EDITORIAL NOTES.

Peru Hyscine predicts a great internal convulsion in Europe next year, beginning probably in France. He foresees a gigantic war and revolution, and speaks with unqualified assurance.

Competent authorities estimate that the net foreign immigration to the United States for the four years ending June 30, 1884, will be in the neighborhood of 2,500,000—enough to constitute a small nation.

On the 6th of November Governor will be elected in Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota and New Jersey. Elections will also occur on the same day in Connecticut, Mississippi, Nebraska, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Mr. Ford, in his recent work on forms of government in America, remarks that "the chief functions of a city government are merely executive and ministerial, and in which politics have little or no place." He adds that the matters to which a municipality must give attention are those of business rather than of statecraft.

The Chicago News says: For merely trying to knock out his aged mother's brains, a young man at Shelbyville, Ind., was run down by the mighty engine of the law and made to pay $17. That is right. Strict and even harsh measures are explicable in such cases, and if the young citizen had succeeded in his murderous purpose, we should have felt him standing by the court if he had made the fine $19. As it is we feel him standing by the judge—with a good big club.

Abraham Kreiser's two daughters have dwelt in a small log hut in the mountains near Indian town, Penn., for thirty-eight years past, aloof from all other human beings. The two hermits are about sixty years of age. In speaking to each other—for they never speak to others—they sing their words with long-drawn draws. They are hard workers, and can swing the axe and fell large trees. They have no fear of anything from tramp or bear. They sleep by their axes by the bedside. It is said that both were disappointed in love about forty years ago.

It is not generally known that Russia once had a parliament. One was convened in 1849 by Ivan the Terrible, and continued its sessions a year. A subsequent parliament framed a constitution. These national assemblies continued to meet for more than two centuries, and their deliberations evinced great wisdom, and conferred on Russia innumerable benefits. The last one was called together by Catherine II, in 1783, and was composed of 652 delegates, representing all classes. Never since the Romanoffs have been in power has a parliament been allowed to be called together.

If you shake up a basket of fruit or of gravel the smaller portions will go toward the bottom, the larger ones toward the top. This is the order of nature. There is no way of evading it. And the same order prevails in the basket of human life. The world's shaking will send the smaller characters downward, and bring the larger ones to the top. The larger ones are not to blame for this. The smaller ones have no right to complain of it. It is the shaking that does the business. If the "Mormons" come to the top every time there is a shaking it is according to the natural order of things.

UNPROFITABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

PERHAPS no city of its population is more liberally provided with amusements than Salt Lake. Besides the strictly local supply, there is a constant contributory source in the various and numerous companies who stop here on their passage east and west across the continent.

There is no getting away from the fact that amusements have much to do with influencing public taste and character. High toned entertainments will tone up the popular sentiment and tendency, while those of an essentially groveling nature have a more or less degrading effect. Believing the exhibitions given by professional pugilists to be of the latter order, and having very clear and distinct opinions on the subject, we hope that no such entertainments as that provided by Mr. Ryan will be witnessed in this city any more. While we do not wish to show any disrespect to that gentleman, we view professional pugilism as devoid of any redeeming feature, and exhibitions of its nature are necessarily tinged with the same nature.

We appreciate the difficulty under which caterers to the public demand for amusement labor, in the existing condition of popular inclination, which is more or less vitiated, frequently causing the lowest forms of amusement to be the most liberally patronized. We hope to see the time, however, when in providing for the satisfaction of the human instinct which craves for change and relaxation in the shape of amusement, the element of moral effect kept more strongly in view than at present. That class of entertainment, according to our view, that tends to cultivate the higher capacities of the people or that is embellished with an instructive moral is alone legitimate. Let us have no more exhibitions of the most adroit and scientific methods of battering the human face and form divine. While they may be financially profitable, they are morally degrading.

A FEARFUL SUPERSTITION.

A few days ago we published a paragraph from the Chicago Tribune in which was comprised one of the latest statements of alleged "Mormon" superstition. It was in substance that when a lady member of the church dies a black face-cloth is placed over the face of the dead. Unless this is removed at the resurrection by a man who was the husband of the deceased in life, she must remain for ever in outer darkness, and cannot enter the celestial kingdom. This is said to be implicitly believed by "Mormon" women and serves to keep them within the circle of the plural marriage system.

We have seen the paragraph in several papers since its appearance in our Chicago contemporary and so it goes on its regular round. We are always pleased to vindicate the veracity of the newspapers and the clergy, both of whom indulge in many statements on "Mormonism" and the "Mormons," but we regret that they give us so few opportunities of deriving enjoyment from that source when they touch on that subject. However painful it may be to our feelings to even intimate that so distinguished a paper would be guilty of being actuated by prejudice or self-interest that would lead it from the path of strict truthfulness, we are constrained to point out a few inaccuracies in this statement. Without wishing to be unnecessarily offensive we must say that no "Mormon" woman expects after death to have a face-cloth removed from her eyes by her husband or anybody else. We will add also that no "Mormon" husband anticipates having to perform this office for his dead wife or anybody else. Perhaps we have said enough in relation to what is not expected to be done, but we will doubtless be pardoned for stating, on positive knowledge, as a further addition, and to render the explanation a little more complete, that no face-cloth is laid over the faces of the ladies of the Church. If the talented and ingenious Chicago editor would kindly, in the interests of truth and for the benefit of his copying contemporaries and their readers, make these few corrections, he may safely herald the balance of the article to a benighted world as a formidable array of damaging facts, on account of the existence of which an army should at once be dispatched to Utah to obliterate from the face of the earth a people so darkened in intellect to entertain such fearful superstitions.

