FRAGMENTS.

DON'T forget the concert at the Theatre to-night.

SANPETE has its advantages. Coal is $3.75 per ton there.

J. C. RICH, of Bear Lake County, Idaho, is with us again.

A REWARD is offered for the recovery of three mares. See advt.

THE city's coffers received some liberal contributions to-day.

THE Olympic Club will, by request, give another entertainment in the Theatre next Saturday evening.

THE Provo amateurs will resurrect "The Charcoal Burner" in the Theatre there on Thanksgiving night.

JUST about one honest foot of the beautiful has decorated the valley and impeded traffic; it came last night principally.

IT is stated that the vote for surveyor in Bear Lake county stood, M. Ward 92, S. Tatlow 92, which requires a new election for surveyor.

A SMALL company of missionaries and immigrants from the Southern States will be in this evening. They are coming via the D. & R. G. W.

THE entertainment for the benefit of the Deseret Hospital will take place to-morrow evening, in the Twenty-first Ward meeting house, at 8 o'clock.

THE Salt Lake Dramatic Company appear in Park City Wednesday and Thursday evenings. They give "Nevada" the first night and "All that Glitters is not Gold" the second.

SEVERAL flags are at half-mast and there is some little mourning drapery here and there, as a token of respect to the late ex-President Arthur, whose funeral took place in New York to-day.

ON Saturday Sandy was visited by deputy marshals, in a search for Daniel Jones. The gentleman was not at home, but Mrs. Jones was subpœnaed to go before the grand jury this week.

THE grand jury of the Third District were in session to-day. A number of witnesses were in attendance, some of them delicate women and children, who had come miles through the cold and snow at the behest of the inquisitors.

SPEAKING of Mme. Ida Serven, who appears at the Theatre to-night in the Cheney-Tolmie concert, the Denver News says: "She is not simply an elocutionist; she is an artist. She is equally strong in tragic, comic, character and dialect selections, and also in those selections where singing and elocution are combined."

A HUNTING party numbering five started this morning for Pleasant Valley, via the D. & R. G., on an extensive hunting tour. Camp equipments have been provided in abundance, and the boys say that they will lower the price of wild meat in this market if it takes all winter.

THE first meeting of Zion's Choral Union will be held at the City Hall this evening, commencing at 7:30; it is hoped that all who have received invitations will attend and enroll as members. It is expected that every ward in the city will be well represented, and, therefore, none of the ladies need be under the necessity of going home without companions. The copies of "Belshazar" have arrived, and the rehearsal of it will, probably, be begun to-night.

LOCAL NEWS.

Broken Arm.—This morning, Mrs. B. Y. Hampton accidentally slipped and fell, dislocating her arm. She received surgical attendance. The unfortunate lady will be disabled for several weeks.

The Parry Case.—The trial of Mrs. Susan Parry, at Ogden, on the charge of perjury had not been concluded when we went to press. At 4 p.m. the arguments were concluded, and the Court commenced its charge to the jury.

Meeting House Dedicated.—At the usual service in the Second Ward last evening, the new meeting house was dedicated, the prayer being offered by the President of the Stake. It is a neat and commodious brick building, 30 by 53 feet, and cost $4,500, the amount being raised by the people of the ward by donation. The secretary of the building committee, Brother E. F. Branting, informs us that the contributions to the building fund were, according to the circumstances of the people, remarkably liberal. The building is a credit to the ward.

Cheney-Tolmie.—The press elsewhere speak in warm terms of the performers in the concert to be given in the Theatre to-night. The principals in the entertainment are—Forest Cheney, violinist, a pupil of the famed Henri Appy; Robert Tolmie, pianist, who studied with the great Kullak in Berlin for years; Madame Ida Serven, singing reader, of New York; Mrs. Carrie Colssie, accompanist. With reference to the performance given by this company at Cheyenne, the Sun, after making favorable mention in detail at great length, concludes thus:

"It is perhaps needless to add that the entire programme was not only highly appreciated but loudly applauded. In brief, it might be said that the entertainment was first-class in every respect and would be so regarded in any city in the land."

Police Court.—To-day several persons were arraigned on the charge of gambling. Two pleaded guilty and were fined $40 each. These were Wm. Golding and I. B. Stevens. The others arrested gave their names as J. Bates, J. Wilson, Wm. Bates and "Abe" King. The night police raided the gambling den over Tufts & Nystrom's saloon at 1:30 o'clock on Sunday morning.

