

YOUNG GIRLS ARE TOO EXTRAVAGANT

They Think Too Much About Clothes and do not Have Enough to Do.

SO SAYS MRS. HETTY GREEN.

She Speaks From Experience, Declaring That She Was Quite a Belle When Young.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—A special from New York to the Record-Herald says: "Young girls of today are too extravagant. They think too much about clothes and they don't have enough to do. If they had some useful work to occupy their thoughts they would not run to such extravagance."

So spoke Mrs. Hetty Green, the world's greatest woman financier, when asked her opinion on some topics of current interest. From her corner in the "Chemical National Bank," she watched the tide of girls, young and old, in summer finery, turning toward Brooklyn bridge and Coney Island.

"I speak from experience," she added. "Perhaps you don't know it, but I was quite a belle when I was young. But I outgrew all that sort of thing. These rainbow silks and metal fingers are not to my taste. I used to wear those things. I used to have more fixings and trimmings on me than there are on a Christmas tree. I have more sense now."

NOT A SOCIETY WOMAN.

"No, I don't like society, and I seldom go out. Last season I went to one reception given in my honor, but I was hardly to you is that my daughter, Sylvia, is going away to one of those rival places, and I am busy for a week yet getting her ready."

"Society hasn't enough to do to keep it out of mischief. Those so-called fashionable women spend all their time these days at bridge and smoking cigarettes and drinking pale tea and strong whisky. Every one of them ought to be working."

"Her note changed to an odd combination of indignation and humor."

"The airs some of these people put on amuse me. Before they got their money some of them made pants for their children out of their husbands' old trousers, and now they drive about in their own carriages and hold their noses up in the air as if the dust was not good enough for them. They do not know how to use their money yet. They are not accustomed to it. We had money in our family for generations. Oh, a girl can't teach me anything about that."

She laughed, and her laughter is decidedly characteristic. It starts as a quick little cackle, and then it becomes a little cynical, a little humorous and altogether unique.

A BORN FIGHTER.

Mrs. Green is ready to fight for her rights, and she told of a time when a Massachusetts insurance company tried to beat her out of $2,000. She wouldn't be beaten. She hired lawyers to defend her rights. Her friends told her it would cost her a good deal more than the $2,000 before she got through with it, but that made no difference.

"I do not care what it costs," she said to them. "I am not going to let any of these fellows beat me out of what belongs to me."

Nor did she.

"Well, when it came to trial," she said, "the courtroom was crowded. There were a lot of poor people who had been cheated out of money by that company and they were all backing me and they were all there in court. The lawyer for the company got up and said lots of things and every one of them was a lie. Then I bent away over like this," and she went through the whole performance.

"I got my head down, below the top of the bench in front of me as if I were picking up something from the floor, and I called out so everyone in the courtroom could hear: 'Perjury! You are a perjury!'"

She laughed fresh at the memory of it.

"The courtroom was nearly in a panic. The judge ran to the order and the sheriff and bailiff came running up and down the aisles, looking for the person who made the noise, and all the people got up and were looking here and there everywhere. Then I looked around just like this and said to the persons who were sitting back of me: 'Who made that noise?'"

"I was in the right, so of course, I won. The poor people looked around me to thank me, for my victory was a victory for them."

"I stood on the stairs and made a little speech to them. I told them that if the company ever tried to rob a poor woman again just to let me know and I would come, no matter where I was, and fight for them."

"I don't fight without cause. I could tell some tales if I wanted to about these big secondaries and how they rob and steal, but that is not my order. I shall not interfere. I only fight when they try to rob me. Why, it is a sin to allow anyone to rob you. That is why I fight."

HER ONE WEAK SPOT.

Hetty Green has one weak spot, and that is her love for her son (the big one of Texas), who is running a railroad presented to him by his adoring mother.

"He is doing nicely down there," she said exultantly. "I took him out of the club and sent him down there. But for a certain light in her eyes you might have thought Mr. Green was a trunk or a bag of gold sticks which had been shipped to Texas off-hand."

"They tell me he is the most popular man in Texas," she added.

"It is a pity he is a Republican," was suggested. "He would have a good chance at the governorship if he were a Democrat."

"I don't want him to be governor."

"Why not?"

"Because he is too much like me."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that he is too much like me in his love for his son."

"That is all right," she said. "I love my son, but I don't want him to be a governor. I want him to be a man of business."

"That is all right," she said. "I love my son, but I don't want him to be a governor. I want him to be a man of business."

and he won't be. What would happen if I needed him in New York in a hurry? I could not ask the governor of Texas to come up here and attend to my business. Anybody, I told him to stay Republican. We have been Republicans for years back, and I don't want anything else in the family."

On arrival 20 men took Higgins from the sheriff, hauled him away on a derrick and hanged him from a tree. The body was found at 10 o'clock this morning. Higgins was a man of about 30 years of age, of medium build, with dark hair and eyes. He was wearing a dark suit and a white shirt. The body was found in a field near the railroad tracks. THE LIMIT OF LIFE.

The most eminent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limit of human life is many years below the attainment possible with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical period, that determines its duration, is to be between 50 and 60; the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged; carelessness then being fatal to longevity. Nature's best helper is Dr. King's New Discovery, the scientific tonic medicine that revitalizes every organ of the body. Guaranteed by Z. C. M. I. Drug Store, druggists, 50c.

BATTLESHIP CRUISE TO THE PACIFIC COAST.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Acting Navy Secy. Newberry returned to Washington today with details of the Oyster Bay conference last week relative to the battleship cruise to the Pacific. The details of the cruise will be left to Admiral Evans and the details of preparation to the bureau chiefs. The precise time of departure was undetermined because no officer was willing to forgo target practice, although this results in a certain amount of repairs to ships. Also a number of days additional will be required to make as the result of the anticipated report of the board investigating the accident to the battleship Georgia and inspecting the turrets in various ships. However, it has been determined that all will be in readiness to start Dec. 1, and that between that date and Dec. 15 the start will be made, the fleet steaming 10 knots, which is the most economical speed and will enable the collectors to keep up with the warships. Starting with full bunkers the ships en route will require 10,000 additional tons of coal. Where possible American coal will be used but much foreign coal will be required. The fleet will be accompanied by a number of auxiliary ships, including a hospital ship, a minesweeper, a tugboat, and a transport.
