But it would be easy, by wise provisions, to render all painful publicity unnecessary. I believe that a legislative enact ment with some such basis would receive the endorsement of a majority of those engaged in the liquo traffic in this city, and that if sub-mitted to the people at large would become a law in every State in the Union. JUSTICE. We agree in the main with the dent. We do not think, however, will not get back with all the skin that anything like so large a proportion of the returns from taxes or licenses on liquor is needed in this Territory-nor even in this City-for the education and maintenance of the children of inebriates. The consumption of intoxicants in this Territory outside of the few cities is very small. Salt Lake no doubt contains a number of person who may be properly classed among the inebriates—unfortunates, who are chronically diseased with the alcoholic appetite to an uncontrollable of our country, adopt the following or reckless degree.