At 2 p.m. the remainder of the parties pleaded guilty and were fined $40 each except Wilson, who got $99.

Mrs. Passey was arrested to-day on the charges of drunkenness and vagrancy.

The civil case of Dr. Potter vs. J. A. Faust, for payment for attending the latter when he had his collar bone broken, occupied Justice Pyper's time this afternoon.

Mrs. Geatz, who was convicted on Saturday of petit larceny, has been sentenced to pay a fine of $60, or 60 days in jail.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Religious services were held in the Tabernacle, Sunday, November 21st, commencing at 2 p.m., High Councilor H. P. Richards presiding.

The choir sang:

Sweet is the work, my God, my King,
To praise Thy name, give thanks and sing.

Prayer was offered by Elder T. E. Taylor.

The choir sang:

Ye children of our God,
Ye Saints of latter days.

The Priesthood of the Eighth Ward officiated in the administration of the Sacrament.

Elder Robt. W. Sloan was called and addressed the congregation. He said he could not describe the feelings which he had in standing for the first time before so large a congregation of the Saints to speak of the principles of the Gospel. His desire was to tell only the truth. There was nothing in his religion that taught him to do otherwise. It taught the Divine will, which was truth and purity. He had experienced opposition in his labors while preaching the Gospel, and believed that opposition to have been beneficial in many instances. The speaker felt that he wanted to be always found doing good to his fellowbeings. In his experience he had learned that men, to gain their own ends, put to a wrong use the powers God had given them. But the Lord overruled these acts for the good of the honest and true. The Latter-day Saints were opposed by evil men; among their opponents were also some who believed they were doing right. All men did not think alike, and as the Bible said, but few walked in the narrow way. "Those who live godly in Christ Jesus should suffer persecution" was proven by experience to be a correct rule. Among the Saints were some who did wrong, yet most of them were striving to practice righteousness. They felt that they could better afford to be wronged than commit wrong. The history of nations taught that the more wealthy and prosperous a people were the more dangerous apposition they were in because they became careless in their prosperity. Those who were persecuting the Saints at the present time only caused them to be more closely united, and become stronger. If their principles were as claimed, nothing could overthrow the Latter-day Saints. It was not in the power of governments to legislate a people into happiness. The foes of the "Mormons" were compelled to admit that the latter were thrifty, industrious and honest. It was an impossibility for a people to have those good qualities, and at the same time be immoral. A people who were unchaste would never be honest and thrifty. These qualities indicated that the Saints were not so bad as they were accused of being. They were, however, learning the lesson of charity toward those who injured them. The example of the Saints, in doing good, showed that their mission was approved of heaven. There were broad principles underlying their religion. It taught that no man lived for himself alone, but to bring happiness to others by guiding them in righteousness. They believed that among all people were some principles of truth. There was nothing, which required a Saint to reject these truths, whenever they were found. The only question they asked was, Is it true? and if it was it was their duty to accept it. Whenever they found a truth they would accept and obey it. This was not the case with all people, for the speaker had heard men admit certain principles to be true, but when they heard they were part of "Mormonism," they rejected them. This showed that they were not sincere. The Lord did not expect His children to be cowards or beggars. He expected them to have courage to do what was right, and receive the reward thereby justly earned. By doing His will they became the seed of Abraham, and entitled to the promises made to him. The doctrines of the Latter-day Saints would admit of no sin, and from a worldly point of view that made it an uncomfortable religion. It also taught that all men who did not commit the unpardonable sin would receive a glory in accord with their merits. It taught that the broadest salvation a man could receive was obtainable through obedience to the pure principles of heaven. Whatever knowledge men received was for their guidance to this end, and if they used it properly, the blessing would come. The speaker had learned what it was to waste his time, and he felt keenly the loss of many valuable years of his life. For whatever he had done wrong he knew he would have to atone. But having learned the truth, his desire was to impart that knowledge and joy to his fellow-beings, that they might see the necessity of doing the will of God. There was no joy where there was no consciousness of doing a duty well. The Saints were not prosecuted for wickedness, but for their righteous works. They were taught by their religion to seek all that was good and pure, and adopt it. People wronged each other because of ignorance, which, if removed, would cause a change in their conduct of honest people toward each other. There was too little of charity among mankind. It was right to correct evil, but it should be done in a spirit of charity. No man could be converted by persecution; it only made him cling closer to that which he believed right. The speaker prayed that God would hasten the establishment of His kingdom.

