AFTER THE SNOW AND THE SHROUD.

What if we all lay dead below;
Lay as the grass lies, cold and dead
In God's own holy shroud of snow.

When snow white sinner sat from sad head,
With all earth dead and shrouded white,
As clouds white cross the moon at night.

What if this lidded noon night
Under than one up and see how dead,
How whitely dead and out of sight

All things earth moves come fast and hard
And last words waiting up and down
The spirited fields and emptied barn?

I think that grass old orator
Would call on hands with deafen'd ear,
And say: "I have it, know it well!
I know that death was dear!"
I am, I drank, I touched to God!
Then as the grass was, and the end,"

Ah no, the grasses and the end
They are of preachers. More than preach
When they forget the shroud, and God
Lifts up them bodies of grass to teach
The resurrection! We shall say
What lidded can speak as they!

A LYMPH FOR DIPHTHERIA.

DISCOVERED BY THE GOVERNMENT MEDICAL AUTHORITIES—THEY CAN PRODUCE IMMUNITY, AND THEY HOPE A CURE.

A Washington letter to the Boston Transcript tells of the important work being done by the government medical authorities at Washington. This writer says: Already acting upon the lines of the Koch discovery they believe they have found a cure for diphtheria. Researches in this connection are being carried on by Dr. E. A. Schwenitz of the department of agriculture and Dr. William Gray, bacteriologist of the army medical museum. The diphtheria cure is not a certainty yet, but almost. So far they merely know that they can produce immunity from the disease, just as smallpox may be rendered impossible by vaccination. It is a medical axiom that what is true of a guinea pig, pathologically speaking is true of a man. For this reason the unfortunate guinea pig is the chosen victim of the pathological experimenter. Guinea pigs, inoculated with a gelatine extract of diphtheria germs are proof against the disease. That has been determined absolutely. The question that remains is, can the preventive be utilized as a cure? The probability is, yes. It is not settled yet, though pretty nearly. The latest experiments upon two guinea pigs showed that both, having been treated with the "extract" subsequently to inoculation with the disease in sufficient quantity to kill them ordinarily, recovered. It looks as though diphtheria germs multiplied to fatal grip upon the human race; but it is unsafe to jump at a conclusion. Nevertheless, undeniably it seems as if a new outwork against the most setthee complaints which afflict mankind has been discovered. Can the essential poisons of typhoid fever, carbuncle, pneumonia and other diseases commonly fatal, be successfully utilized by inoculation for combatting those troubles? It would seem as if not to say that question, but there is a great hope and well nigh expectation of its so turning out. If it shall so eventuate, a new era in the history of civilized man will have been begun.

The question is often asked, How does the lymph operate? By what means does it accomplish its end? The answer is very simple. Consumption begins with the breathing into the lungs of a germ afloat in the air. Such germs are constantly afloat everywhere. When a consumptive coughs and spits in a street car or elsewhere he is exercising such means as are at his command for circulating the disease. The sputum thus coughed up dries and is conveyed in the shape of dust to the lungs of the well person. If the person has healthy lungs-since the bacilli do not find lodgment; if, on the other hand, he has a tendency to consumption, hereditary or otherwise, they may secure a resting place. Having accomplished thus much, they rapidly propagate, feed on the tissue of the lungs, and break it down, thus forming a lump of dead, cheesy matter, which is called a "tubercle." The blood, circulating through the lungs, carries the bacilli elsewhere through their substance, and they form other tubercles, thus clogging up the air cells. Such is consumption. But the lymph has the effect of causing the tubercles to slough off from the healthy tissue of the lungs, leaving the organs in condition to work properly. In this manner Dr. Koch's remedy acts.

Because the bacillus spoken of acts by feeding upon the tissues so as to form lumps of dead matter called "tubercles," the disease occasioned by it is called "tuberculosis." It may attack the lungs, in which shape it is called "consumption," or it may assail the glands the joints and the skin. One fact of most acute interest is that this lymph of Dr. Koch's operates as effectively in cases of leprosy as in consumption. Why, nobody knows. It suffices that it is so. What rays of hope this discovery may shed upon a complaint hitherto deemed hopeless must be determined in the future.

