

LAST EDITION

S O C L O C K .

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Friday, December 25, 1892.

FRAGMENTS.

TERRELL dinner was the order of the day yesterday.

The Union Glee club will meet for rehearsal at 7 o'clock this evening.

A POST OFFICE has been established at Fish Springs, Juab county, Utah.

SHERIFF S. J. WENNER, of Summit county, is one of Salt Lake's victims of the curse.

HORN PRACTICE meeting in the Foothills wood recently sounds hummung Saturday at 11 a.m.

PAGE: HANLEY announces that he is prepared to give instruction in violin, piano and organ music at his residence at the corner of University and Alameda streets.

It is not unlikely that they will be successful in their efforts to have a court next Monday. Judge Barlow has not yet returned to the city.

FRED MEYER, of Z. C. M. I., left for New York this morning in the interests of the clothing and cigar manufacturing departments of that institution.

The weather yesterday stopped the football game that was to have taken place in the afternoon, in this city. It will come off at a later date.

This Twenty-first edition of Blathers will meet in the National wood meeting house this evening at 8 p.m. in the vestry of the Foothills wood meeting house.

The band of musicians have held their regular monthly meeting on Monday last; Nov. 28, at 7:30 p.m. in the vestry of the Foothills wood meeting house.

An order on the Bishop's Store House for $500.00 was given by a gentleman who had just come from Salt Lake and brought it to this office this morning where it can be recovered by the owner.

WILL DABNEY, of Beaver, is undergoing a five months' sentence in the jail of Beaver county for battery, and his wife, Mrs. Dabney, is serving Governor Thomas to grant him a free pardon.

The reception at the Alia club on Wednesday night was a brilliant affair. The decorations were profuse, and the costumes of the ladies were elegant. The company numbered about 500.

The severity of yesterday's snowstorms caused almost a complete suspension of streetcar service on both lines for several hours. The company has been compelled to alter their various tracks and did all in their power to accommodate the public.

MARSHAL Licenses have been issued by County Clerk Allen as follows: James J. Miller and Kate Faurot of Salt Lake; James Newman of Big Cottonwood and Amos Olsen of Peoa; Edward A. Anderson and Mary Johnson of Salt Lake; Charles H. Thompson and Peter A. Ellsworth of Salt Lake; Harry J. Dancy and Minnie C. Hobson of Salt Lake; Richard Englehardt and Anna Wynn, of Salt Lake; A. Campbell of Green River, Wyo.; G. C. Chayrus and Anna Anderson of Salt Lake; Frank A. Rouse and Mary A. Harrison of Salt Lake.

AN OLD JAIL BIRD.

He is Recaptured by Sergeant Wile and Remanded to Prison by Justice. See.

JAMES McDONALD, an individual with an unenvy record, who escaped from the city jail nearly a year ago while serving a ninety days' sentence for petit larceny, was detected in the streets yesterday by Sergeant Wile who immediately placed him under arrest and took him to the city jail where he was locked up for the night. This morning he was remanded to jail for eighty-four days which was the time to be served under the old sentence. As he left the court room and was beyond the Judge's control he muttered "I'll get even with you." The officer at the door met a like bump. The officer at the door met a like bump and thrust him behind the bars.

TIRED OF LIVING.

FRANCIS AUGUST, a semi-demented individual, attempted to commit suicide.

The police early yesterday morning arrested Francis August, a strangely acting individual, who sought protection from an officer on the street. He said that a lot of troublesome young men had been throwing stones at his house. When bringing him to the police station and allowed to sit in a chair near the stove. His conduct in the meantime was attracting the attention of the officers. He exhibited no signs of being sane and made no intelligible response to the questions put to him. He quickly passed down, however, and asked to be allowed to go to the inventory in the basement. He was a little nervous when he was granted his desire to insure Officer Sherman went down stairs in search of him and was horrified by his home on Second Street, between Fourth and Fifth West streets, where he is recovering from the effects of his folly.

A SLENDER MORNING.

Everything dull in the Court after Yesterday's Holiday.