Apostle H. J. Grant said he was gratified to hear borne a testimony to the truth of the Gospel. There was a joy and happiness brought to the heart of those doing the will of God, when they realize that others were experiencing the same feelings. There was nothing that gave those who loved truth more delight than to know that others also loved it. The Latter-day Saints could no be accused of lacking those qualities of heart and soul that go to make up a good community. There was no community that had a better financial credit, and none who had such a good record for temperace. Every principle of their religion tended to ennoble mankind. There was nothing to account for the opposition to them except that they were seeking to do good to their fellow-beings and build up God's kingdom. Those who opposed them did not show the same love to their fellows that they did. Their honor, sobriety and virtue were borne testimony to by their bitterest foes. They were accused of believing in and practicing plural marriage, but the officers of the courts who prosecuted them in their acts and statements declared that the "Mormons" set their faces against all impurity. The record of the local administration of government in Utah, by "Mormon" officials was an example to the nation generally. The people knew that they were doing God's will in obeying the Gospel, and they proposed to contend for their rights with all the power they had. They proposed also to contend for the true freedom of mankind everywhere. They did not expect all men to believe as they did. The speaker thought more of the approval of his own conscience than of the world. Men might say he was deluded. They might say that he had never tasted of the revelations of God, but he knew better, and also knew that if he did God's will he would be saved, and that those who fought the truth would be punished. All who did good would receive their reward, so would those who did evil. In the life to come the judgment would be just, and the motives of men would not be misconstrued. There was a satisfaction in knowing that God would reward and remember those who were pure and faithful. Those who did evil would find themselves in an awkward position when they were called to receive the penalty of their offenses. Without good labors good intentions were of no avail. There was nothing that would save men but faithful, energetic obedience to God's laws. Some people had objected to a monetary test—that of tithing—in entering into Temples. These people were those who never paid tithing. They were of the class that wanted the blessings of the Temple, but their good intentions did not go far enough to cause them to do anything toward the erection of a Temple. They were attempting to appropriate to themselves the blessings due to others. Any people who did that were dishonest. The knowledge of truth would not save mankind, but their good works under that knowledge. The man who prayed for one thing and by his means and works opposed the accomplishment of his desires, was a hypocrite, and would find his prayers unanswered. His good intentions availed nothing against his bad works. It was said there were class distinctions among the Latter-day Saints; these were due to their wrong doing. The speaker had no ill-will against those who opposed the truth, but he did despise the man who pretended to be a Saint, and whose works showed him to be a hypocrite. The parent who sets his child right is the parent who loves that child, but the one who covers his child's sins is its enemy. Our Father is punishing the Saints for their neglect of duty. It was having the effect of uniting them and causing them to do His will. The man who had received the Gospel, and whose actions did not harmonize with his professions, was under greater condemnation than if he had never received the light. The missionary who labored in the field and obtained testimonies of God's will, and came home and wasted his time would be under more condemnation than if he had not received light on his mission. The speaker desired to know the will of God and do it; and the same desire filled the heart of every Latter-day Saint. They desired to lift the fallen, and to be true to their fellow beings and their God. In the fulfilment of this desire the speaker prayed that they might be strengthened.

The choir sang the anthem:

Give ear to my words, O Lord.

The Benediction was pronounced by Bishop O. F. Whitney.

NUMBER TWENTY.

THIS number of the DESERET EVENING NEWS is the commencement of Volume Twenty. Many nations have arisen and fallen since No. 1 of Vol I. was printed; great men have passed away, obscure people have become prominent, and the heavy hand of time has left its impression everywhere. The first number was not like the one we issue to-day; it was only about one-third the present size and there were no such advantages outside nor facilities inside the establishment as now; but here it is, and we trust that hereafter our efforts in defense of the cause of right and for the edification of our readers will be unabated.

BISHOP A. G. DRIGGS

ARRESTED ON A CHARGE OF POLYGAMY —HE IS DISCHARGED.

