MORMONS AND GENTILES.

With all due reference to the so-called "Gentiles" of Utah, we trust Congress will not follow their advice, nor pay any attention to the memorials which they intend using to keep the Territory in its present political condition. The animus of the opposition meetings held in Salt Lake City lately is not of the right sort, and the leaders of these meetings are evidently more anxious to gratify private animosity than to secure the public good. The Mormons are not saints by any means, but we must not allow prejudice to get the better of justice; and so far as their action in regard to gaining admission into the Union is concerned, they have certainly shown a disposition to be both honest and honorable. They have prepared a State constitution entirely unexceptionable in its provisions, and propose offering it for the acceptance of Congress, leaving that body to prescribe such conditions as may seem desirable under the circumstances.

Deluded as the Mormons are by a strange superstition which none save themselves can understand, they have yet displayed qualities which entitle them to our respect. By their unaided efforts a garden has grown out of the wilderness, and the seeds of rigorous civilization been planted in a region which but for them might still be the chosen haunt of savage beasts and more savage men. We cannot afford to lose altogether or hopelessly alienate a people who have done so much to develop the resources of the far West, and who, if judiciously managed, will do so much more in the same direction. Their places cannot be supplied readily, if at all, and it is for the interest of the country to keep them where they are; thereby not only retaining the benefit of their services, but subjecting them to those influences which must in the end wipe away the domestic system now incorporated in their religious creed. The Mormons can be more easily managed as citizens of a State than as citizens of a Territory; they will be brought more directly under the operation of federal laws, and through their senators and representatives in Congress can be more readily reached than by the aid of agents who have no sympathy with them, and are actuated not unfrequently by purely selfish motives.

The sooner, then, the Territory of Utah is transformed into the State of Deseret, the better it will be better for all parties; and in dictating the terms of admission, the chief point to be kept in view is the gradual extinguishment of the objectionable feature already alluded to. Polygamy must not, cannot permanently exist under the laws of the United States; but as it is now thoroughly interwoven with the whole social structure of the Mormon people, its immediate abolition — even if practicable — would be productive of ruinous consequence. Let us not do evil that good may come; but endeavor to exercise that broad, generous charity which, in this case at least, is good, sound statesmanship. We can well afford to let the noxious tree stand for a little while, providing the root is cut. In other words, Congress should limit polygamy to a term of years, thus giving the Mormons time and opportunity to arrange their society on a new foundation, and gaining the desired result without unnecessary harshness. But if the programme marked out by the Gentile element is followed, there is certain to be a vast deal of trouble, endless complications, and a judicial persecution which, while driving the Mormons to seek a new home, will perpetuate polygamy as long as there are any disciples of Jos. Smith on the face of the earth.—Missouri Republican.
