It is to be hoped not, for so long as it is it will be difficult if not impossible to insure safety to buildings from devouring flames.

In this discussion, one thing is very manifest, the mansard roof is catching it in every direction, inside and outside and on all sides. It has become some and on all sides. It has become some-ciation of that kind of roof or its essential modification in a fire-proof direction is distinctly foreshadowed. But the fire-proof modification should be thorough, and not external merely, for here is an eastern contemporary stating the case of the mansard with fire-proof external shell, which is considered almost if not quite as strongly as if the shell were not there. The paragraph occurs in comments upon the citizens.

condemning the action of the government in prosecuting the Hyde Park speakers.

Eighty mambers of the London police have been discharged for insuberdination. The trouble gree out of the descensions as to the bast ways of insuring perpetual safety from the devouring element ought to be welcome. We have the advantages of wide streets, a comparatively good supply of water, and buildings in most instances widely detached, although in the business portions of the city they adjoin each other. But we have the disadvantage of the very extensive employment of iumber, and sometimes it is almost the only material used. Such extensive use of so combustible a material, where the buildings are so diosalty placed, ought certainly to be discouraged by the public and the municipality, that is, if it were any use making sensible municipal ordinances were judicially respected in our city, instead of being opposed on every filmsy technicality.

Washington, D. C., 18—The Supreme Court to-day decided the celebrated Cherokee land case in favor of Joy, the purchaser of the lands from the tribes holding them. As the United States had not enforced the forfeiture against the Indians for taking part in the rebellion, that title could not be the tribes holding them. As the United States had not enforced the forfeited States had not enforced the forfeiter against the Indians for taking part in the rebellion, that title could not be impaired by its entry and occupation by settlers, whose title was declared void. The court also decided that "brigadiers" are not entitled to increased commutation of rations given to an of fier below the rank of brigadier general, by the act of 1865, thus sustaining the action of the pay master in the case of General Hunt, and reversing the decision of the court of claims.

New ORLEANS, 18.— There were three fires in the city to-day, one in Custom-house street, and one in Polders street, which destroyed the U. S. barracks.

Versailles, 18.—In the Assembly to-day there was an exciting debate over the motion of Deputy Changar-nier, censuring Gambetta for his inflementary speeches in the provinces. On making the motion Changarnier course of the elevator until it communicated with the Mansard roof. Here was a mass of wood-work day as a mass of wood-work day as a minimum of the laxity of the government in dealing with them. comparable of the increasing andsetty of sax a mass of wood-work, dry as a circle, externally covered with metal or clate, and so impervious to water, rendering fire engines useless. The situation is comparable only to a "fortification" so constructed as to protect the bassaling force and to render the assalided utterly powerless to return an attack.

In this case the externally fire-proof maneard is considered worse than if wholly inflammable. What then is to be done The external fire-proof shell is certainly useful in a degree in preserving a building from catching fire from adjacent buildings. If the mass and is to be used, the xemedy must consist in rendering it fire-resisting inside as well as out, so far as is reasonably practicable. The discussions and the action of other communities in regard to this highly important matter of safety from that dreadfully bad master, unquenchable fire, are of as great interest to our citizens as to the citizens of any other portions of the country. We live in a district as arid as any in the Union during a portion of the year, many of our buildings are constructed in very large part of and on all sides. It has become somewhat popular of late years. It has a striking architectural effect, perhaps from its semi-gothic character. But being universally if not necessarily constructed of wood, it is so peculiarly inflammable that it is generally termed a literal fire box, the chief seat of danger from confiagration and the grand nursery of devastating fires.

Municipalities and insurance companies are moving in strong opposition to the mansard, and either the renunciation of that kind of roof or its estimated and static fire on the State at set of the murder, and visited the wife of the deed. The corner's inquest is still going on.