On Saturday afternoon Deputies Pratt and Vandercook made another visit to Sugar House Ward. The object on this occasion was the arrest of Bishop A. G. Driggs, of that ward, on a charge of polygamy, made by D. W. Rench. The Bishop is now under $2,500 bonds to await the grand jury's action on a charge of having lived with two wives. The first house visited in Saturday's raid was that of Mr. John Fry, step father to Miss Elizabeth Alston. The place was thoroughly ransacked for the young lady, but she was not present. The deputies then went over to Bishop Driggs,' and asked for the lady, whom the Bishop pointed out, as she was engaged at his house doing some sewing. The Bishop was then arrested on the charge of polygamy, and Mrs. Cornelia Driggs, Miss E. Alston, two of her sisters and one brother, subpœnaed to appear forthwith before Commissioner McKay. They came to town, and late in the afternoon an examination was conducted.

The complaint in the case alleges that the defendant had committed the offense of polygamy in having married Miss Elizabeth Alston, while he had a wife living and undivorced. Miss Alston was the first witness. Mr. Dickson subjected her to a most rigid and searching examination when she said she was not married to the defendant. He finally appeared satisfied that the accusation against the defendant was untrue. Mrs. Driggs was also closely questioned as to why she had employed Miss Alston to assist her in doing the family sewing, and ultimately succeeded in enlightening the District Attorney on this point.

The defendant was finally discharged.

Daring Robbery.—Last evening (Sunday) Mrs. Simpson made complaint at the City Hall that she had been robbed of a large sum of money. The lady keeps a millinery store at No. 52 East Temple Street. Her husband is at Eagle Rock, Idaho. She states that last evening she went to a restaurant opposite the Walker House, in company with her two little girls, and ate supper. She left for home at about 7 o'clock, and when turning the corner opposite the Clift House, she slipped and fell on the ice. Two men were near, and one of them assisted her up, for which she thanked him. He then asked if he could see her home, to which she replied in the negative. She continued on her journey, her children walking in front of her, and had not gone far when she observed that both men were following. She went on to the corner of West Temple and Second South streets, where one of the men left. The other followed west, and when in front of Mr. Bowring's, a short distance west of Scott's warehouse, he sprang forward, tore her satchel from her hand, and ran down the alley. She screamed, and a number of neighbors came to her aid, but the thief could not be overtaken. One of the children obtained a good view of the man, whom she describes as of medium height and build, light complexioned, with a chin beard.

Mrs. Simpson's satchel contained a $50 bank check received from her husband and $61 in gold and silver. Officers are working up the case.

Storm Notes.—Yesterday's storm was the most severe experienced at this season in Salt Lake Valley for a number of years past.

Four miles of Utah Central telegraph were broken down between Draper and the Point of the Mountain.

The Union Pacific trains to-day were delayed but a short time.

The D. & R. G. W. and Utah Central trains got through the heavy snow all right.

There are over 10,000 sheep on the bench east of the city, snowed in so they cannot be driven to the winter range at present.

One sheep owner in Farmers Ward is feeding his sheep six tons of lucern daily—for which he pays $8 per ton in the stack—his flocks having been caught in Sunday's storm.

Great numbers of sheep are reported dying at Lookout Pass, between Skull Valley and the Desert, where the animals are crowded without feed and are unable to get through owing to the deep snow.

There are several thousand sheep on the range over Jordan, unable to move on account of the heavy snow. Many of them are perishing.

One scene near Pleasant Green, over Jordan, yesterday, was two boys about 14 years of age, huddled in their tent, crying at the loss of their sheep, which had been driven by the storm and become scattered.

Sheep that are being taken to winter on the Desert, Tooele County, and have to cross Salt Lake Valley, must travel about 100 miles without pasturage.

Lucern and other hay has materially increased in price since the inclement weather set in.

There is a prospect for a scarcity of feed for animals the coming winter, in the central part of the Territory.

JUAB is nothing if not progressive We learn from the Enquirer that Mr. John C. Witbeck is the author of quite an improvement in the matter of wells. He sank a well eleven feet deep by eleven feet, square; built a concrete wall nine inches thick; he then had a coat of cement put on, and so construed a cistern capable of holding 30,000 gallons of water. Through an iron pipe he keeps a supply of water on hand that will last him one hundred and fifty days.

Court Notes.—Proceedings in the Third District Court to-day:

The U. S. Marshal returned a venire for 15 petit jurors, who were excused until 10 a. m. to-morrow.

H. A. Van Praage vs. E. A. Ireland; plaintiff allowed ten days additional to file bill of exceptions on appeal.

United States vs. H. S. Eldredge et al.; two cases, on bonds; defendants allowed ten days additional to file statement on motion for new trial.

Societie Anonyme des Mines de Lexington vs. Alex. Mayberry; trial resumed and arguments before Court in progress.
