WIRED FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, 17.—Argument was begun in the United States Supreme Court today in a case which may prove to be of much importance to all millers who make what is known as a "patent process" flour. The case is that of Robert L. Dowdell, appellant, against the Yager Milling Company, which comes here on appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States of the eastern district of Missouri. It is a suit brought in infringement of patent granted April 20, 1875, upon an improved process of manufacturing middlings flour by crushing the grain between rollers. Among the defendants set up by the Yager Milling Company, is that of Dowdell's patent is void for want of novelty in its invention. If the decision of the Court should turn upon this point rather than upon one of the many other points of law involved, that would settle the question of the validity of the patent case, and would be one of much importance, since most of the larger mills of the country have substituted rollers for stone mills, and are now manufacturing patent process flour.