There was a very small attendance of attorneys in Chief Justice Zane's court this morning, doubtless because it was known that the railroad damage suit the trial of which began on Tuesday afternoon, would occupy at least the entire forenoon today. The case was that of Frank Lark vs. the the Grand Western Railroad, the action having been brought to recover $20,000, on account of serious personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff while engaged in hunting deer in Brigham canyon. Readers of the News have already been made familiar with the facts. The testimony finished on both sides on Wednesday afternoon, and when the trial was resumed today the arguments were proceeded with. Judge Powers, the plaintiff's counsel, was sick, however, that it was with considerable difficulty he was able to perform his task of cross-examining the jury, to whom the case was submitted after they had been charged by Chief Justice Zane.

SHRINE: CHURCH services were held in the Foothills wood recently sounds hummung Saturday at 11 a.m.

PAGE: HANLEY announces that he is prepared to give instruction in violin, piano and organ music at his residence at the corner of University and Alameda streets.

A similar entry was made in the suit of Alonso E. Hyde vs. the Tintic Mining Co.

STUDIES FILLED.

The U. S. National Bank of Portland this morning placed a suit in the Third district court to recover from the T. J. Angell Lumber Co. the sum of $5,000 on a promissory note.

BROWN Bros. also brought suit today against H. R. Rice to recover a sum over due for merchandise. An affidavit for attachment has also been filed.

THE CIVIL CALENDAR.

Tomorrow morning Judge Zane will make a setting of civil cases to finish up the present term.

A YOUNG WOMAN'S DEATH.

But it is indignantly denied that there was any foul play.

PARTICULARS IN THE CASE.

What Dr. Wilcox Says Regarding the Unfortunate Affair.—The Funeral Today.

WHEELS INSTEAD OF HORSES.

The Chicago Police will probably be equipped with bicycles.

THE CHICAGO POLICE WILL PROBABLY BE EQUIPPED WITH BICYCLES.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—There is a strong probability that the Chicago police force will be equipped with bicycles. Some time ago Captain Shattler mounted two bicycles on wheels and the value of the bicycle in the service was immediately established. These detectors did good work in saving the life of a man who had been shot in the head by a police officer while firing. Their work has been so much in advance of the patrol wagon that it is expected the different stations will be equipped with wheels and that the horses in the mounted service will give way to wheels.

Nebraska Politics.

OMAHA, Nov. 25.—It is stated that steps have been taken by the Democratic state committee to prevent the Republicans from holding a sufficient number of delegates in the convention to nominate a Democrat in the legislature to control the body on a joint ballot, and thus return the Republicans.

The legislature stands Democratic 40, Republicans 39, Independents 14, in the Senate; and the House, Democratic 7, Republicans 49, Independents 44. On a joint ballot, the Republicans require 15 to elect Candidates have been nominated to seat Republicans enough to elect a U. S. Senator.

WITNESS PLEASED.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—Emperor William has warmly congratulated Count Von Czernin upon the success of his speech in the Reichstag.

RAPIDITY GOING TO PIECES.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 25.—The subscriber Hattie Wells, lumber lade, when went ashore on the west side of the Florida Island a few days ago, is rapidly going to pieces. The vessel is owned by the Weil's.

Dr. Dugge was again summoned and Mrs. Davis much worried after giving the usual anesthesia to all, the patient was not called until Monday, the following afternoon, at four o'clock. After making a final examination he found an unusual and very serious condition and decided to do nothing until further accumulation. Dr. Dugge, who offices were across the street from where the Davis sisters were shopping, was engaged to attend Mrs. Davis, which he did. He informed her that he suspected she was not right. She was not right, nor was she well. Her abdomen was distended. There was pain in the abdomen, which was said to be due to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given way to the following version:

The Davis sisters are orphans. A little more than a year ago Agnes L. Davis, a young woman who came to this city with a sister from San Francisco a few weeks ago, died at the residence of a Mrs. Taylor, at No. 224 west Second South street, under most distressing and unfortunate circumstances. There were immovable strange and contradictory rumors as to the cause of death. Then commenced a thorough informal investigation of the affair, which has given