In case we might be supposed to be in error, those who wish to prove the truth or falsity of our position can do so by a simple process. Let such attend a funeral of one of our sisters, view the face of the dead in the casket, a privilege afforded as a rule to all, witness the fastening down of the lid, and observe the body lowered into the tomb, minus anything in the shape of a face-cloth. But it occurs to us as absurd to expect people to go to so much trouble to ascertain a truth, when a false one is much more congenial with their natures. The fact is that nothing is too improbable to be told or believed about the "Mormons."

SPEED AND EFFICIENCY.

AN incident related to us yesterday illustrated the dispatch and rapidity of action attained by our city fire department by the recent improvements made in connection with it. When the alarm was sounded for the blaze at the Whitcomb Hotel, near the U. C. depot, a gentleman, who was stopping at the Gretna House, adjacent to Freeman's Hall, stepped out of that establishment immediately after the first tap of the bell. Notwithstanding the fact that he made no delay in his exit, when he reached the sidewalk the four stationary men with horse and hose, cast were spinning westward half way between the City Hall and East Temple Street, having harnessed, dashed out of the engine room and gained that distance in a space of time that made the rapidity of movement appear almost magical. It is estimated that they reached the scene of the fire inside of two and a half minutes from the time of starting from the hall, but that appears almost incredible. We have heard a good many remarks complimentary to the Brigade for their expert, intelligent and capable conduct at the fire. If there is any fault to be found with the generality of "the boys" it is principally an account of a trifle too much disregard for their own personal safety. While it is praiseworthy to put forth every possible effort to save property from destruction by the devouring element, it should not be done at a too rash risk of human life and limb.

In looking at the remains of the skating rink, which covered a large square of ground and was totally consumed, it seems a matter of astonishment that contiguous buildings were saved, especially the house of Col. Beale, which is within a few feet of the spot where the burned building stood. It shows that the efforts of the firemen were intelligently directed. When it is apparent that a burning building is inevitably doomed to destruction in defiance of any endeavors to save it, all the energies of the firemen should be turned to the work of defending adjacent structures from contact with the flames. This was effectually done at the skating pavilion fire of yesterday morning.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

The regular Sabbath services of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, were held in the Assembly Hall on Sunday afternoon, October 23, 1883, commencing at 2 p.m.

The choir sang the hymn: "To Him who reigns on high, etc." Prayer by Elder Joseph Horne. The choir sang the hymn commencing: "Truth reflects upon our eyes." The Bishopric of the Fifteenth Ward assisted in dispensing the Sacrament.

APOTHE HEBER J. GRANT ADDRESSED THE CONGREGATION (The Latter-day Saints) were locked upon by the world as the victims of delusion, and yet those who considered them as such could not deny anything in the doctrines they taught to justify that view. They did not teach any doctrine which, if obeyed, would make men and women better. Such being the case the question arose, what manner of people ought the Saints to be. They were expected to be exemplary, practicing what they preached, that they might have influence with their children and win the respect and love of all good people. If the Saints desired their children to be God-fearing, honest and upright they must fear God and be honest and upright themselves. If they did not they could not blame their children for considering them as hypocritical and disobeying their instructions accordingly. Ingratitude was a charge frequently made against them, and it was true, but it was not to be feared to God, and to evince it by keeping His commandments. They should exercise charity and not condemn poor fellows for their fellow creatures for manifesting human weakness. They should be careful how they sat in judgment on others, for they knew not, especially if they had not experienced similar trials and temptations which beset them. Nevertheless, this consideration did not excuse wrong doing, and while self-righteousness was to be feared and guarded against, (and he himself did not wish to give way to it) still he could not excuse himself, if placed in false circumstances, if he acted as he knew some men did, for he would then have to say Amen to the condemnation pronounced upon him. Parents should not be afraid to teach their children, to teach their children the truth and warn them against evil, and this, too, early in life, not waiting until they were grown up, for error had all been sown before the work of planting righteousness was commenced. Those who profess of the Latter-day Saints are to remember Him and keep His commandments, and if they did not remain true to that covenant, they were bearing false witness against themselves. Apostasy was a fate to be dreaded. It was always preceded by wrong doing of some kind. The speaker never knew of anyone who apostatized who was pure, upright, faithful and diligent. The first step to apostasy was to neglect, knowingly, some duty to God. The apostate contracted himself by asserting things, contrary to what he testified of beforehand. The only way to decide at what time such a person spoke truly was to let his daily life be the criterion. The speaker knew men who once could feel the sick and speak by the power of God, but they were born testimony to the truth of "Mormonism," now they were impure, "darkened in mind, and immoral, and they contradicted their former testimony. This was sufficient to condemn them when they spoke the truth. The speaker was about to start upon a mission of two months or more, which would take him among the Lamanites, a people whom he loved with an affection he could not himself understand. He testified that God would yet make of them a white and delightsome people. Counselor D. H. Wells: The principles of the Gospel were calculated to benefit, save and exalt those who practiced them. Many were in mind, and immoral, and they contradicted their former testimony. This was sufficient to condemn them when they spoke the truth.
