

the upper part of room 28 and shortly after 10 o'clock they drew in keeping step to a march played on the piano.

President McGhie presided and after a few words of welcome announced Vive la U. of U. to be sung by the class. The songs, it may be said, were all arranged by the students for the occasion. After this came the class history by Class Historian Miss Nettie McKay. Miss McKay with gentle sarcasm scored both graduates and faculty. Then came another class song and an oration by Mr. D. O. McKay. The essence of the oration was that an unsatisfied appetite for knowledge means progress and is the state of a normal mind.

The class poet, Mr. Howard Drizge, after an introductory poem, recited "The Dude Pedagogue" and another original piece in more stately style. Another class song followed this, and one stanza was devoted to each professor.

Class Prognosticator Miss Helkes then made a prophecy for the class. In looking twenty-five years ahead she saw her classmates in various positions in life. If Miss Helkes had true discernment the young woman of 1922 will hold a more responsible place than she does now.

The class then sang the closing song, Alma Mater O.

Anton Caviglia, an employe of the Mercur company aged 45 years, met almost sudden death in the company's mine June 3rd by falling very suddenly against the edge of an ore car.

The unfortunate man was working on the 300 level and in picking down ore, he stepped back to avoid the dirt falling on him, when in some way he missed his footing and fell into an ore car below, striking his left side against a corner of the car. The blow must have been a terrific one as the man was rendered unconscious, and on being removed from the mine to the hospital, breathed his last. Caviglia had been ailing for some time past and this probably had something to do with his sudden demise.

Some of the Mercur directors were out at the mine when the accident happened and they looked after the injured man until his spirit had taken its flight. An inquest was held shortly afterwards and a verdict of accidental death rendered, the company being exonerated from all blame.

Caviglia, was a married man, being the husband of a woman whose former husband's death resulted in a similar manner. They have several children and the dead man was held in high esteem by his employers, with whom he has been for over five years.

The following is the monthly meteorological summary issued from the weather bureau station at Salt Lake City, Utah, for the month of May, 1897:

Mean atmospheric pressure, 29.94; highest pressure, 30.31 on the 9th; lowest pressure, 29.52 on the 31st.

Mean temperature, 64; highest temperature, 88 on the 29th; lowest temperature, 35 on the 8th; greatest daily range of temperature, 30, on the 29th; least daily range of temperature, 8, on the 10th.

Mean temperature for this month for 24 years, 58; average excess of daily mean temperature during month, 4.5; accumulated deficiency of daily mean temperature since January 1, 2.09; average daily deficiency since January 1, 1.4; prevailing direction of wind, southeast; total movement of wind, 5,020 miles; maximum velocity of wind, direction and date, 39, northwest on the 7th.

Total precipitation, 0.98 inches; number of days with .01 inch or more of precipitation, 6; average precipitation for this month for 24 years, 1.77 inches; total deficiency in precipitation during month, .74 inches; accumulated excess in precipitation since January 1, 1.47 inches; number of clear days, 7; partly cloudy days, 11; cloudy days, 13; frost on the 8th.

J. H. SMITH,
Observer Weather Bureau.

The following data, covering a period of twenty-three years, have been compiled from the Weather Bureau records at Salt Lake City, Utah, for the month of June, for twenty-three years:

Temperature—Mean or normal temperature 67 deg. The warmest month was that of 1881, with an average of 71 deg. The coldest month was that of 1891, with an average 62 deg. The highest temperature was 100, on June 29, 1883. The lowest temperature was 37 deg. on June 1, 1875. Average date on which first "killing" frost occurred 1 autumn Oct. 12. Average date on which last "killing" frost occurred in spring, April 5.

Precipitation (rain and melted snow)—Average for month, 0.79 inches. Average number of days with .01 of an inch or more, 4. The greatest monthly precipitation was 1.67 inches in 1885. The least monthly precipitation was 0.01 inches in 1870 and 1879. The greatest amount of precipitation recorded in any 24 consecutive hours was 2.00 inches on June 5, 1885. No snow on record.

Clouds and weather—Average number of clear days, 17; partly cloudy days, 10; cloudy days, 2.

Wind—The prevailing winds have been from the northwest. The highest velocity of the wind was 42 miles, from the west, on June 15, 1889.

J. H. SMITH,
Weather Bureau.

A reunion of the family of President Heber C. Kimball is to take place in this city on the 14th of the present month, the ninety-sixth anniversary of his birth. It will be just ten years since they assembled at Fuller's Hill Gardens for a similar purpose—to honor the memory of their illustrious head. All who were present on that occasion will remember the happy and auspicious gathering, the outcome of which was the publication of the "Life of Heber C. Kimball," as written and compiled by his grandson, O. F. Whitney, who was engaged by the family to execute the literary portion of the labor. The proceeds from the sale of this work went to improve and beautify the cemetery where rest the remains of President Kimball and many of his kindred. It is at this cemetery, which is situated in the Eighteenth ward, near the old Kimball homestead, but is no longer used for purposes of interment, that the surviving members of the family will meet in their second reunion, next Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Appropriate services will be held, and in the afternoon the Kimballs and their friends will go to Saltair. One purpose of this gathering is to unite the family on Temple work for their ancestry. Much of this work has been done already, but an important portion of it has been set for performance on Friday the 18th of June. The members of the Kimball and Whitney families, wherever they reside, are requested to take the publication of this item as an invitation to the reunion and to all the festivities and sacred exercises and labors connected therewith.

John Buckle, senior member of the well known mercantile tailoring firm of Buckle & Sons, was quickly and unexpectedly overtaken by death at his home in the Tenth ward on June 4th. He had gone out to the barn from his residence a few minutes before the end came to hitch up a horse to drive up town. A short time afterwards a little grandchild of Mr. Buckle wandered out to the barn and found the old gentleman lying motionless upon the floor. The little chap ran back to the house informing his grand-ma and aunts that "grandpa was lying down in the barn." They hastened to the barn and there found the old gentleman as indicated by the child. Investigation proved that he was unconscious and Doctors Taylor and Critchlow, both of whom reside in the vicinity, were summoned. They made a diagnosis and suggested apoplexy as the probable cause of death. A slight bruise was found upon the left temple, but the doctors agreed that it was the result of the fall after the death grasp had taken hold of the deceased.

Mr. Buckle had been feeling indisposed for the past three or four days though there was nothing in his condition to suggest the fatality that came so suddenly. He came up town each day, rested well at nights and ate good breakfast this morning.

Mr. Buckle had been in business in Salt Lake for twenty-three years. He came here from Australia, where he resided for fourteen years. Prior to that time he had been a resident of England his native country. He leaves a wife, three sons, four daughters and thirty grandchildren. One of his sons is Councilman Buckle of the First municipal ward. He was in the 70th year of his age, a sterling citizen and splendid tradesman. The funeral will occur from the residence of John T. Buckle, 350 Seventh E. street, on Sunday next at 3 p. m.

A singular coincidence in connection with Mr. Buckle's death is the fact that one night fifteen years ago a deaf and dumb tailor whom he had in his employ was seized with the idea that he had dropped dead and early in the morning just before the Tribune had gone to press communicated the news to that paper, which owing to the lateness of the hour was unable to properly verify the item it published, and which was to the effect that Mr. Buckle had suddenly passed away as stated. For weeks afterward Mr. Buckle's sons were recipients of sympathy and condolence from their friends.

DENVER, June 8.—The special