Harry R. Peterson of Decatur, O., aged 35 years, while working on a threshing machine at Pacific Beach, Cal., Saturday morning, was killed by a derrick beam struck swung around unexpectedly and struck him on the head, crushing his skull. The unfortunate man died in a wagon while waiting for medical aid. He leaves a widow and family.

Mrs. Jennie Noble, aged 57 years, met instant death Sunday afternoon at Redwood, Cal. She was caring for several children during the temporary absence of the parents, and, without a hat in her arms, ascended a flight of six or eight steps leading to the kitchen door. In some unaccountable way she fell backward, striking on the back of her head. Her neck was broken. The infant escaped unhurt.

Miss Nellie Potter, a young lady employed in a shooting gallery at Juneau, Alaska, and shot and fatally wounded R. Fortener of Haines Saturday night. Miss Potter had loaded the gun for one of her customers and was reaching it out to him, pointed toward the crowd of spectators, when for some unaccountable reason the gun was discharged, the 22-caliber ball passing through the abdomen of Fortcher, a young farmer.

A fatal accident occurred about four miles west of Austin, Washington, recently. William Chambers, 18 years old, and his stepfather, John Walker, a prominent stockman of Austin county, were hunting a bob-cat that had been catching chickens, and chased it to the edge of a precipice, when Chambers, in his eagerness to kill the animal, got too near the edge and slipped over, falling a distance of 100 feet, killing him instantly.

A few evening ago, just as the Oregon Railway and Navigation train was pulling out of the Walla Walla station for Spokane, Washington, saysthe Walla Walla Union, a man rushed up to the porter and, placing a baby in his arms, stated, breathlessly: "Take this baby to Spokane. Some one will meet you at the depot there to get it." The astonished porter took the baby, the man disappeared in the crowd. At Spokane a man came forward as the train pulled in and claimed the baby.

H. E. Arnett, the man who is in jail at San Andreas, California, awaiting trial for the murder of his wife in Angel's Camp recently, is as silent and morose as a wild beast in captivity. It is said by one of the prisoners in a cell next to his, that frequently cries of wails during the night, probably the result of nightmare together with the thoughts of his terrible crime, which seems to haunt him during his sleep. His actions would indicate that his line of defense will be insanity.

On Saturday Peter Stoller and wife of Vancouver, B. C., went to Shaw's island in the Columbia to pick blackberries. While so engaged a man named Millham, herding cattle on the island, ordered them off. Stroller says that neither he nor his wife remonstrated with Millham and proceeded to obey his order, but while they were doing so he leveled a double-barrel shotgun at them, discharging both barrels. One of the charges took Peter, striking Mrs. Stroller in the abdomen and shattering her breast. Mrs. Stroller is in delicate health and her condition is dangerous. Millham is yet at large.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Johnson, a quiet, orderly woman living in the outskirts of Stockton, Cal., had a dispute with a neighbor over the action of the latter's cow that had been trespassing on her land. The neighbor, Mrs. Travis, held the cow for ransom, and would not deliver it to the owner without recompense for the damage to her property, which was slight. Angry words followed, and then the incensed Mrs. Travis set upon the owner of the offending cow and beat her into insensibility with a rope, aided by a young man named Councilman, who wielded a club. Mrs. Johnson probably will die.

Sudden death from an electric shock came Saturday to Frank McAfee while he was working at his duties of lineman for the Los Angeles, Cal., electric company. The accident occurred in broad daylight, in full sight of the crowds that hurry along Spring street, and caused great excitement. Shortly after McAfee had climbed an electric light pole the people on the street heard a loud scream. McAfee had come in contact with a live wire, and his body hung limply against the pole supported by the belt which passed around his body and then around the pole. Two men clambered up the pole and brought the unconscious down, but he was past medical aid, and died a few moments later. He was 28 years of age and unmarried.

George Frost, a lineman in the employ of the Edison lights and power company, in San Francisco, was killed Saturday morning by falling from an electric light pole. At the time of the accident he was stunning by the aid of his spurs on the pole below the cross-trees, fixing a wire. One of the spurs broke, and he was thrown to the pavement thirty feet below. In falling Frost struck a guy wire, which rolled him over and precipitated him to the ground head first. His skull was badly crushed, but he was still alive when picked up by the men who were working with him. He was conveyed to the hospital and died ten minutes after arriving there. Frost was an experienced lineman. He leaves a wife and four children.

At Redwood City, Cal., Sunday, M. S. Miguel and another man named Davis, were driving a spirit of team attached to a light spring wagon loaned with fourteen stocks of pistols. Coming down a steep grade Miguel, who was driving, put his hand in his pocket to get some tobacco, scaring the reins with the other. At this juncture the team started to run down the grade. Davis, who was sitting on the rear end of the wagon, jumped off. The horses had run only a short distance when the wagon was thrown over the embankment. When Davis came up he found Miguel under the wagon. He made every effort to release the unfortunate man, but failed, and went for assistance. When he returned Miguel was dead.

Carson, Nevada, Appeal: Recently Everett Kinney of Carson informed a Chinese who had been in jail fifty days for selling whisky to Indians that his time was up. The poor fellow's jaw dropped nearly a foot when this intelligence was communicated. He was having a very nice time in fact, with a cure bed and three positive meals a day. The idea of being thrown out in the street with a hot summer coming on was anything but pleasant. He began to argue with the jailor that there was some mistake about the time and that he had three more days coming. The sheriff wouldn't listen to him and, taking him by the arm, led him out into the street. The poor fellow stood and begged and pleaded for a few more days, but the sheriff was inexorable and told him to get out.

John M. Plunkett, a United States custom inspector, was killed early Saturday morning while on duty on the steamer Rosalie, in San Francisco harbor. Plunkett was standing in the house of the steamer abutting with Captain Kinnear's, the master of the vessel, when there came a sudden crash just under the Rosalie's bows, and the next instant the pilot house was torn from the deck of the vessel. The Rosalie had run into the anchored schooner Sacramento, and the jibboom had poked across the decks of the steamer. The heavy timber was driven with great force through the pilot house and its end crushed the revenue official against the after wall of the house, from which spot the limited man dropped through an aperture to the engine room beneath, crushing his head in the fall.

The great sugar factory and refinery at Chino, Cal., will begin operations this week and people there look forward to the most important season yet known in sugar making during seven summers at Chino. During the past few days the furnace fires have been lighted at the factory, and experts have been examining the machinery preparatory to a long season of work. The superintendent of beets reports that the product of 11,000 acres of beets, amounting to 198,000 tons, is to be converted into sugar. This will make some 40,000,000 pounds of sugar. Last year less than half this quantity was produced. Over 500 men will be employed at the factory this season, and the big machinery will be run day and night from the time of its opening until about November. The sugar-beet growers are all elated with the crop of beets they have grown.