The world entertains little recognition at present of what it owes to the bacteriologist. The science is a new one, though the results it has achieved already are so great. It has brought human knowledge closer to nature than studious eyebrave ever before reached. He teaching has unraveled many of the mysterious hitherto deemed too profound for human research. It has instructed mankind in causes, where phenomena only had been cleared before. Through its agency the sources of fatal disease have been discovered and their cure aimed at upon grounds of certainty. To its researches are to be referred all methods of aseptic and antiseptic treatment, by which, among other things, the numerous cases involving the cutting open of the abdomen of the patient are successful now always in nine cases out of ten, instead of occasioning death in nine cases out of ten, as formerly. Through this branch of study the most remarkable medical discoveries of the future are destined to be brought about. The medical art in fact, may be said to be about to take a tremendous leap into the space of positive understanding.

In conclusion, it is worth saying what these bacilli are. They are bacteria of a rod-shape, to which the name "bacillus" has been given. What are bacteria, then? Simply vegetable organisms. All vegetables may be roughly divided into three classes. First comes the plants, as we know them. Next are the fungi, many of them preying upon the plants, which are more numerous than the plants in kinds. Third are the bacteria, which are lowest in the vegetable scale. They occasion all those diseases which have been spoken of, and many more. It is they which cause all decomposition of matter, animal and vegetable. Throw a scrap of meat into the street in the summer time. They fall upon it, consume portions of it, and in this way cause it to decompose, liberating thereby gases which are offensive to the nostrils. But in this way they assist this useless matter to return to its primary elements, in order that it may be recombined by nature for useful purposes. Some bacteria are harmful, but most are beneficial, and without them none of us could live. It is their province to destroy whatever is useless or noxious. Bacteria are everywhere. Myriads of them are clustered in our mouths and in our throats; they are breathed in at every breath by thousands. The accident which the hatchetnight tries to relieve is simply the exclusion of these specimens which are disadvantageous. Of course, he has seen many cases of recent birth. When it has attained development the awful enemy, death, will find his victims strongly fortified against his most customary approaches.—Springfield Republican.

A Fortunate Accident.

When the Army of the Potomac occupied the lines of investment on the Chickahominy, Sykes's regular division was stationed on the left of the point of Ellison's mills. There was little to do except picket duty. Time went heavily on our hands with only the occasional excitement of an occasional shell to break the monotony. After a little time, however, these visitors became more frequent, and men were killed while in their tents.

Our neighbors, the Fifth New York and First Connecticut, suffered in this way, and a battery was established on our front. This promised a little excitement. Some of the boys of the Fifth Infantry, being off duty, they would enjoy the sight of the opening of our battery on the enemy, so three of us sallied out for the fun. We took our position on a little knoll beside the road. Scarcely had [we established ourselves when an aged colored man passing along the road told us that we were in a very dangerous position; that the enemy had the range of the road and fired at every passing wagon.

By this time many others had congregated at the same spot, and now enough along came in wagon with the news never rust them as we noticed that an artilleryman going toward the new battery in our front stopped very quickly, looked around, and then moved on as if he were all recognized as inflicting the rules of a shell passing close to him.

The wagon was in front of us at this moment, and we all stooped low, for we heard the ominous scream, and as the wagon passed on the shell struck the bed box. Those behind, while stooping, crossed the men standing in front on the edge of the road. The result was that of us were thrown on top of the shell as it struck into the soft, sandy road. The shell did not explode, much [to our, or likely I should not have written these few lines, for I was in front and the others fell on top of me. We all were badly shaken up, and made fun for our camps. Perhaps some of the comrades may meet this description of the incident and testify.—Pennsylvania Grit.

Curious Professions.

