HERE is a little canyon, in southis surrounded by wicki-ups, so tribe of Plutes. The day school is surrounded by wicky-ups, so that the little children may be near This canyon is surrounded on all sides by flat topped brown or black nountains, and just across the road from the schoolhouse is the abode of Annupits, so the Indians say, in the hig black mountain. During the day innupits is usually asleep, but at night e is prowling about, seeking whom he may devour, for Annupits is the In. dan Satan. Little Indian boys and tids are seldom away from home after ark-"Annupits will get you," says the Indian mother, and the little boy, ucked up in his blankets so snugly that he can hardly breathe, feels safe in the wicki-up, with a bright fire burn-

Winnle was very shy--she could not find voice to answer the white teacher's questions-perhaps she did not underand them—but she was a dreamy, maginative child, and had dreams and finative which she thought she saw future, and the children would her around her and listen, awestruck, as she told her dreams.

Perche was wild with rage and fear for his daughter was the light of his even bis idol. All night long, for weeks, ild be heard his chants to Annupits e limped back and forth, before the tain, but his vigils were all tain, for Mary died. Within a week ke's baby had died, and the feeling gaingt Winnie was bitter; therefore, to save her life, the agent sent her away

All this occurred before I came, When the supplies were issued the adians, Jake was absent, and, before he ame home, word was brought to the agent that Jake had killed Winnie's Winnie's hore. The Indians seemed to think that matters were even now, and noth-ing should be done, but not so with the

in his hand and his ever present sheathed dagger in his hip pocket-he was not satisfied, he had not, yet, forgiven his daughter's death. What is that bright light, high up on the side of the black mountain? It is Tetobe who is chanting wild poetry begging Annupits to give him geance for his girl's death. Win-nie, is safe she is too far away for the arrows of Annupits to reach her-but Mokeak has a boy that is his idol as Mary was Tetobe's. What is that story that Red Shirt tells to frightened listeners? He was coming home late from town when he saw a great black spirit walking on the side of the mountain. The spirit stopped near Tetobe and said in tones of deep thunder.

"You have called me from the moun-tain-you shall have your wish. I will shot my arrow at the boy-you shall get even." When this was told the white teacher, she only laughed and said, "Red Shirt was drunk," but the Indians believed Red Shirt and were afraid.

Lester, Mokeak Jim's boy, was one of my best pupils, but, like all Indian children, he was stubborn. I had told him to do something in school and he had refused; as a punishment, I had sent him home and told him not to come back to school until he could mind me.

After answering our questions, George spurred up our horse and galloped down to the river bank, where the boy was lying. We hurried where the boy was lying. ## LUCK IN LETTFR "B," BUT NOT IN "D.'

A writer has discovered that many of the worst foes of the horticulturist begin with "w," and he instances worms, weevils, which and other workers of wickedness. This suggests a question as to whether there is any natural grouping of good or evil things under particular letters. Take "b," for example, and consider how many booms and hessings to man lionaire, believes that it is rather how many boons and blessings to man begin with it. The baker, butcher and brewer bring him bread, beef and beer, through enterprise and originality than For additional foods he has bacon,black For additional foods he has bacon black bass, beans, bloaters, broccoli, broth, bivalves, bananas, berries, biscuits, and butter. After a banquet of bonnes-bouches he may bring out his 'baccy while he bestrides his bicycle. These are but a few of the beneficent things included under that blessed letter "b." Now, as a contrast, take "d," and among the first words we think of are and lamp, dark, dreary, dank, dull, drowned damp, dark, dreary, dank, duil, drowned dismai, dirty, dusty, dastard, daft, ducked, dosed, dragged, doubtful, dis-gusted, doctor, diseased, doldrums, dun-geons, depressed, despairing, dead, drunk, and so on, the very sound of which is enough to drive one into dole-ful dumps. — Pearson's Weekly. left enough n his demise to pay his debts. # HOW SOME FARMERS THRASH.

In former years thrashing conditions around here were poor. The machine could rarely be secured when needed, hands were scarce, two or more machines were often in the neighborhood at one time, and because of long moves to be made, hands waiting for the mahine to arrive, etc., much valuable time was lost. To obviate this the farmers around here organized a thrashing association which they call a "thrashing ring," or simply the "ring," Each member furnishes one hand for every jeb in the 'ring," and each hand is assigned a job which is his throughout the thrashing season. Since the jobs are taken in regular order, the hands (knowing what their task is) move promptly from one man's field to the next and begin work, thus saving time. After all are through thrashing every member who had more wheat thrashed than another pays to that other 12% cents for each 100 bushels of excess, less than 50 bushels counting nothing and over 50 the same as 100. This settlement is made through the secretary. treasurer by the exchange system. Thrashermen make their agreements with the "ring," but are paid personally by the members. The thrasherman begins where and takes the jobs in the gins where and takes the jobs in the order which the "ring" directs. The officers are a president, a secretary-treasurer, and a captain. The president officiates at all meetings. The secretary-treasurer keeps the records and officiates at the settlement at the close of the season. The captain asigns to cach his task for the season. Now for the results. In the first place, since all thrashermen are eager to do the work, the men have the pick of all the machines around. They therefore get the best machine. In the second place, other farmers, seeing the value of co-operation, want admission to the "ring," thus making failure from
