World's Congress & World's Fair

A Bright Woman's Observations at the Great White City.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Chicago is the center of attraction for all the world at the present time, and will be from now until the great Columbian Exposition opens, November 1st. The city has become the capital of the nation, the arteries of vanished civilization, the temples of the Egyptian Pharaohs, and the paraphernalia of the King of Kings, every language and every great fair is educational in the interchange of views and opinions, and friendships will that greater harmony of thought and feeling must inevitably be the result of this friendly and sympathetic interconnection of ideas and sentiments.

It appears a happy omen that the Congress of Representative Women should herald in this brilliant series of congresses that are to continue during the entire six months from the date of commencement, in which every great subject that concerns mankind and the world at large is to be ventilated and discussed under general headings.

Without further causally mentioning this fact, one cannot but pay tribute to the intelligence and wisdom of the women who have gathered here and so far have immense gathering, when some of the greatest speakers and thinkers of the age, from both continents, have assembled to disseminate knowledge and light for the benefit of all and especially the poor and ignorant, the weak and infirm, the good and, thus, shown themselves among the people. Perhaps never in the history of the world has there been so much done in the way of public teaching for the good of the human race. The Congress considers that all this material is to be collected and carefully arranged and stored in historic volumes, so that those who have not had the opportunity to witness these meetings may yet have the record of this most glorious history of progress, this last makes it more and more a memorable epoch in the growth and development of the world.

But one must not lose himself in the associations of the past, nor let them there be so much that is life and action, in actual workmanship. The buildings and mathematical features of the "White City" as they are played a gigantic proportion and are the chief attraction.

and make a lasting testimony to the architectural skill and magnificence of the age, are beyond description in the language which we understand. Beauty is apparent on every hand, and especially to the taste and judgment of the cultured woman. Day after day crowds of people, turning the streets and thoroughfares, gather round one scene of artistic grandeur and loveliness to another, and are won over by the beauty of the world.

One can easily imagine being in Turkey, in Japan, in China, Ceylon or India, in Russia, Austria, Hungary, Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, France, Holland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, in fact in any of the foreign countries, even to Australia and New South Wales, for that we have heard and read of the people of the land, their customs and habits, the products of the soil, the religious temperament, and the moral sense. In fact if there is anything of consequence in land or sea that is not represented in some way or other it is likely to be found at the Exposition, or, in itself, in itself.

"White and dazzling
In the moon's fair light she stands."

Nothing remarkable about that. The world is to look upon, as a matter of course, and the dazzling effect, was produced by her white robes—clad and brightened by a liberal use of