Among curious Parisian professions are artificial ear and nose makers, glass-eye-makers, leg-stretchers, calcimixers, knockers-up and fourteenth men. The latter class are much in demand in Paris, since the superstitiousness of having thirteen guests to dinner, on which point the Parisians are very superstitious, the fourteenth man is always ready to attend at a moment's notice.

"Rattlesnake for One."

The widow of General Custer says that he was the first of American army officers to experiment on the rattlesnake as an edible. His cook prepared the dinner under protest, and as the general was eating the dainty he saw the alarmed negro cautiously peering in through a crack in the tent, doubtless expecting to see his master drop down in a fit.

Christianity evidently shows progress when Buddhist priests and leaders are forced to resort to the pen to withstand its pressure upon their stronghold. On both sides the contention is sharp, vigorous and determined.—Presbyterian Observer.

He was of a decidedly sentimental temperament; she was more matter-of-fact. Suddenly he clasped his hands and cried out, rapturously: "Oh, Mamie, look at the moon, beautiful! Isn't it beautiful—beautiful!" "Isn't it, Henry!" she replied with equal enthusiasm. "It looks just like a big fried egg—don't it, dear?"—Harper's Bazar.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed.

Stuffed-Up Feeling.

"I will say I have been troubled for several years with that terrible disagreeable disease, catarrh. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and was very much pleased. It opened my head, relieved dropping in my throat, and stuffed up feeling. It has also helped my mother, who has been troubled much with kidney trouble." Miss T. P. HALSE, Putnam, Conn.

A Warning

To Horse-Owners.

The Split Nail in this Shoe seriously injured the horse from which it was removed by Edson in Worcester, Mass. One point of the nail comes out in the proper place for clinching, and so directed the blacksmith who shod the horse. The other point went in the direction shown in the illustration, piercing the tender part of the foot called the "quick," from which the horse was made lame for one nearly two weeks.

This is not an unusual case. The same thing is happening every day. Don't use Split Nails. Insist on having the Putnam Nail, which is the only Nail that is not liable to cause lameness.

DANGEROUS

The Putnam Nail

CANNOT SPLIT, SLIVER OR BREAK.

It is the only Hot Forged and Hammer-Pointed Horse Nail made. Every other nail made by machinery is pressed in the same manner as the old-fashioned hand-made nail.

The United States Government protects the process of their manufacture through patents, and other firms are liable to prosecution a Horseshoe Nail as here described, are guilty of infringement and pirating the patent.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court in and for the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake.

William Westley, Plaintiff, vs.
Mary Ann Westley, Defendant.

The People of the Territory of Utah send Greeting to Mary Ann Westley, Defendant:

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have a decree of this court dissolving the bonds of matrimony between the plaintiff and defendant, granting plaintiff physical care, power and the guardianship of the minor children of the parties, and defendant's custody and without cause deserted and abandoned the plaintiff, and has ever since so without and without cause deserted and abandoned said plaintiff, and has ever since lived separate from him, without any sufficient cause or provocation on the part of the plaintiff so to do.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness, the Hon. Charles S. Zane, Judge, and the seal of the District Court of the Third Judicial District, in and for the Territory of Utah, this 9th day of January in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW.

SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled more or less with disease of the kidneys and bladder for many years. Different remedies and doctors have sought me relief, but I found no permanent cure until the 15th of August I saw Kidney-Wort advertised in a newspaper. I procured one bottle and took it according to directions. Before I had taken one bottle I was almost impossible for me to get up or get on my clothes. Before I had taken two bottles I was entirely relieved from pain, and have had no return of the disease since. I have recommended Kidney-Wort to many of my friends, and shall always do so, for I feel that it saved my life. I have taken in all about three bottles, and feel like a new man. I am 65 years old, and have been a farmer all my life. I have also been troubled with piles, and Kidney-Wort relieved me of them. I have taken it for that, and found it to be a sure cure. I have also used it for my wife, and it has done her a great deal of good. I feel that I owe my life to Kidney-Wort, and cheerfully recommend it to all.
