on the character of his wife. Some of these letters were anonymous, while others bore Miller's name. He said he had also been threatened with violence and had Miller bound over to keep the him make a motion like drawing a pistol, he drew his weapon and fired several shots.

this city and well known throughout the county, was supposed to have died apparent. His face assumed its nor-he opened and shut several times. He was taken to the hospital, where he was heard and understood. It is thought

The six cases contain coal enough to bury the entire Northwest Territory for the next fifty years.

A Pueblo special to the Denver News says: Wm. Bond met a horrible death Monday morning at the Denver stock company, in the northern part of the company. He was shot by a man named and was called at 8 o'clock to get breakfast for the night herder. Not long after wards the herder found him lying face down in the camp fire burned past

A reporter between Gay Gould a copy of the Atlanta Dispatch, stating the deal between the Western Union and Baltimore & Ohio had been arranged.
Gould read the dispatch and wrote the following across the face of it: "There the Baltimore & Ohio also denied the the directors of the Western Union room, and after a conversation with her they both returned to the family cottage.

Lady Miles said to Lady Colin: "Collin desires me to say he made no charges against you."

Witness expressed his willingness to submit the question of his health to a medical commission, and if the result was not favorable he would take no undue advantage of his position.

That Lady Colin must abandon her correspondence with the Duke of Marlborough.

Under cross-examination Lord Colin said he had never studied the subject attended lectures in the College of Surgeons on gynecology and anatomy.

Dr. Bird in which the writer said he studied for a long time in the College of Surgeons and was a great student about such matters. Witness admitted having written this letter. He refused to swear he had not told Lord Colin that Lady Miles and his wife were in the house.

At that time he heard his counsel say there was not a single charge of any such kind against Lady Colin.
Ellen Brown, Mrs. Duffy, told him in July, 1882, what they had testified, and he believed the statements.

He admitted having remonstrated with his wife against her overtaxing her strength with charitable work. When asked if his wife ever lied to him he said she used deception. He admitted after his wife left him at Eldon House, his brother, Walter, called to see her at Elton Place.

He said that Lady Colin corresponded with him until the final rupture. He only kept one of her letters. The letter was written December 1881. It was summarized, Lady Colin never said she had suffered from something she was sure of. He did not remember having told his wife to take precaution.

He admitted he told her something about her state of health.
When pressed he admitted having said he was pecked and nervous by the fact that his friends were so much concerned about her. He said that these friends were his friends, and he denounced him; that he sent him not in good standing in the orders, but when apprised of the fact that he was "bounced" and that the United Irishmen order has not had an existence for a long time. The letter contained the following: "O'Don-ovan Rosa says, will still work with 'good men' of the Fenian Brotherhood."

Only bad men who ever got into the ranks of the Brotherhood since the days of the Irish revolution, Congress and State, and the Fenian (O'Donovan Rosa's) special friends, are "Red Jim" McDermott, and Phelan of Kansas City. Neither of these members of the organization, but he fraternized with them unknown to the Fenian Brotherhood. He said that he was not allowed in the Brotherhood, he gave, unknown to the council, credentials to the Fenian Brotherhood, and the Fenian Brotherhood was the result of his long imprisonment of J. H. Gilchrist and others, and the driving of men from their comfortable homes into cold and cheerless cells.

The express command of the council he took Phelan to London, and at the Fenian meeting where Phelan could meet the shirking agents within the jurisdiction of England, and the Fenian responsibility alone. O'Donovan Rosa entered into and kept up negotiations with the woman duchess, and the time has been the Fenian Brotherhood of the Fenian Brotherhood. O'Donovan Rosa is not personally responsible.

The address said that Rosa has again and again declined to account for the actions of the Fenian Brotherhood, and the Fenian Brotherhood is the key to the postoffice box to which it has been the custom to address contributions to that Fenian Brotherhood, and declares that he will take whatever comes to him, and he will take what has been secured.
