the other hand the Democratic platform leaves out its sneaking and rotten plank about summary legislation. It no longer dares to say 'We oppose summary laws which vex the citizen and interfere with individual liberty.' The next national platform will probably both have temperance planks in them written by 'Old Mr. Face-both-ways.' Soon thereafter one or the other of the great parties will make the liquor question its paramount issue. Then we shall have good square fighting for something worth while all along the line.

"As a matter of fact both parties are afraid to appeal to their consistency on moral issues. This reflects quite as much on the make up of the old parties as on the make up of their platforms. The opinion of the old parties is organized and engineered to get votes. This professional politician is not at home with moral issues. It is only as public opinion on moral issues begins to assert itself and crystallize in action that the encouraging and platform makers begin to sit up and take notice.

"One of the best ways to force moral issues is to elect or refuse to elect candidates for office by standing as that stand for or refuse to stand for moral issues. Party candidates may be better, they may be worse than their party platforms. They may be enough better to gain our suffrage in spite of their party's platform; they may be enough worse to lose it in spite of their party's platform."

YOUTH'S SAD CONDITION.

Daniel Doyle Becomes Dope Fiend After Bungling Operation.

A most deplorable case was called to the attention of the police Saturday afternoon when Police Officer Pierce found in Plum alley a young man named Daniel Doyle, unconscious from an overdose of "dope." Doyle, who is but 21 years of age, is addicted to the use of morphine and cocaine and on Saturday afternoon took an overdose that nearly resulted fatally. He was taken to the emergency hospital and revived.

The young man is minus one leg. He said while beating his way out here from Connecticut he met with a railroad accident, and that it was necessary to amputate one of his legs. The operation was performed by a country doctor, according to Doyle, and the physician made a bungling job of it, resulting in constant pain. Doyle then began to use morphine to allay the pain, and thus contracted the terrible habit. He begged for more of the drug from the dealer and declared he would go insane unless it was furnished him. So intense was his suffering that he was supplied with a small amount.

Here's where the "Know How" of clothes-making counts most

When it comes to making summer suits, even the best of tailors are put to a severe test. The trick is to have all the style features developed and "built up" in such a way that they will be retained, and at the same time not have any extra "weight."

Here's where Benjamin Clothes excel

The Benjamin summer suits are just as light as they can possibly be made and still retain all the splendid style features. No extra lining or padding—nothing that adds useless weight.

THEY SELL AT $18, $20, $22.50, $25, to $35
